THREE CHARTER CHANGES URGED BY COMMITTEE ON LEGISLATION

Amendments Proposed by Aldermanic Group Would Give St. Louis 16 Powers Now Held by State.

Three amendments to the city's charter, one of which would give the city 16 powers it now must obtain through enabling acts from the legislature, were recommended yesterday to the Board of Aldermen by its Committee on Legislation.

The committee also recommended establishment by ordinance of a Division of Accounting. All the recommendations were contained in a proposed charter which was defeated by the voters in 1950.

Anton H. Niemeyer, Eighth Ward Alderman and chairman of the committee, said the group, which has been studying the charter during the summer recess of the board, will continue its work and may have additional charter amendments or ordinances to propose when the Board reconvenes on Oct. 7.

The proposed amendment to give the city additional powers includes provisions which would enable the city to engage in urban rehabilitation; reconstruction of blighted areas; control of smoke, fly ash and fumes; levying amusement taxes; planning for comprehensive physical development of the city; imposing an income tax when authorized by state law; consolidation or separation of its government from that of other political subdivisions of the state; maintenance of an excise department; and to contract with other governmental bodies for acquisition and operation of public improvements.

Second Proposal.

A second proposed amendment would prohibit members elected to the Board of Aldermen from sitting in and voting at hearings at which their individual qualifications are challenged.

This was included in the 1950 proposal and resulted from a situation in 1949 when two aldermen, whose residential qualifications were challenged, voted with others to seat themselves.

The third proposed amendment would raise the ceiling on the salary of the Mayor from the present $10,000 a year to $25,000. This also was part of the proposed charter of 1950.

The proposed new ordinance to establish the auditing division has been taken bodily from the proposed charter of 1950 and is being recommended as an ordinance.

Niemeyer said his committee has been analyzing the present charter and the proposed charter of 1950 in an attempt to determine which of the proposed improvements of 1950 can be placed into effect either by ordinance or by amendment of the existing charter.

Provides for City Auditor.

The provision for the auditing division is one which can be accomplished by ordinance, he added. It provides for the appointment of a City Auditor by the Board of Aldermen and charges him with the duties of general auditing of all municipal financial transactions and periodic auditing of all departments and agencies.

The auditor must be a certified public accountant and must have the same qualifications as those set up in the charter for the Mayor, the sponsored ordinance states.

Niemeyer said his committee has not yet studied such problems as the ceiling on wages of other municipal employes and officers, nor has it analyzed proposals contained in the 1950 document which would have consolidated or eliminated sev-

Cardinal Mindszenty Released Temporarily by Hungarian Reds

CARDINAL JOSEF MINDSZENTY

Age and Failing Health Stated as Reason — Given Quarters in Church Building.

VIENNA, July 16 (AP)—Communist Hungary announced tonight it has freed Cardinal Josef Mindszenty temporarily from prison and he has been given quarters in a church building.

The official Budapest radio said the Hungarian Justice Ministry ordered the interruption of the Roman Catholic prelate's imprisonment and his temporary release because of age and failing health.

Mindszenty, 63 years old, has served six and one-half years of a life term handed down by a Red people's court which convicted him Feb. 8, 1949, of treason and related charges.

He is the most celebrated of a group of high Catholic churchmen who have been sent to prison since World War II as an outgrowth of church-state feuds behind the Iron Curtain.

The announcement of his release was made on the eve of the Big Four summit conference, to begin Monday in Geneva. The radio station issued it in the middle of a regular news broadcast.

Residence to be Decided.

As monitored here, it said the Cardinal would take up appropriate quarters to be decided by a Catholic church conference.

A similar announcement monitored by Radio Free Europe in Munich told the story in these words:

"M.T.I. (Hungarian news agency) announces: On order of the justice minister, the time of confinement of Josef Mindszenty is interrupted in reference to his request and that of the Roman Catholic bishops and also in regard to his age and his state of health.

"For his residence, a church building was placed at his disposal by the bishops."

The whereabouts of the cardinal remained a mystery. The Hungarian radio did not name the church building in which he is to reside.

In Vatican City, the report was received with joy and with fingers crossed. No official comment was forthcoming. But an editor of the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said, "We must wait and see."

He said there was propaganda in the timing. He commented that, though the exact terms of the release were not known, the cardinal "will still be impeded from functioning as a prelate."

The news was taken at once to Pope Pius XII, who long ago excommunicated all Catholics who had had anything to do with Cardinal Mindzenty's prosecution.

Accusations at Trial.

The Cardinal was tried in Budapest and convicted of high treason, trying to overthrow the Communist regime in favor of the Hapsburg monarchy and trading unlawfully in dollars obtained from the Vatican and the United States.

Six co-defendants were sentenced from three years to life by the court of four laymen and one professional jurist.

The Cardinal pleaded partly guilty and recanted a letter he

COUNTY STUDIES BOND PROGRAM OF $40,000,000

Screening Group to Report Aug. 1 and Issue Will Go to Voters Oct. 4.

Tentative bond issue proposals for St. Louis county totaling more than $40,000,000 are under consideration by the county citizens' bond issue screening committee, which plans to make its final report to the County Council by Aug. 1, sponsors said yesterday.

Submission of the bond program to voters Oct. 4, scheduled date of a special state election, is expected to be recommended by the committee.

Tentative Program.

The tentative program on which subcommittees of the screening committee now are at work is as follows:

Expressways, highways and bridges, $24,500,000 to $28,500,000.

Civil courts building, $7,500,000 to $8,000,000.

Park sites and development, $5,600,000.

Children's buildings, $800,000.

Voting machines, $500,000.

J. John Brouk, head of the 22-member screening committee appointed last March, said he would ask the subcommittees to finish their work this week, preparatory to a meeting of the full committee next week, at which the final report will be drafted.

He said he was "very optimistic" over chances of a successful bond election in the county, in view of the success of the St. Louis $110,639,000 public improvement bond program last May, although he said there probably would be more organized opposition in the county.

Discounts Assessment Fears.

Brouk discounted fears expressed in some quarters that the current controversy over county property reassessments would cause negative votes on the proposed bond issue. He said he thought the situation will have cleared up by Oct. 4.

Already pending before the County Council are two valid petitions calling for bond elections. One is for $8,500,000, to finance the county's one-half share of right-of-way costs for the Mark Twain, Daniel Boone and Ozark expressways and a north-south Outerbelt highway west of Lindbergh boulevard.

Petitions for this proposal were filed with the council last March by a citizens committee headed by Charles W. DeWitt. Subsequently the screening committee announced a similar figure — $8,437,500 — broken down as follows: Mark Twain Expressway, $2,187,500; Daniel Boone, $2,875,000; Ozark, $1,250,000 (and

Woman Holds Up Store, Writes Self Check on Check Machine

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 16 (UP)—A woman wearing dark glasses robbed a jewelry store of $500 today, wrote a $2000 check on the store and then walked down the street and tried to cash it at a bank.

The woman told three clerks in the store that she had a pistol in her hand, covered by a paper sack, and ordered them into a back room.

Rifling through the cash drawers, she came across some blank checks and then sat down at a check-writing machine and made one out for $2000.

After that, she telephoned the National Bank of Portsmouth to tell them an employe named "Marion Davis" was coming over to cash it.

When she arrived at the bank, teller Steve Clark called the jewelry store as a double-check. By that time, manager Charles Zoellner had freed himself.

"I can't worry about a $2000 check," Zoellner told Clark excitedly over the phone, "I've just been robbed."

When Clark returned to his window, the woman was gone, but she left the check.

CASABLANCA PUT UNDER MARTIAL LAW; MOROCCAN RIOTERS KILLED

French Army Takes Over — 32 Fatalities Since Thursday—Resident General Has Narrow Escape.

CASABLANCA, Morocco, July 16 (AP)—The French army took over riot-battered Casablanca under martial law today and fired on Moroccan demonstrators in the native quarter. Five Moroccans were killed and 19 injured.

This brought the toll from rioting, which had raged intermittently since Thursday night, to 32 dead and at least 96 injured, by official count. Most Casablanca residents believe the toll is much higher.

United States military officers were reported to have ordered all United States military personnel in Casablanca to seek safety at one of the American bases in Morocco. But Gen. James Jackson of Eureka Springs, Ark., the commanding officer said no such order had been issued.

"We are looking for things to get better," he said.

There are between 2000 and 3000 Americans living in Casablanca, including some 500 families of servicemen.

Bomb Victims' Funeral.

At almost the same hour as the shootings occurred in the native quarter, funeral services were being held at the Casablanca cathedral for six victims of a terrorist bomb Thursday evening. Some 7000 persons massed around the cathedral for the services. It was the bomb explosion at a busy intersection during celebration of Bastille day, the French national holiday, which triggered the 2½ days of disorders.

Gilbert Grandval, the French Resident General who arrived only last week to take over active direction of the protectorate, attended the funeral services, although demonstrators had pointedly suggested that he and his representatives should stay away.

Many French residents of Morocco consider his views toward independence - seeking Moroccans as too moderate.

A group of French war veterans sought to block Grandval's way up the cathedral steps with the flags they were carrying, but the resident general brushed them aside imperiously.

Narrow Escape.

When he left, there were cries of, "Death to Grandval," and a crowd closed in. He narrowly escaped injury. Police quickly cleared the way and arrested two of the demonstrators. During a moment of confusion, however, the two men who had been arrested escaped from the police truck and fled. The crowd punctured the tires of the truck, preventing a chase. Stones were tossed at members of Grandval's entourage.

One of the epaulettes of Grandval's white uniform was ripped off and he lost his cap in the dash to his car.

Grandval was sent to Morocco with instructions to ease the direct rule of the French administration over Moroccan affairs and to turn back the operations to the natives. This policy toward the Moroccans has aroused the ire of many Frenchmen who believe order can be maintained only by showing a strong hand.

The Resident General last night instituted a 9 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew in the booming port city of 650,000. Today he ordered the military to take over all the administrative functions which have been exercised by civilians, and established martial law.

The European quarter of town, scene of most of the rioting Thursday night and yesterday, was almost closed down today. Shops were tightly shuttered. Police and firemen worked to clear away the wreckage of

BOY, 8, PRESENTS COLLEGE LECTURE ON AERONAUTICS

OMAHA, Nebr., July 16 (AP)—Professors and students at the University of Omaha were confounded yesterday at the knowledge of aeronautics shown by a guest lecturer—an 8-year-old school boy.

Billy C. Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel O. Thompson, Omaha, spoke to a child psychology class and addressed the Air Age Institute, a workshop for classroom teachers.

He described in technical and precise terms how a helicopter works. Then he illustrated on the blackboard how men some day will travel to the moon by rocket ship.

He also described "a barrier you may not have heard about." It's called the heat barrier. When a plane goes 2000 miles an hour air flows over the body of the plane so fast that it turns the wings a cherry red.

Billy said he picked up his knowledge by reading all the aviation literature he can get. Then he added "I go for stuff like Mickey Mouse, too."

EISENHOWER IN GENEVA, VOICES HOPE PARLEY WILL LEAD TO TRANQUIL WORLD

OTHER WESTERN LEADERS ARRIVE, RUSSIAN CHIEFS ARE DUE TODAY

Eden and Faure Express Optimism, Bulganin Says Reds Will Work for German Unification.

By LYNN HEINZERLING

GENEVA, July 16 (AP) — President Eisenhower reached Geneva tonight for a new and peaceful crusade in Europe.

Sunburned and smiling, the United States President arrived for the momentous Big Four summit conference next week and declared he hoped it would "lead all the world into a more tranquil and fuller way of life."

Other leaders of East and West, converging here for what may be turning-point talks in the 10-year cold war, also voiced optimism.

The President was cheered by a large crowd held back at the airport fence as he alighted from his plane, Columbine III.

Recalls War Mission.

He made a brief speech recalling "some 11 years ago I came to Europe with an Army, Navy and Air Force with a single purpose—to destroy Nazism.

"I came with the formations of war and all of the circumstances of war surrounded that journey at that time.

"This time I come armed with something far more powerful: the good will of America—the great hopes of America—the aspirations of America for peace. That is why I have come here, in this beautiful country of yours, to meet with my colleagues from other countries to see whether it is not possible to find some road that will lead all the world into a more tranquil, better, fuller way of life."

Greeted by Swiss President.

The United States President, attired in a single-breasted dark gray suit, blue tie and light blue shirt, was accompanied by Mrs. Eisenhower and his son, Maj. John Eisenhower, who will act as his personal aide here.

He was greeted by Swiss President Max Petitpierre.

Earlier, at a refueling stopover in Iceland, the American Chief Executive told correspondents he hoped the "cause of peace can be advanced for all the world" in the meetings which start here Monday.

British Prime Minister Eden and French Premier Faure, arriving earlier, also expressed notes of cautious optimism that the six-day conference will make progress in finding a way out of the decade of cold war.

Soviet Premier Bulganin, due here tomorrow, has sought to add to the atmosphere of optimism.

President Reviews Troops.

President Eisenhower, after leaving his plane, reviewed an honor guard of Swiss troops and shook hands with the commander of the guard.

Mrs. Eisenhower was handed a big bouquet of red roses.

A similar welcoming ceremony greeted Eden and Faure on their arrival.

United States Secretary of State Dulles and Mrs. Dulles, who had arrived a short time before the President, drove to the Geneva "White House", a villa just outside the city, with him. The President then conferred a half hour with Dulles.

White House Press Secretary James Hagerty said the President planned to eat a light dinner and go to bed early. He will attend services at the American Church of Geneva tomorrow morning and then confer with Eden and Faure and their foreign ministers. The group will have lunch with Mr. Eisenhower at the villa.

To See Eden Alone.

Tomorrow evening, Hagerty said, the President will see Eden alone at his villa and Faure an hour later.

There had been no move yet to bring the President together with Soviet Premier Bulganin, expected to arrive at 10 a.m.

Bulganin and his Soviet delegation arrived by air tonight in East Berlin where they will stay overnight.

With him were Communist party Secretary Nikita S. Khrushchev and Defense Minister Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov.

Bulganin's Remarks.

In a brief address, Bulganin said:

"One of the questions on which an exchange of views at the (Geneva) conference is necessary, is the question of re-establishing German unity.

"The views of the Soviet government on this question are well known. They were laid down in the press a few days ago. The Soviet Union was and remains a champion of re-estab-

CONVICTS SEIZE 3 HOSTAGES IN WYOMING PRISON

80 Inmates Hold Cellblock, Give Demands — Warden Predicts Quick Settlement.

RAWLINS, WYO., July 16 (UP). — Eighty convicts rioted and seized three guards as hostages at the Wyoming state prison today, but Warden Dean Miller said after a conference with rebel spokesmen that prospects were "very good" for a quick settlement.

Miller and Acting Gov. Everett T. Copenhaver met with four convict spokesmen for an hour and 20 minutes. The spokesmen for the prisoners complained of treatment by two guards, poor food, improper medical care and lack of recreation.

After the meeting Miller said, "We're going to try to get it straightened out peacefully with no violence. Prospects look very good for doing just that."

A second bargaining session was scheduled. Gov. Milward Simpson was flying from his ranch near Cody, to take part in it.

Cell Captain Slashed.

Warden Miller said the riot began at 10:30 a.m. "more or less spontaneously" when several inmates attacked Cell Captain Ben Reeves. Reeves was slashed on the hand with a knife in the struggle.

The inmates then seized three guards as hostages and took control of a new, convict-built cell block.

Miller said the rioters are believed to have no firearms, although they possess homemade knives.

One of the four convict spokesmen said the three guards taken hostage had been "roughed up quite a bit." But he added he doubted they would be killed if "things don't pan out all right (for the rioters)."

"Since there has been no loss of life and very small property damage, and since there are so many involved with no actual ringleaders, I don't believe there will be any reprisals (against the rioters)," the warden said.

The convicts demanded the immediate discharge of two guards, Reeves and Bill Coppenger.

They complained of brutality in one instance, but said their main grievance was they could get no hearing of complaints from either Reeves or Coppenger. Neither of them was among the three guard hostages held. The convicts' captives were identified as Guards Theodore Charter, George Earl Hartshorn and Thomas Kendall.

Want Board's Promise.

At the first conference with the convict spokesmen, Copenhaver asked them if they would release the hostages and clean up the cellblock provided the guards were fired. But one of the four spokesmen said the rioters would want the assurance from the Board of Charity and Reform, which controls the institution's operations.

The rebels, representing less than half of the prison's total population of 205, broke toilets and knocked out windowlights early in the outbreak. The violence began after guards fired tear gas into the cellblock to break up the demonstration.

CHURCHES TO PRAY TODAY FOR SUCCESS OF BIG FOUR TALKS

NEW YORK, July 16 (AP)—Clergymen of all faiths responded today to President Eisenhower's appeal on his departure for Geneva that they lead their congregations in prayer for the success of the Big Four conference.

In making his suggestion for a demonstration of the "depth of our aspirations for peace," Mr. Eisenhower said Friday night it would constitute "a mighty force."

The World Council of Churches and the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. had already appealed for special prayers.

Probably typical of Roman Catholic houses of worship everywhere, St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York made plans for special prayers at all masses tomorrow.

Jewish congregations were among the first to follow up President Eisenhower's plea, because their Sabbath services were held yesterday.

STOLID SWISS GIVE EISENHOWER HEARTY CHEERS

GENEVA, July 16 (AP)—President Eisenhower's arrival in Geneva tonight tied up traffic and stirred the stolid Swiss into spontaneous cheering and applause.

"Welcome," some shouted in English. Others yelled "Bienvenu," which is the same thing in French.

Hundreds lined the roads along which the presidential car drove.

The Swiss watched with polite silence when the other leaders of the West arrived at the airport and they paid no particular attention to Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

The leaders of the Kremlin—Communist party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev and Premier Bulganin—are expected tomorrow.

TWO HURT IN PLANE CRASH IN RIVER NEAR GRAFTON

Two persons were injured last night when their small airplane hit two high-tension wires and crashed into the Illinois river about 10 miles north of Grafton, Ill. Two others escaped injury.

Injured were Larry John Wheeler, 15 years old, of East St. Louis, who was reported in fair condition at an Alton hospital, and the pilot, John Surgeon, of Grafton, who suffered bruises.

The uninjured passengers were the Wheeler boy's uncle, J. W. Clymer, of Niles, Mich., and Clymer's 12-year-old son, Denny. All four were able to climb out of the plane as it lay in shallow water near Pere Marquette Park. Clymer had hired the plane for a sight-seeing tour.

NATO BACKS DRIVE TO SWING RUSSIA TO REUNIFICATION

Atlantic Allies Approve After Hearing Big Three Plans — Prospects for Deadlock.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

PARIS, July 16 (AP) — The United States, Britain and France won solid support from their Atlantic allies today for a determined drive at Geneva to get Russia to shift to unification of Germany on western terms.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan and French Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay outlined their plans at a North Atlantic Treaty Organization council meeting as their last act before going to the summit conference.

Persons present said ministers of the other 12 NATO nations agreed with the Big Three that Germany's future is the No. 1 problem in the search for peace.

Ministers Go on Record.

A dozen foreign ministers spoke and all made clear that the unification they want is one which would leave all of Germany free to belong to the Atlantic alliance, as West Germany now does. Russia has consistently refused any solution of the German problem that would leave a united Germany linked to the West. At Geneva Soviet Premier Bulganin is expected to ask for neutralization of Germany. This the western powers have already rejected.

The reality of the situation therefore is that on this key issue Russia and the western powers are tightly deadlocked on the eve of Geneva. Furthermore, the future of Germany is such a high stake that no one believes the deadlock will be easily broken.

According to plans made by their foreign ministers, President Eisenhower, Prime Minister Eden and Premier Faure are prepared to offer the Russians inducements and security guarantees if they will eventually agree to unify Germany and allow it to associate with the West.

They are prepared to guarantee that East Germany, under such conditions, would never be used as a base against the Soviet union but would instead be demilitarized.

As western officials see it,

Here's the Inside on Big 4 Talks Straight From the Outside

GENEVA, July 16 (AP)—The "World Interplanetary Association" disclosed today the secret reason the heads of government of the world's four major powers decided to meet here next week.

This is it: To discuss how to deal with beings from other planets who have delivered a "final warning" to the world by destroying atomic plants in Britain and Russia.

The association made this disclosure in a memorandum to the Big Four, signed by its president, Prof. Alfred Nahon of Lausanne. The association's congress unanimously approved it last week, he said.

The utilization of atomic energy, even for peaceful purposes, was about to cause the disintegration of the universe, the memorandum declared. The inhabitants of other planets realized the danger, and the only way to prevent attacks from outer space was to abandon the atom.

The memorandum called on the Big Four to tell the world the truth about aircraft from outer space, "observed in all countries since 1945," in order to avoid a "stupid panic" when the facts finally become known.

GEN. TAYLOR SAYS WAY TO AVOID BIG WAR IS TO STOP, WIN SMALL ONES

Massive Retaliation Not His Idea, Chief of Staff Indicates at Quantico Seminar — Favors Strong Ground Force.

QUANTICO MARINE BASE, Va., July 16 (UP)—Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, new Army Chief of Staff, said today the way to avoid a "disastrous big war" is to maintain ground forces strong enough "to deter or to win the small wars."

Making the first major presentation of his strategic views before the annual conference of defense leaders here, he pictured a modern, mobile army as the kind of military force that can check Communist aggression without plunging the world into all-out atomic and hydrogen war fare.

While he did not directly criticize Administration cuts in Army manpower, Taylor indicated he does not subscribe to the thesis that this country should place primary defense reliance on a capacity for "massive retaliation" with air power and atomic weapons.

Potential Foes Land Powers.

"We should not lose sight of the fact that America's potential enemies are land powers," he said. He added that it would do little good to devastate the Communist homeland with atomic bombs if the Red armies meanwhile were overrunning friendly countries. Consequently, he argued, there must be hard-hitting, fast-moving ground forces to halt any enemy thrust "as close to the Communist periphery as it is possible to do so."

The 170 top military and civilian defense leaders, gathered here for a three-day seminar on global strategy, also heard major addresses by Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff; Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, strategic air commander, and other top officials.

Radford warned that Russia is making rapid strides in developing long-range jet bombers, missiles and other weapons. He said the United States still holds a lead, but from now on will face increasing difficulty "in maintaining a technical superiority in weapons."

Twining said flatly that the United States Air Force "is today, and can be tomorrow, more than a match for Communist military power."

LeMay said the big bombers of his command "are fully capable of inflicting decisive damage against an aggressor."

Red Naval Power.

Adm. Robert B. Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, discussed growing Soviet naval strength. He said "the ominous threat of growing Soviet ground and air strength is well understood" but "the rapid increase in Soviet naval strength is not as well known." The Soviets, said the Admiral, "are building up a significant naval strength which is already a threat to Allied naval supremacy."

Some of Taylor's arguments were akin to those expressed by his predecessor, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, in a long letter to Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson. The letter was made public Friday.

Ridgway said the United States armed forces are "inadequate in strength and improperly proportioned." He said the Administration's policy of cutting back ground forces while placing main reliance on air power and atomic weapons may be playing into Russia's hands, since there may be a "common refusal" to use nuclear weapons in future wars.

Publication of Ridgway's views rekindled opposition of some Senate Democrats to the Administration's defense policies, and prompted Senator Henry M. Jackson (Dem.), Washington, to urge today that Ridgway be called before the Senate Armed Services committee for questioning.

Taylor for Atomic Weapons.

Taylor said nothing about a possible atomic stalemate. On the contrary, he said atomic weapons are a "must" for a modern army.

"An army without atomic weapons on the battlefield of the future will be more helpless than the French knights at Crecy before the English cannon," he said. But he emphasized that all-out atomic war is not the only kind of war that any army can fight.

The Army, he said, "can proportion its blows to fight the case" and "can temper its destructive power to the aims and needs of the postwar peace."

Taylor said the United States must have ready combat forces which can join allies in punishing local aggression without broadening conflict into global war.

"If we are to assure that the disastrous big war never occurs," he said, "we must have the means to deter or win the small wars."

If Global war nevertheless breaks out, he went on, this nation must be ready with flexible strategy to cope with it.

There must be no "preconceived conception" or "single, predestined course of events," he said, in what could have been a reference to the "massive retaliation" doctrine.

Soviet Delegation Reaches U.S. For Tour of Agricultural Areas

Americans Promise to Talk Only 'Language of Food'—Group to Visit Midwest and California.

NEW YORK, July 16 (UP)—Fifteen Russian agricultural experts arrived here for a United States farm tour today and were promised that they would hear only the international language of food, not diplomatic talk, during their six-week stay.

Following the old adage that "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach," Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz told the visitors:

"If the world has any universal language, it is the language of food. We expect to speak to you in that language during your stay with us."

A 12-man delegation of American farmers landed in Moscow last night, in the first exchange of technical missions between the United States and Russia since the start of the cold war.

The 15 Russians, led by Vice Minister of Agriculture Vladimir Matskevich, flew here from Paris aboard a French airliner. Four Russian officials from the Soviet embassy in Washington and the Soviet United Nations delegation met them at the airport.

Joe Costa, chairman of the board of the National Press Photographers Association, welcomed the delegation in behalf of the press and gave each of the 15 a 35-millimeter camera.

"Use these cameras as ofen as you can whereever you go," Costa told the Russians.

He told them they should take pictures of America and Americans home to their friends and families.

The Russians ranged from 39 to 58 years of age. None was identified as a farmer. All represented government groups or publications and were listed as agronomists, agricultural scientists or technicians.

The Russians flew here from Paris aboard a French airliner. They will fly to Des Moines tomorrow to begin a month-long farm tour by bus and airplane.

The group will visit farms in Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois and California. They particularly asked to be allowed to visit California vineyards and orange groves.

"We hope to show the Russians a fair cross section of American agriculture," said tour co-ordinator John Strohm. "We are going to visit a lot of farms, meat processing plants, fertilizer plants, farm machinery establishments and see work done in soils.

"We will cover an area showing them what we are, what we are doing. We expect to show them a county fair. They will see what they want to see. If we pass a farm and they want to stop, we'll stop."

Strohm said the group would spend 12 days in Iowa, two days in Nebraska and then travel across southeastern South Dakota to Minneapolis. Then they will go to Chicago, California, Washington, D.C., and back to New York for the flight home.

The Russians are paying for the entire trip, "except the dinners to which they are invited." They will ride through Iowa, South Dakota and Minnesota in a bus costing $60 a day.

Strohm did not know how much the entire trip would cost the Russians, but the Americans in Russia expect to spend about $2500 each.

American Farmers Given Cocktail Party, Russians Attend.

MOSCOW, July 16 (AP)—Members of the Western diplomatic corps and prominent Russians attended a cocktail party tonight at the home of the United States ambassador in honor of the 12-man American agricultural delegation here.

United States Charge d'Affair Walter Walmsley and Mrs. Charles E. Bohlen, wife of the United States ambassador, gave the party at Spasso House. Among those present were ambassadors from Italy, Argentina, Belgium and Yugoslavia and numerous ministers. The Russian guests included farm leaders and Nikolai Pulgunov, director general of the official Soviet news agency.

The American agriculturists, headed by Dr. W. V. Lambert, dean of agriculture at the University of Nebraska, arrived last night. They began their day today with a briefing at the United States embassy and then went to the Soviet Agriculture Ministry for preliminary talks. They discussed their tours to Soviet collective and state farms upon which they are expected to embark next week.

G.I. GETS THROUGH HEAVY CORDON AT GENEVA AIRPORT

GENEVA, July 16 (AP)—A G.I. from Brooklyn gate-crashed the arrival ceremonies of Western Big Four leaders here today, walking through scores of security men. He is Alan Morganstein, who is on leave from his Army unit at Bamberg, Germany.

"What's going on here?" Morganstein asked as he walked up to several hundred reporters and photographers on Geneva's closely guarded airport.

"The President is arriving," he was told.

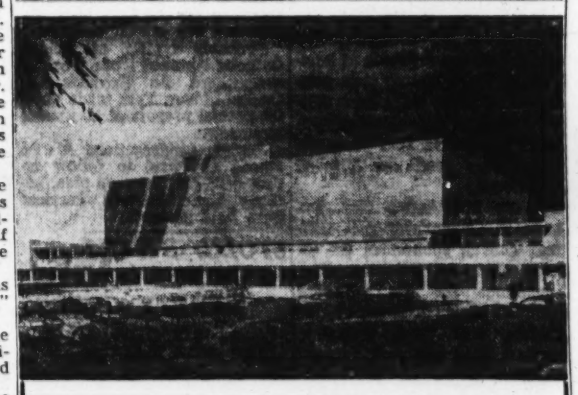

"Whose President?"

"President Eisenhower."

"Well, well," Morganstein said. "I think I'll hang around. It ought to be interesting."

Asked what sort of documents he used to get in, Morganstein replied: "I don't have any. I just got off the plane from Germany, saw the crowd and walked down to see what was going on."

To do this, he had walked through double lines of Swiss troops armed with tommy guns, squads of Swiss police and past Geneva Police Chief Charles Knecht and scores of Allied security men. He was coatless and wearing a sports shirt hanging outside his trousers.

BONN BARS ANY PEACE BASED ON DIVIDED GERMANY

Socialist Leader Joins Adenauer in Stand as House Approves Military Program Bill.

BONN, July 16 (AP)—Chancellor Adenauer and Socialist opposition leader Erich Ollenhauer jointly informed the big powers today that a cold war settlement without German unity is "totally unacceptable."

On the eve of the Big Four conference in Geneva, the two leaders, in a rare demonstration of political co-operation, declared this is one issue on which all Germans can rally.

Adenauer and Ollenhauer, the two top political leaders in West Germany, spoke in the Bundestag (lower house) shortly before it passed a bill to call up the first volunteers for the new West German army this year.

Long bitter political opponents, Adenauer and Ollenhauer united in attacking the Soviet Union's proposal this week for a European security system to include both West Germany and Communist East Germany.

Speaking slowly and solemnly, 79-year-old Adenauer declared:

"The creation of a European security system on the basis of the division of Germany is totally unacceptable to the Germans. Such a system would perpetuate for a wholly unpredictable time the division of Germany. This would provide no security for Europe."

The stocky, white-haired Ollenhauer then took the floor to say:

"We Socialists share the views of the Chancellor that a European security system which aims at maintaining the partition of Germany would be unacceptable for the German people. A way can and must be found to unite Germany peacefully."

Referring to the Geneva parley, Ollenhauer said: "The time has now come to negotiate the peaceful unification of Germany, the four powers must abandon attempts to incorporate the two parts of Germany into East and West military systems."

On this point alone—the inclusion of West Germany in the Atlantic alliance—Adenauer and Ollenhauer differed.

The pro-Western Adenauer announced today after the Bundestag overwhelmingly approved the volunteers bill that "the German army will now be set up with the greatest possible speed."

His view is that the only hope of inducing the Soviets to retreat from Europe and accept German unity lies in buttressing Western defense might with a strong German armed force inside the Atlantic alliance.

"The vote that we have taken today," Adenauer said, "is of very great significance and the majority that carried it through was very large. This is a major contribution to the security of Europe and the world. The Bundestag unequivocally affirmed its support of our membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization."

The volunteers bill will permit the Adenauer Government to start this month with the buildup of the 500,000-man armed force pledged to the Atlantic alliance.

Approved by an overwhelming show of hands, this bill authorizes the government to call up 6000 volunteers now for staff and technical duties.

The first West German officers will join the staff of Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe (SHAPE) near Paris within two or three days after the Bundesrat (upper house) approves the bill next Friday.

Other volunteers will attend training courses for instructors and start taking over the American equipment being given to the Wehrmacht.

Senator Anderson Says Congress Will Restore Cuts in AEC Fund

Chairman Agrees With Eisenhower Program Would Be Disrupted — Plans to Add Money to Catch-All Bill.

WASHINGTON, July 16 (AP)—Senator Clinton Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, chairman of the congressional atomic committee, agreed with President Eisenhower today that Congress slashed funds for the Atomic Energy Commission too deeply. He predicted Congress would restore the cuts.

Anderson said in an interview that he and other congressional atomic leaders will ask the Senate Appropriations Committee next week to wipe out the reductions by adding the sums to a catch-all supplemental money bill now pending.

Mr. Eisenhower made his protest yesterday before leaving for the Big Four Geneva conference. He said he was signing "with great reluctance" a bill containing $1,365,613,500 in new and old funds for the AEC—$144,404,000 less than he had asked for. The money is for AEC operating expenses in the fiscal year that began July 1.

Both the President and Anderson said the reductions could disrupt programs for production of nuclear weapons and peaceful uses of atomic energy.

"What happened is that the House cut certain items and the Senate made reductions of $101,000,000 in different sections," Anderson explained. "When a conference committee adjusted differences, both sets of cuts were accepted, so the bill was below the total of either body's intentions."

Other sources said the slashes reflected two recent congressional differences with the President.

Chief of these was Democratic opposition to the controversial Dixon-Yates private power contract, since canceled.

The other was a Democratic rejection of the "atomic peace ship" requested by the President.

If all funds were allowed AEC, some Democrats were described as fearing the President might by executive order be able to divert AEC funds to these two projects without close congressional scrutiny.

Anderson said he would call a budget session of the atomic committee Tuesday and that top Democrats and Republicans of that group would ask the Senate purse string committee to restore the cuts.

He said most of the additional funds would be used "to acquire raw materials and fabricate weapons."

The AEC appropriations measure also provides $27,053,000 operating money for the Tennessee Valley Authority, $401,173,000 for river and harbor and flood control construction, and $51,962,500 for flood control work on the Mississippi river and its tributaries.

Gen. Hertford to Supervise AEC's Santa Fe Office.

WASHINGTON, July 16 (UP)—The Atomic Energy Commission announced today that it is giving Maj. Gen. Kenner F. Hertford the job of bossing development, testing and production of nuclear weapons.

Hertford, former chief of staff of the special weapons command at Sandia, N.M., will become manager of the AEC's Santa Fe operations office, with headquarters at Albuquerque, N.M., on Oct. 1.

He will succeed Donald J. Leehey who is resigning after serving as manager since Feb. 16, 1954.

Hertford will retire from the Army on July 31. AEC General Manager Kenneth E. Fields said that in his new job Hertford "will supervise the research, development, production and testing of atomic weapons."

Since last December Hertford has been chief of research and development in the office of the Army chief of staff.

DIEM DUBIOUS OVER FREE VOTE IN N. VIET NAM

Premier Says His Regime Accepts Principles of Elections to Restore Unity.

SAIGON, SOUTH VIET NAM, July 16 (AP)—Premier Ngo Dihn Diem said today his Government doubts the Communist "regime of oppression" in North Viet Nam ever will fulfill the conditions of a free election.

Speaking to the nation by radio, Diem said he and his ministers accept the principle of elections next year to reunite North and South Viet Nam under a single government—provided the balloting is absolutely free.

In his first public declaration on the elections which the Indochina truce conference powers have decreed for next July, Diem said:

"We do not reject the principle of free elections as peaceful and democratic means to achieve that unity. However, if elections constitute one of the bases of true democracy, they will be meaningful only on the condition that they are absolutely free."

Insists on Proof.

He added, "we shall not miss any opportunity which would permit the unification of our homeland in freedom, but it is out of the question for us to consider any proposal from the (Communist) Vietminh if proof is not given that they put the superior interests of the national community above those of Communism, if they do not give up terrorism and totalitarian methods, if they do not cease violating their obligations as they have done by preventing our countrymen from the north from going south, by attacking again and in concert with the Communist Pathet Lao the friendly state of Laos."

Diem thus left the door open for possible conversations with the Red-led Vietminh on the elections. But he made it sharply clear that there can be none if the Vietminh do not permit unhampered voting.

Date for Talks Near.

Diem did not speak of arrangements for pre-election conversations with the Vietminh which the Geneva accords say should occur from July 20 onwards. British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan said earlier this week he is attempting to get the opposing parties together.

GAO INDICATES 2ND COMPLAINT AGAINST YOUNG MAY BE DROPPED

That Is Allegation That His Company Sold Machinery to Mining Firm That Got Government Contract.

By JAMES DEAKIN.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 16—The General Accounting Office is considering dropping a second complaint against Howard I. Young of St. Louis but has no plans to back down on its stand that Young helped negotiate Government contracts with firms in which he was interested, the Post-Dispatch was told today.

Young, president of American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co. of St. Louis, has been under fire for some of his activities as deputy administrator of the now-defunct Defense Materials Procuremen. Agency, which ran the Governmen.'s program of stockpiling strategic materials.

A source within the GAO said it was believed there was sufficient evidence that Young played an active part in arranging DMPA contracts with three "marginal" mining firms. "The mining companies had various dealings with American Zinc, Lead & Smelting.

Cites Telephone Calls.

"There is far too much specific evidence of Young's constant participation — telephone calls, cajoling, requesting—for Mr. Young to deny he played a part in those contracts," the GAO source said.

However, the informant, who was close to the accounting office's investigation of Young's activities ,said the GAO was discussing wheher to drop another specific complaint against the St. Louisan.

This was the GAO allegation that Young's firm sold $60,000 worth of machinery to one of the three mining outfits, Mid-Continent Mining Corp., West Plains, Mo. Young has vigorously denied this.

The GAO already has withdrawn one charge against American Zinc, Lead & Smelting. The accounting office has changed the wording of its report to say that the company "delivered" zinc to the General Services Administration in August 1952.

Change in Wording.

The accounting office previously had said that GSA contracted for 1167 tons of zinc from the St. Louis company for 15½ cents a pound, a cent and a half above the prevailing market price at that time.

The report now reads that American Zinc, Lead & Smelting delivered zinc to the GSA at a price established under a contract entered into in October 1951.

Testifying before the Joint Congressional Committee on Defense Production, Young denied that his company sold machinery to Mid-Continent. The accounting office said Mid-Continent purchased enough equipment for a mill of 1200 tons capacity, although the Government contract called for a 400-ton mill.

Attorneys for Young contend that the GAO was misled by a letter from Maynard F. Clough of St. Paul, Minn., then president of Mid-Continent. Clough's letter stated the equipment was "available" from Young's firm.

Young told the committee in a closed hearing last Thursday that he had his company treasurer check through all sales records, "and we have not sold $1 worth of equipment to Mid-Continent nor to any of the other two companies."

False Statements Charged.

An attorney for Clough said today the GAO report contained "false statements of fact" about Clough and Young. He added that Clough would go to court in an attempt to have the report corrected unless the GAO does it voluntarily.

The attorney, Carl Layton Shipley, told the Post-Dispatch the DMPA began negotiating a contract with Mid-Continent toward the end of 1951, when the market price of zinc was 19½ cents a pound, and the Government then moved to "pull out" when the price dropped to about 11 cents in may 1953.

Shipley said Clough's contract called for the Government to pay Mid-Continent 17 cents a pound for zinc. The GAO said the Government lost $325,000 on Clough's contract when Mid-Continent failed to produce zinc.

GAO Charges $350,000 Loss.

The GAO has charged that the Government lost between $350,000 and $400,000 on the contracts with the three small mining companies. The agreements were intended to encourage production of zinc for the national stockpile during the Korean emergency.

Comptroller General Joseph Campbell, head of the GAO, told the committee in a report that the investigation of Young's activities as an unpaid federal official indicated an apparent "conflict of interest." Campbell also said there were "laxities" in the way the stockpiling program was handled.

The other two firms whose contracts Campbell questioned were W. M. & W. Mining Co., Inc., and MacArthur Mining Co., both of Baxter Springs, Kan. W. M. & W. had a contract to supply zinc concentrates to Young's firm, and the MacArthur company had a letter agreement to the same effect.

The GAO alleged that Young's company and a subsidiary sought to assure themselves of a supply of zinc concentrates by entering into agreements with the three mining firms while they were receiving Government money. Two of the firms produced little zinc.

No Legal Effect.

It was pointed out that the accounting office's report on Young's activities had no legal effect. The GAO serves as a "watchdog" agency over Government spending and contracting, making its reports to Congress. However, the GAO has authority to stop payment on Government contracts if it finds them illegal.

Young was deputy administrator of the procurement agency from September, 1951, to May, 1953. He was not paid by the Government but continued to draw a salary from his private firm.

Testifying before the Joint Congressional Committee on Defense Production, Young said he "never benefited personally from that contract (with Mid-Continent Mining Co.) or any other contract that went through DMPA in the entire period that I served in DMPA."

He added that neither he nor his family had any financial interest in Mid-Continent or two others with which his company transacted business at the time in question, August 1952.

Young said his companies were then smelting 27,500 tons of zinc concentrates a month, and that the most the three other firms could have supplied at full capacity was 650 tons.

Drum Majorettes in Legion Parade

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

WEATHERMEN'S WIVES SHOW THEY CAN PREDICT TOO

Weather Bureau forecasters received a lesson in long-range predicting yesterday from their wives, who gave further impetus to the notion that the day may come when men won't have to work at all.

Without consulting their husbands, members of the Cirrus Club picked a date weeks ago for the annual picnic for Weather Bureau employes in Tilles Park.

Yesterday was the day, and, Meteorologist Harry F. Wahlgren said, it proved to be an "ideal day for a picnic." Temperatures were below 90 degrees for the third consecutive day; no rain.

TRAFFIC DEATHS HERE DOWN 25 PCT. SO FAR THIS YEAR

Traffic fatalities in St. Louis so far this year have decreased 25 per cent from last year, the Safety Council of Greater St. Louis announced yesterday.

There have been 41 traffic deaths between Jan. 1 and July 14 of this year, compared with 55 in the same period last year, B. H. Sweeney, president of the council, said.

If the decrease continues at the present rate, St. Louis will have the fewest traffic deaths in any year since 1943, when 74 persons were killed, Sweeney added.

Marching Units in Legion's Parade Win Frequent Applause

Spectators Stand 4-Deep at Some Points—72 Groups Take Part in Downtown March.

Familiar strains of martial music and snappy marching units, which drew frequent spectator applause, marked an American Legion parade through downtown St. Louis yesterday.

The parade started from Twelfth boulevard and Washington avenue. As the 72 marching units filed past crowds which lined the parade route, the sun came in and out of the clouds, and the mercury showed a reading of 86 degrees.

Children, as usual, made up about a third of the spectators who stood three and four deep on the sidewalks at some points. There were the usual vendors of popcorn, balloons, ice cream and souvenirs, but their business was far from brisk.

Convention High Point.

The parade was the high point of the thirty-seventh annual convention of the Legion's Missouri department, held here for the first time since 1952, with 3000 delegates from across the state, in attendance.

There was a marked absence of the high jinks sometimes associated with the Legion. Some Legionnaires even decided to watch from the sidelines. Of the paraders, only one Legionnaire who marched in an oversized diaper-like garment and two who were dressed as Turkish sultans departed in their apparel from the crisp, military note which was struck by the parade as a whole.

The parade proceeded east in Washington to Sixth street, south in Sixth to Olive street, and west in Olive to Twelfth boulevard, turning south in Twelfth to Chestnut. Marching west in Chestnut, the last of the 5000 participants filed past a reviewing stand in front of the Soldiers' Memorial at 3:55 p.m. The parade started at 2:35 p.m.

The crackle of a number of aerial bombs heralded the start of the parade. The first marching unit, the 528th Scott Air Force Band, took up its place in the parade immediately behind Mayor Raymond R. Tucker and Legion officials. The band played a rousing martial air.

Brig. Gen. William A. Matheny, commander of the Thirty-First Air Division of the Continental Air Defense Command, Fort Snelling, Minn., told convention delegates at Hotel Jefferson yesterday that an Air Filter Center at 9003 Manchester avenue, Brentwood, and a "whole new network of ground observation posts" will be established in the St. Louis area.

Gen. Matheny, whose command covers the vital northern approaches to America's industrial heartland, said: "This means there is uncompromisingly hard work ahead."

'Never-Ending Observation.'

Because modern warning devices like radar are "inadequate and subject to deliberate confusion by the enemy," the approaches to centers of population and industry must be kept under a "continuous, never-ending observation" by volunteers of the Ground Observer Corps, he asserted.

The various sections of the country asked three years ago to undertake "Operation Skywatch" have tackled the job "with varying degrees of enthusiasm," Gen. Matheny said. "Where enthusiasm was high, results were good. As enthusiasm ebbed, results dwindled. In any case, for better or for worse, Skywatch had arrived to stay."

1000 VOLUNTEERS NEEDED FOR CHRISTMAS SEAL WORK

More than 1000 volunteer workers are needed to assist with the 1955 Christmas Seal mail campaign, the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis announced yesterday. Volunteers perform various seal campaign jobs at the Society offices, 911 Locust street.

Twelve volunteers are needed each weekday starting Aug. 15, the society said.

RIDER DROWNED AS BOAT SINKS IN MISSISSIPPI

4 Others, Including 2 Children, Are Thrown Into Water but Rescued.

Manuel Ansel, 434 Crawford avenue, Glasgow Village, drowned last night when the outboard motorboat in which he was a passenger sank in the Mississippi river at Harbor Point, St. Charles county.

Four other persons, including two children, were thrown into the water but were rescued.

They included Arthur Klein, 5350 Gladstone avenue, Normandy, owner and pilot of the boat; his wife, Rose Ann; Michael Field, 8, of 5934 Wabada avenue, and Barbara Ochs, 10, 1814 Elm street, St. Charles.

The accident was witnessed by Ansel's wife who was a passenger in a second boat which participated in the rescue. She collapsed from shock later and was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital in St. Charles.

Klein said the accident happened in Dardenne Slough, a part of the Mississippi, as he was about to dock at Harbor Point. He said he had cut off his motor and was gliding into the dock when a cruiser that passed to the rear sent up waves that lapped into the stern of the boat.

Ansel had left a wrist watch on a stern seat and, fearing the watch would get wet from the waves, stood up to reach for it, despite warnings from Klein that he might capsize the boat.

Ansel's movements caused the boat to ship more water and it started to sink by the stern, throwing the occupants in the water, Klein related. He said his first thought was for his wife, who could not swim, but she had managed to grasp an innertube that kept her afloat. Both children wore life preservers.

After getting his wife and the two children into another boat that belonged to others in the same party, Klein said he dived several times for Ansel. Mrs. Klein said Ansel sank immediately and never reappeared.

Mrs. Ansel was in the second boat. The group was returning from a swimming party at a clubhouse upstream from Harbor Point.

The St. Charles Volunteer Emergency Corps began a search of the area but had not recovered the body up to a late hour last night. The water at this point is about 30 feet deep.

Klein said Ansel had operated a business in the vicinity of Grand boulevard and Olive street until last Friday when it was sold. Klein was unable to recall the nature of the business.

BODY OF MISSING MAN IS FOUND IN TRUNK OF HIS CAR

Skull Crushed by Multiple Wounds—Truck Driver Apparently Killed Elsewhere.

The battered body of a Jefferson county truck driver, Floyd Oestricker of Maxville, his skull crushed by multiple penetrating wounds, was found yesterday in the trunk of his automobile, parked in woods near New Baumgartner road, St. Louis county.

Coroner Arnold J. Willmann reported that death resulted from "an extremely severe beating" administered either by someone of considerable strength or by more than one person. An inquest will be held tomorrow or Tuesday.

An autopsy performed by Dr. John P. Wyatt, coroner's pathologist, disclosed there were 10 distinct wounds of the right side of the head and face, eight of them so deep that they had penetrated the brain.

Triangular Wounds.

Willmann said the wounds were all triangular in shape, with one of three sides rounded, such as might have been inflicted by a hammer or tire tool. He doubted they had been caused by an iron window sash weight, found near the victim's automobile.

The autopsy showed that Oestricker's body was virtually drained of blood, Willmann said. He said this indicated the man had been killed elsewhere, then placed in the car trunk, inasmuch as the amount of blood found in the machine was relatively small.

Lt. A. H. Piotraschke of the County Police Department said Oestricker, 36 years old, was last seen alive about 6 p.m. Tuesday by his wife, Elizabeth, and their three children. He left home, it was reported, to go to Loughborough Body & Paint Shop, Virginia and Loughborough avenues, St. Louis.

Did Not Reach Destination

Oestricker had intended to work on an automobile that he and his stepfather, Harvey Gardner of Arnold, Mo., had purchased for resale, Lt. Piotraschke said, but never reached his destination. He had been reported missing by relatives.

The automobile was found on the farm of William J. Dohack, two miles west of Oakville, by Dohack. A blood-stained handkerchief was on the rear seat of the old-model sedan and there was blood on the rear window, the sloping roof at the rear of the machine, and inside the trunk.

A passerby found the iron sash weight about 100 yards from the car. Police said it was 18 inches long and two inches thick, and was inclosed in a cardboard tube. There was no evidence of blood on it, by superficial examination.

Lt. W. S. Barton of the Missouri Highway Patrol said undergrowth near the dead man's machine showed no signs of a struggle. He expressed the view the killing had taken place elsewhere.

The automobile was driven across a field for about 200 yards, apparently prior to a heavy rain Thursday night. There were no tire marks in the field. The machine was 20 yards in the woods from the field, where Dohack was working when he saw the car.

Position of Body.

Oestricker was more than six feet tall and weighed 200 pounds, officers said. His body was partly on its back and partly on its left side, with one leg flexed and the other extended up into the trunk's right corner. A foot was visible where the right corner of the rear seat had been thrust forward.

The victim was employed by the Lueking Transfer Co., 1531 North Fourteenth street. A mechanic, he purchased old cars and repaired them for resale, as a sideline. He was described as mild-mannered and devoted to his home.

His mother, Mrs. Babe Gardner of Arnold, said Oestricker had no enemies known to her. She said he had between $50 and $100 on his person. No money was found on the body, Coroner Willmann reported, except for two pennies.

Pennies in Shoes.

The pennies, Willmann said, were found on the arches of the dead man's feet under the leather tongues of his shoes, one coin on each foot. Indications were that Oestricker had been dead since Tuesday or Wednesday, the Coroner said.

Oestricker was the father of a 13-year-old daughter, Kathy, by a previous marriage. The daughter lives with the mother, Mrs. Alma Opp Oestricker, 9512 Longwood avenue, Lemay. Oestricker frequently visited the child. He took her to his home at Arnold for a visit last Monday.

Lt. John Williams, in charge of the Highway Patrol's technical laboratory at Jefferson City, was reported en route to St. Louis county to assist in gathering and analyzing evidence. In addition to Lt. Barton, two other officers of Troop C at Kirkwood, Sgt. Louis A. Feco and Trooper Herbert Groff, were working on the case.

DRIVER LICENSE EXAMINER STAFF TO BE DOUBLED

Force Increased Here Following Complaints of Delays in Giving Tests.

The number of examiners giving tests for Missouri drivers' licenses in St. Louis and St. Louis county will be virtually doubled within the next two weeks, Capt. C. R. Oliver, commanding officer of Troop C of the State Highway Patrol, announced yesterday.

The increase was made possible by an appropriation approved at the last session of the Legislature following complaints by applicants for licenses of long delays in administering the tests. The tests involve both a written examination and a driving test.

The State Department of Revenue office at 2730 North Grand boulevard, where drivers' tests are now given by city police officers, will be staffed with State Highway Patrol civil employes beginning tomorrow and will operate six days a week from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

At present, the North Grand office is the only place in the city where the tests are given. However, about Aug. 1, a new office will be opened at 4655 Hampton avenue and will operate six days a week, 8 to 5.

In St. Louis county, an office at 2400 Big Bend boulevard, Maplewood, has been operating five days a week while another in the City Hall at Ferguson has been in operation only on Tuesdays and Saturdays.

Beginning a week from tomorrow, both of these county offices will operate six days a week, 8 to 5.

The actual road test for new drivers requires about 25 minutes on the average, Capt. Oliver estimated. However, because of the large number of applicants and the limited number of examiners, a considerable backlog of examinations has developed in the present three St. Louis area offices. City residents may take their examinations in any of the county offices, if they wish, while county residents may come in to the city offices if they see fit, Capt. Oliver said.

The number of examiners will be adjusted to the demand at each office. St. Louis police will gradually drop their examining duties at the North Grand office as soon as the new staff is capable of taking over, Capt. Oliver said.

AERIAL STOWAWAY FLOWN BACK HERE

Boy Outfitted With New Clothes, Given Lecture on Running Away.

William Joseph Davis, 12-year-old Berkeley boy who flew to Los Angeles Friday as the uninvited guest of Trans-World Airlines, was back from his Odyssey last night, sporting a new T-shirt, shoes and socks given him by juvenile authorities in Los Angeles.

When he stepped off the TWA plane here he was met by Police Chief James H. Webber of Berkeley, who lectured him on the futility of running away from home, then the chief took him to the Children's Building at Clayton where his parents planned to visit him later in the evening.

Billy told a Post-Dispatch reporter he first got the idea of a plane trip from seeing a TWA plane on television. He rode a bus to Wellston Friday and there hitched a ride with a man he described as a guard at McDonnell Aircraft Corp.

Got On, 'Just Sat.'

Dropped off at the airport, he said he saw a plane loading and went aboard, taking a seat next to the window.

"I asked an old lady where the plane was going and she said Los Angeles," Billy continued.

"I told her I thought I would like to go to Los Angeles so I just sat there."

After the big plane was in the air, a hostess inquired of the elderly woman whether Billy was her son. When she said no, making clear Billy's stowaway status, the pilot radioed ahead to Los Angeles. Police met the plane and whisked the lad off to a children's home.

Billy said the co-pilot showed him around the cockpit during the long flight and allowed him to sit in the pilot's seat.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alro Davis, who have five other children and are expecting a seventh soon. They live in a five-room house about three-fourths of a mile from Natural Bridge road. Davis is employed as a garbage hauler.

Boy Is 'Problem.'

This was Billy's seventh attempt to run away from home, and his longest excursion by far, Mrs. Davis said.

She said the boy was "our biggest problem," adding that he had been fascinated by airplanes ever since members of his fourth-grade class at Springdale School visited the airport last year and were taken through several planes.

She expressed the hope that while Billy is in the Juvenile Home he will be given a psychiatric examination that might provide a clue to his wanderlust.

At the Children's Building, he was asked the inevitable question: "Are you sorry you ran away this time?"

He nodded his head but the effort was far from convincing.

SOME ST. LUKE'S HOSPITAL OFFICES MOVED TO NEW WING

Moving of several offices and facilities of St. Luke's Hospital, 5535 Delmar boulevard, to the ground floor of the new $2,000,000 Fowler Memorial wing was completed yesterday.

Offices moved to the new building include the business and administration offices, telephone switchboard, medical records room, admitting office and lounge for the medical staff. The second floor of the wing, which will add 41 beds to the hospital facilities, will be ready by Aug. 1, and the top three floors will be completed to by March 1956.

As facilities are moved into the new wing from the old building, the vacated space will be converted into hospital bedrooms and ward accommodations.

OBJECTION FILED TO MO. PAC. PLAN FOR REORGANIZATION

An objection to the plan of reorganization for the bankrupt Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. was filed in United States District Court yesterday by a group of stockholders who recently failed to approve the plan by the necessary two-thirds vote.

The group represents a majority of the holders of stock of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railroad Co., a subsidiary line which would be merged with Missouri Pacific under the plan. Their petition alleges the reorganization plan, intended to end the railroad's 21 years of bankruptcy, is illegal and inequitable.

A similar objection was made by the same group of objectors last December, but a majority of stock and bond holders recently approved the plan, worked out by the Interstate Commerce Commission. A confirmation hearing is scheduled before United States District Judge George H. Moore next Thursday.

URGES ATHLETICS FREE OF POLITICS

Karsten Asks Eisenhower Make Proposed Committee Nonpartisan.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 16. — Representative Frank M. Karsten (Dem.), St. Louis, urged President Eisenhower today not to let politics creep into his proposed committee to foster interest in sports.

In a letter to the President, Karsten said newspaper accounts of a White House conference on sports last Monday quoted a participant as saying Mr. Eisenhower told him he "ought to be elected to Congress." The quote was attributed to Archie Moore, light heavyweight boxing champion.

"Such a statement at the outset would lead many people to believe that the committee might have a second, but perhaps more important mission, and that is to operate in the political arena," Karsten wrote.

"Should this be true, of course, it would have an adverse effect on competitive sports, because most people do not like sports flavored with politics."

After the Monday conference, at which 32 athletes and sports figures lunched with Mr. Eisenhower, the White House said consideration was being given to forming a committee to encourage young persons to be interested in sports.

Karsten, an enthusiastic fisherman and golfer, said he supported the idea but added: "If such a committee is formed, I sincerely hope it will not be placed on a partisan basis."

Karsten criticized statistics given at the luncheon by Dr. Hans Kraus of New York University, who said a survey of 40,000 children, including 1500 Americans, showed that 56 per cent of the Americans failed physical fitness tests while only 7 per cent of the Europeans failed.

Karsten said this was "a ridiculous statement" on the surface. He told the President he was surprised that Mr. Eisenhower had "dignified" Dr. Kraus's figures by saying that "the physical condition of young Americans is more alarming than I thought."

The President was quoted as making that remark in commenting on the need for a committee of national sports figures.

Karsten said Dr. Kraus's statistics were mathematically unsound. He urged Mr. Eisenhower to explore the matter further through various government agencies "which compile accurate statistics on the health of the children of America."

SPECIAL SESSION LIKELY ON STATE PENAL SYSTEM

Governor Indicates He Will Call One if Voters Approve 75 Million Bond Issue.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 16—Failure of the 1955 Legislature to deal effectively with all of the pressing problems involving the state's penal system points to the probability of a special session of the General Assembly late this year or early in 1956.

Gov. Phil M. Donnelly has indicated he will call a special session to appropriate funds necessary for full-scale reconstruction of the riot-wrecked State Penitentiary here, if the voters approve the proposed $75,000,000 state building bond issue.

The Governor has not announced the date of the bond issue election, which also would finance a building program for state mental hospitals and the state-supported universities and colleges.

Could Go on Oct. 4 Ballot.

He could submit the bond issue proposal at the special state election next Oct. 4, when the voters will be asked to approve two other referendum proposals adopted by the Legislature, or he could submit it at a separate special election later. It is reported he favors the latter course.

The 1955 Legislature's most glaring omission was its failure to set up a specific program for the immediate rebuilding of the penitentiary.

Most of the prison's 2700 inmates are still being held in idle confinement—10 months after last September's destructive outbreak—because nothing has been accomplished to provide new facilities for urgently-needed prison industries and farms.

It has been estimated that it will take $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 or more to rebuild completely the penitentiary and establish new minimum and medium security prison farms. The bulk of this money is expected to be made available through the $75,000,000 state bond issue, but it can be spent only on authorization of the Legislature if the bonds are approved.

Sought Emergency Funds.

Gov. Donnelly had recommended an emergency appropriation of $750,000 for the construction of a new maximum security cell block hall at the penitentiary, which prison officials considered an immediate necessity.

At the last minute, the Legislature dropped this allotment and substituted a $1,500,000 appropriation for industrial buildings and equipment at the prison. So far, no plans have been made, no blueprints have been drawn and no contracts have been let, other than plans to re-activate the state automobile license plate factory, which will give employment to fewer than 100 convicts.

Reorganization Bill Signed.

The Legislature passed and the Governor has signed a bill reorganizing the State Department of Corrections. It is designed to correct many of the conditions which led to last year's disorders, and places emphasis on the development of new prison industries and improvements in inmate education and rehabilitation.

These administrative and operational improvements can not be put into full effect, however, until all of the necessary capital improvements have been made.

A special legislative session is not likely until after the bond issue has been submitted to the voters. If the issue were approved, the legislators would have to meet to decide how to apportion the money among the various projects.

One proposal on which the voters will cast ballots Oct. 4 calls for the establishment of a new state school aid program costing $67,000,000 a year, an increase of $22,000,000 a year over present school aid allotments.

The other calls for the levying of a state cigarette tax of 2 cents a package. It would raise an estimated $8,000,000 a year to help finance the new school aid program. It is reported that Donnelly does not favor submission of the bond issue at the Oct. 4 election, fearing that this may cause confusion and result in the defeat of the bonds.

Other Unsolved Problems.

Other important state problems were left unsolved because of the Legislature's failure to act or, because of the Governor's vetoes of key measures. These include efforts to improve the administration of the state mental hospitals and to modernize Missouri's antiquated probation and parole system.

Donnelly vetoed a bill which would have placed the administration and medical supervision of the hospitals under a five-man commission, including three qualified psychiatrists. Enactment of this measure, sponsored by the special Senate mental health study committee, had been regarded by its proponents as one of the few accomplishments of the recent legislative session.

The Governor objected to the bill as a further limitation of his executive control over the hospitals, although the Governor would have appointed the commission.

Approves Traveling Clinics.

He approved, however, another measure designed to improve the state's mental health program. It calls for the creation of six traveling psychiatric clinics, to provide services not now available in many rural sections in the state.

Also killed by gubernatorial veto was a bill proposing some improvements in the probation and parole system.

PART OF WING RIPS OFF IN LANDING, 15 ON PLANE UNHURT

YAKIMA, Wash., July 16 (AP)—Fifteen persons including Newscaster Edward R. Murrow and family walked away unharmed yesterday when an airliner crashed into a pole and lost six feet of wing tip after a landing.

The Northwest Orient Airlines twin-engined DC-3 set down during a thunderstorm at 6:20 p.m. on a flight from Seattle. Two thirds of the way down the runway, Capt. Jack Taylor, the pilot, found his brakes would not hold against a sudden 40-mile-an-hour gust of wind.

The big plane sailed right along for several hundred yards after the runway terminated, scraping across a fence post and finally striking the utility pole.

The impact sheered off the wing tip and broke a power line but the plane stopped and the 12 passengers and three crew members alighted without difficulty.

Murrow, 47-year-old board member of Columbia Broadcasting System, said later he considered it a beautiful landing because "I consider any landing I walk away from beautiful."

PRESIDENT HOPES PARLEY WILL LEAD TO TRANQUILITY

lishing German unity on a peaceful and democratic basis.

"The government delegation of the Soviet Union hopes that the coming conference of the heads of government of the four powers . . . will be an important step forward on the way toward re-establishing the unity of an independent, peace-loving and democratic Germany. Our delegation is ready to do everything in its power to achieve this end."

Bulganin had made no statement as he left Moscow.

'Influences for Progress.'

Stepping into his plane in London, the British Prime Minister had told reporters, "There are certain influences which should help us reach good decisions this time and to make some progress."

Before he took off from Paris, Faure said the meetings of the heads of government and their foreign ministers "will certainly be a step in advance on the road to reconciliation, and consequently on the road to the organization of peace."

Faure has expressed hope that a new conciliatory trend in Soviet diplomacy may herald a shift away from the deadlock that has plagued East-West negotiations since the Potsdam conference 10 years ago.

Germany Army Bill.

Even as the leaders flew here, the German Bundestag (lower house), on an overwhelming show of hands, approved a bill calling up the first 6000 volunteers for West Germany's projected army of 500,000.

Chancellor Adenauer and Socialist opposition leader Erich Ollenhauer told the House they could not accept an East-West settlement without the unification of Germany. Both assailed this week's Soviet proposal for a European security scheme to embrace West Germany and Communist East Germany separately.

The German vote and insistent Western demands for German unity were certain to loom large in the Big Four talks. Eden himself said on leaving London, "unless you can get Germany unified you'll not get real peace and unity in Europe."

NATO Indorsement.

In Paris, foreign ministers of the 15-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization unanimously indorsed the Western stand on negotiations with the Soviet Union.

This includes unity of East and West Germany and freedom for a unified Germany to join the military alliance of its choice.

The Russians have demanded that Germany take no hand in any such alliance and have suggested they may even insist that it be completely neutral.

The Big Four leaders are not expected to tackle final solutions of these problems but rather seek means of routing them into the proper channels for negotiation while arriving at a new spirit of co-operation.

Eden Arrives in Geneva

—Associated Press Radiophoto.

PREMIER ANTHONY EDEN of Britain and his wife, MRS. EDEN, leaving the airport at Geneva yesterday after their arrival from London. At left is MME. PETITPIERRE, wife of the Swiss President.

Adenauer's Statement.

Adenauer assessed the action of the Bundestag today in approving a German contribution to NATO as "a major contribution to the security of Europe and the world."

The Bundestag's action means West Germany may start even before the close of the Big Four meeting to call up volunteers for West German units in the Atlantic defense army. The first German officers are expected to take their places in the staff conferences of supreme Allied headquarters in Europe near Paris next week.

Both East and West appear agreed that the future of Germany is the key to the future of Europe.

Geneva was keyed up for the Big Four meeting as it has not been since last year's conference on Indochina. A regiment of troops, the entire local police force and imported security agents guarded every stretch of road to be traveled by the arriving leaders.

Cameramen were subjected to a close check as they gathered at the airport. Hundreds of correspondents at the airport were confined so they could not approach the arriving dignitaries.

V. M. Molotov, the Soviet foreign minister, was the first of the top diplomatic figures to reach Geneva. He flew in almost unannounced this morning and went immediately to the Soviet delegation villa.

British Foreign Secretary Macmillan, French Foreign Minister Pinay and Secretary of State Dulles also arrived in quick succession late this afternoon.

The Placae of Nations, old home of the former League of Nations and now European headquarters of the United Nations, was in readiness for the historic meeting.

The council chamber, where the prelude to World War II was argued out in a deluge of old-time oratory, has been cut off from the rest of the massive structure to give the Big Four leaders privacy and security during their debates.

Sightseeing trips through the building have been suspended, and one entrance to the palace reserved for the use of the delegations.

At the opposite end of the building engineers of the United States Atomic Energy Commission are assembling an atomic research reactor for display at the U.N. atoms-for-peace conference next month.

In most of Geneva's churches tomorrow prayers will be said for the success of the summit conference. A formal service of intercession will be held in the Protestant Cathedral of Geneva St. Pierre Monday morning under auspices of the World Council of Churches.

On Sunday night American evangelist Billy Graham will hold a special meeting in the Parc des Eaux Vives overlooking Lake Geneva and the Palace of Nations. Graham, who drew 30,000 Swiss to a revival meeting here last month, is returning to make a special appeal for the success of the conference. A two-continent radio hookup has been arranged for the service.

HUNGARY FREES MINDSZENTY ON TEMPORARY BASIS

had written the previous November in which he had said that if he ever pleaded guilty it would be only because of "weakness of the flesh."

His case provoked world-wide protests and charges that secret police had drugged or tortured him to induce him to confess.

He was the first man ever to be sentenced by any government while serving as a prince of the Catholic church.

He had been imprisoned earlier for defying the Nazis, and in 1946 had been elevated to the cardinalate, when he was already primate of Hungary in his capacity of Archbishop of Esztergom.

He opposed Hungarian Communists in the postwar years as they gradually took over the country. He fought their law to nationalize Catholic schools and, when it took effect, ordered the tolling of church bells all over the country. Later he spoke out against Communist propaganda and called for a Catholic boycott of the government.

He was arrested on Dec. 26, 1948. His trial prosecutor contended he had headed an organization to restore Archduke Otto of Hapsburg to the throne. The prosecutor demanded that the Cardinal be hanged.

Status of Other Prelates.

Three other high Roman Catholic prelates remain under restriction in the predominantly Catholic east European belt which fell under Communist domination after World War II.

These were Cardinal Aloysius Stepinac, archbishop of Zagreb; Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, archbishop of Warsaw and Gneisen, and the Most Rev. Josef Beran, archbishop of Prague.

Cardinal Stepinac, 57, is restricted to his native village of Krasic under terms of his release in December 1951 by President Josip (Tito) Broz's Communist government after he had served five years of a 16-year sentence on a charge of collaborating with the Germans and Yugoslav Fascists in the war. He was convicted while Yugoslavia was still a partner in the Cominform. Under treatment for a blood disease, he carries on the work of a villiage priest in Krasic.

Cardinal Wyszynski, now 54, dropped out of sight Sept. 26, 1953, after a long fight between Catholic clergymen and Poland's Red government over church-state relationships. The Polish government said the prelate, one of the youngest of the 24 made cardinals by the Pope eight months earlier, was "relieved of his post and allowed to withdraw to a Polish monastery."

Archbishop Beran, who led a Catholic fight against the Czechoslovak government's seizure of control of the churches six years ago, was banished from Prague in March 1951. He was last reported confined in a Moravian villa, after terms in the state-owned Rozmital castle, in a frontier monastery and in a Moravian concentration camp.

CASABLANCA PUT UNDER MARTIAL LAW, 5 KILLED

burned out automobiles and other debris.

By the United Press.

Police and soldiers armed with machine guns and bazookas fired into two mobs of Moroccans.

Mobs of Moroccans burned, pillaged and cried for revenge in the native quarters. Mobs of Europeans swarmed through the streets of the European quarter with equal violence.

Police first fired on rioting Moroccans a few hours after Grandval ordered martial law.

Soldiers joined police in firing on another mob about two hours later even though the Legionnaires had orders from Grandval not to use firearms.

Tanks and soldiers in full battle dress guarded the city's government buildings. Police turned back repeated demonstrations by French settlers waving flags and shouting insults at authorities.

Tanks also ringed the native quarter to keep Moroccans and Frenchmen apart. The Moroccans set up barricades in their quarter.

Police warned that the situation was "aggravating hourly."

Three detachments of the Fourth Foreign Legion Regiment battled an estimated 1000 rioters with rifle butts in the native quarter. They had to call for tanks to smash the barricades.

Much of the fighting took place in the area of Monastir and Angoria streets where a bomb exploded shortly after 1 p.m., touching off a big fire in a sugar storehouse.

Fireman going to the blazing depot ran into barricades. Armed rioters threatened to shoot them if they tried to fight the fire. Police were called and opened fire on the mob. Police said many were hit.

Shortly afterward, tanks of the mobile police forces and army armored cars moved into the native quarter. Ambulances came to pick up the casualties such a guarantee would be in line with broader European security arrangements by which the whole level of armed forces on both sides in Europe would be reduced.

Informants said today's NATO meeting brought agreement of all 12 smaller countries to major projects of the big powers at Geneva. However, they said it also was apparent that representatives of the smaller powers would have liked more extended consultation and a greater voice in the planning.

It appeared clear that if the Geneva meeting succeeds in producing East-West agreement for further, detailed negotiations on any problems involving the interests of the smaller Atlantic nations some more direct participation will have to be arranged for them.

Pointed Words From Pearson.

Lester B. Pearson, Canadian Minister for External Affairs, also gave Dulles, Macmillan and Pinay a sharp reminder on another aspect of the Atlantic alliance at Geneva. He advised them to remember that while the size of armies and similar matters are subject to negotiation "NATO itself is not negotiable."

Dulles was understood to have emphasized that the Geneva conference—as the western powers conceive it—cannot be expected to unify Germany immediately, lower European armaments or make any other definitive agreements. Its purpose, rather, is for the heads of government to agree on the problems they would like to see solved, and if possible, indicate the lines along which their representatives may work toward solutions in the future.

Among others, Pearson warned the three Western foreign ministers to expect the Russians to arrive at Geneva with detailed proposals with which they would try to capture the initiative.

Some of those present said Dulles, Macmillan and Pinay appeared to be prepared for the Geneva meeting in only a general way.

22 Killed in Three Clashes in Algeria.

ALGIERS, Algeria, July 16 (AP).—Algerian nationalists and French troops clashed in three areas today and nine soldiers and 13 nationalists were killed. Eleven other soldiers were missing.

Near Tebessa, 100 miles southeast of Constantine, the bodies of nine soldiers were found beside their wrecked vehicles. They apparently had been ambushed. There was no trace of the 11 other soldiers of the unit.

Ten rebels were killed and two captured in a clash 18 miles from Algiers. Three nationalists were killed and four taken prisoner near Constantine.

Woman His Downfall.

WASHINGTON, July 16 (UP) —Taxicab driver Benjamin M. Posey, recent winner of a $500 award from an automobile company for being a courteous driver, had his license suspended for 10 days. It was suspended because he got into a dispute with a woman driver.

DR. DOISY SAYS HE WILL SIGN ANTI-WAR PLEA

St. Louis U. Nobel Prize Winner Will Join Other Scientists in Mainau Appeal.

Dr. Edward A. Doisy, Nobel Prize-winning professor of biochemistry at St. Louis University School of Medicine, said yesterday he would sign an appeal for all nations to renounce war in the atomic age.

The appeal was published Friday in Mainau, Germany, by 18 other Nobel Prize-winning scientists, including former Chancellor Arthur H. Compton of Washington University. All Nobel Prize winners will be asked to sign the declaration, the Mainau group said.

Dr. Doisy said that modern weapons "have been developed to such an extent that the whole world could be wiped out," in expressing his agreement with the Mainau appeal to all nations "to renounce force voluntarily."

"Then it becomes a matter of what to do about it," he said. "Possibly the only method is an agreement to end wars."

"You can't do it explosively. You have to approach it. I judge that's what our government is dickering with Russia for, now. It's very obvious that's on the mind of everybody."

Dr. Doisy was co-winner of the 1943 Nobel Prize in medicine for his work in discovering the chemical nature of vitamin K.

Another St. Louis Nobel Prize winner, Dr. Joseph Erlanger, professor emeritus of physiology at Washington University, declined to say in advance what his decision on signing the Mainau appeal will be.

"I think I ought to wait until I receive formal notice," Dr. Erlanger told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

Two other St. Louisans who have won Nobel Prizes for their work are the husband and wife team of Dr. Carl F. Cori and Dr. Gerty T. Cori, both professors of biological chemistry at Washington University School of Medicine. They are in Europe for the summer and could not be reached yesterday for comment.

RED CROSS BLOODMOBILE WILL BE IN CRESTWOOD

A Red Cross bloodmobile will be in Crestwood Saturday from noon to 6 p.m. at Grant School, Grant road and U.S. Highway 66, Mayor Oliver J. Wilkins announced yesterday.

Red Cross officials said that Crestwood is the first community in the area of the St. Louis chapter to enter the blood program on a quota basis.

They explained that if 3½ per cent of Crestwood's population donate one pint of blood each, then every resident of Crestwood is eligible to receive any amount of blood during a period of one year.

C-46 CRASH-LANDS IN ILLINOIS; 4 RIDE IT DOWN, 8 JUMP

NEWMAN, Ill., July 16 (AP)—Eight service men parachuted unhurt yesterday when an Air Force C-46 transport plane got into trouble over eastern Illinois. Four crew members rode the craft to a crash landing in a wheat field.

The plane, a unit of the Mobile Training Command on a routine flight from its base at Chanute Air Force base, landed about two miles south of Newman in Douglas county. The scene is some 45 miles southeast of Champaign.

Sheriff's deputies from Vermilion, Coles, Douglas and Edgar counties, as well as state police squads, rounded up the Air Force men who parachuted. The plane was found by deputies, in a field beside U.S. Highway 36. It apparently was not damaged extensively.

The co-pilot, Maj. W. N. Blair, said the crew was unable to get the flaps to work properly. He said this resulted in overheating of the engines, necessitating the crash landing.

The plane was en route from Chanute to Brookley Air Force base in Alabama.

3 MOTHERS TELL OF GIVING BABIES FOR ADOPTION

They Testify From Behind Screen in Senate Inquiry Into Alleged Black Market.

CHICAGO, July 16 (UP)—Three unmarried mothers, their identity hidden behind a screen, testified today that they gave their babies to New York and Chicago lawyers for adoption.

The three women testified in the final day of the Kefauver Senate subcommittee hearings here on "black market" adoptions.

Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, subcommittee chairman, gave each of the women a ficticious name for purposes of taking the testimony.

"Miss Williams," 28 years old, New York, wept as she told of giving birth to an illegitimate child in 1949. She said her doctor referred her to attorney Marcus Siegal of Brooklyn.

Siegal arranged an adoption, she said, and she gave up the baby. Then, she said, she decided she wanted her child back. But she said Siegal told her the baby had died and showed her a death certificate.

Child Alive in Foster Home.

Later, she said, she learned that Siegal had arranged to have another infant buried in the name of her child, which was alive and healthy in the home of foster parents.

"Miss Williams" sobbed as she testified and when it became apparent she might break down completely Kefauver ordered the questions phrased so that she could answer "yes" or "no."

"Miss Rogers," from a small town near Duluth, Minn., testified that she gave birth to illegitimate boy twins last August. Speaking with a Swedish accent, she said a Mrs. Agnes Brechtels of Duluth suggested that she place the twins for adoption in Chicago.

"Miss Rogers" said the adoption was handled in Chicago by Edward L. S. Arkema. A man posing as a judge took her consent to the adoption in Arkema's office, she said.

Since then, she said, she learned that the "judge" was only a court clerk.

"Miss Rogers" said she also has learned that the twins were adopted by an Iowa couple who paid $2200 to get them.

Story of 'Miss Wilson.'

"Miss Wilson," 28 years old, a divorcee, testified she gave birth to a boy prematurely in a hospital here last year, and that Arkema handled the adoption.

She said that six weeks later Arkema told her the child was partly blind and that the foster parents, an Indiana couple, were returning the infant.

"I had no idea what to do," she said. "I couldn't take the child home or to friends because nobody knew about me having it."

She said she and Arkema took the baby to St. Vincent's Infant Asylum here, and did not tell asylum officials of its affliction.

Kefauver emphasized that there was no apparent law violation on the part of the lawyers who handled the three adoptions. He said the hearings seek to determine whether stricter adoption laws are needed.

By the Associated Press.

Nathan Gomberg, a Chicago attorney frequently mentioned in connection with baby adoption practices, testified that "there was nothing to hide, there was nothing illegal" in his activities.

Gomberg was the central figure yesterday in a controversial film which subcommittee investigators said they had taken showing him in the act of making a baby transfer from the natural parents to the adoptive parents.

In reference to the film, Gomberg said the transfer was made in broad daylight and in full view of anyone who might have cared to watch.

Couple Paid $1200.

He said that in the case in question, he had received $1200 from a New York couple, of which $600 was for his fee, and the balance for medical and care costs for the natural mother during four months preceding the birth.

Gomberg said he is engaged in the practice of law, consisting of divorce and personal injury actions as well as general practice.

In the course of some of his divorce work, he said he "assisted in placing children for adoption."

He said in all cases the natural mother was recommended to him by other clients. He added that not one natural mother was a minor.

Gomberg said that during the last five years he had handled "about 30" adoption cases, "of which one third were adoptions within marriages." He explained these were cases in which remarried couples had adopted children of either party's earlier marriage.

Under questioning by Ernest A. Mitler, subcommittee counsel, Gomberg said that some of his adoptive parents came from New York and other eastern cities, and some he had never seen before their arrival in Chicago to receive their babies.

Just before Gomberg appeared, a New York attorney, Sidney Rosen, of 11 Park place, told of eight cases in which he had dealt with Gomberg for New York or eastern couples who obtained babies.

Rosen said the money passed to Gomberg in these cases ranged from $1500 to $2500. He said his own receipts in the cases ranged from $250 to $500, and that after deduction of expenses for flying between New York and Chicago and hotels for some of the couples his actual fees for legal services were quite nominal.

215 Child Ballet Dancers Try Out For 12 Parts in Opera 'Allegro'

Girls Under 13 Outnumber Boys 20 to 1 — Aspirants Show Skill in Groups of 12.

There are at least 20 St. Louis girls under 13 years of age who know how to do a "piquet arabesque" or a "glissade" to every St. Louis boy who can perform same, Municipal Opera's tryouts for the children's ballet in "Allegro" indicated yesterday.

That was about the ratio of girls to boys among the 215 young hopefuls who turned out at the Forest Park theater, most of them with their parents, for 12 parts in the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical play that will be performed in the week beginning Aug. 1.

While mothers watched through the steel fence surrounding an outdoor stage, choreographer Robert Pagent took the children a dozen at a time and watched them, one by one, as they went through a conventional ballet sequence. Miss Celene Keller of the opera's dancing chorus showed them how.

The following were chosen: Cheryl Oetter, Sharon Teich, Sandra Love, Marcella Tjoflat, Sharon Lorch, Janet Dunphy, Kathleen Schipp and Faye Kessler, and Danny and Dennis Anthonis, twin brothers, John Ebel and Larry Rudin.

Some of the children, both boys and girls, glided and leaped through the sequence like veterans. Others obviously did not know what it was all about. Pagent gave good and bad his undivided attention. He was kind to everybody.

"They're all cute kids," he said, "whether they make it or not."

POLICE TO ADOPT NEW EFFICIENCY RATING SYSTEM

It Is Patterned on Armed Forces'—Effective on Aug. 1 — Includes Civilians.

A new efficiency rating system for policement and civilian employes of the department will be put into effect Aug. 1, Police Inspector George Parker announced yesterday.

Each employe, including commissioned officers from the rank of probationary patrolman through captain, will be judged on his personal appearance, physical fitness, judgment, initiative, quality of work, knowledge of duties, organizational interest, ability to work under pressure (including dangerous assignments), punctuality, character and personality, and ability with firearms, in developing information, serving as a witness and interrogating suspects.

Parker said the purpose will be to measure the effectiveness and efficiency of individual employes and the entire department, to improve job performances, to assist in making proper assignments and to correct deficiencies.

Five Men to Do Rating.

Department employes will be given one of five ratings by men who are their equal or superiors in rank. These include ratings of excellent, above average, average, below average and unsatisfactory.

Chief of Police Jeremiah O'Connell said an unsatisfactory rating will not necessarily mean dismissal unless it constitutes neglect of duty or conduct unbecoming an officer. He said the ratings would definitely be taken into consideration in the advancement of an individual.

Manuals outlining the rating procedure will be distributed to officers responsible for submitting efficiency rating forms. The manual, developed after months of study by Parker, is similar to those used by the Armed Forces and by federal and state governments. Parker prepared the manual on the recommendation of the Board of Police Commissioners and the Governmental Research Institute.

Qualities to Be Judged.

The manual points out that "a person's character and personality is a reflection of his attitude and ethical code on such matters as honesty, loyalty, dependability, sobriety, maturity, jealousy, hate and consideration."

Developing this theme further, the manual states: "Fault-finding, back-biting, spitefulness, pettiness, unco-operativeness, jealousy, lack of consideration for the rights of others, egotism, 'glory-grabbing,' excessive, injudicious or improper habits, all detract from either character or personality."

MEDAL FOR PILOT WHO FLEW CRIPPLED PLANE CARRYING 87

GREENVILLE, S. C., July 16 (UP)—Capt. Theodore S. Roosevelt of Elyria, O., the pilot who flew an Air Force Globemaster with 87 men aboard across 850 miles of the Pacific on two engines, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross today.

Roosevelt was a pilot on the 18,000-mile round trip movement of troops from North Carolina to Japan and back. Two of his engines failed at sea on the return trip but he brought the plane in and landed it safe.

Maj. Gen. Chester E. McCarty, commanding officer of the Tactical Air Command, Eighteenth Air Force, presented the medal. Gen. Nathan S. Twining, chief of staff of the Air Force, sent a personal message to Roosevelt. He said the pilot and crew reflected "the highest credit on the Air Force."

REUBEN T. WOOD DIES, EX-U.S. REPRESENTATIVE

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., July 16 (AP)—Reuben (Rube) T. Wood, former Representative from Missouri, died today in a Springfield hospital. He was 72 years old.

Wood, president emeritus of the AFL Missouri Federation of Labor, was a Democratic member of Congress from 1933 to 1941. He first was elected as one of 13 Congressmen at large from Missouri and in 1935 was selected as Representative from the Sixth District. He leaves his wife and three sisters.

Educated in the public schools of Springfield, Wood was a cigar maker when he entered the labor movement in 1902. He was elected president of the state federation in 1912 and held that position for more than 30 years.

U.S. PRESSING TAX CLAIMS OF 390 MILLION AGAINST 5420

WASHINGTON, July 16 (UP)—The Government is attempting to collect more than $390,000,000—plus interest at the rate of $46,000 per day from 5420 allegedly delinquent taxpayers, Assistant Attorney General H. Brian Holland said today.

He said the Department of Justice is also pressing criminal tax evasion cases against 780 persons.

Holland, chief of the tax division, made the statements in a semi-annual report to Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., the report detailed the accomplishments and stepped-up activity of his division in the last two and one-half years.

Maj. George L. Lloyd Dies.

PEEKSKILL, N.Y., July 16 (AP)—Maj. George L. Lloyd, insurance executive and co-founder of Decca Records, Inc., died here yesterday. Lloyd, 62 years old, was married to Martha Boswell, of the Boswell sisters singing team, who survives him.

GEORGE WILL TRY TO RESTORE SOME FOREIGN AID CUTS

Says House Slashed Too Heavily, Especially in $200,000,000 Item for Asian Program.

WASHINGTON, July 16 (AP) —Senator George (Dem.), Georgia, said today the House cut too deeply into foreign aid funds and he will fight to restore at least a part of the $628,000,000 slash.

George, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he is particularly concerned by House action cutting in half a $200,000,000 fund requested by the President for Asian economic development.

The House Appropriations Committee contended that only $100,000,000 of this amount would be spent in the current year. Administration leaders said approval of the full amount is needed in order to set up longer range projects.

George said he regards this fund as "one of the most important" of those included under the $3,285,000,000 foreign aid ceiling previously authorized by Congress. Mr. Eisenhower asked $3,266,000,000 in actual appropriations. The House cut these to $2,638,000,000.

"I think the House cut much too deeply, even assuming that some of the cuts might be justified," George said. "I hope that some of these funds are restored and I shall work toward that end."

Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, top Republican on the Senate Appropriations Committee which expects to vote on fund totals in the bill Tuesday, said he thinks some of the House cuts will be wiped out.

But Bridges said it is too early to say definitely just what the final attitude of the committee will be toward the House reductions.

Senator Chavez (Dem.) of New Mexico, another member of the committee, said he would not be surprised if the House cuts were accepted by the Senate group with very few increases.

"The time has come to cut down on this foreign aid spending," he said. "We can't go on forever doling out money to foreign countries when we need so much to develop our own."

DULLES REFUSES TO REVEAL IRAN OIL AGREEMENT

Five U.S. Firms in Cartel Are Defendants in Anti-Trust Suit Brought by Brownell.

WASHINGTON, July 16 (AP)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles has refused, because of foreign objections, to reveal still secret details of an international agreement last year dividing Iran's oil production among eight oil companies.

His refusal was contained in a letter made public today by Representative Celler (Dem.) of New York, chairman of the House Anti-trust subcommittee investigating the role of the five United States oil companies in the cartel. It was in reply to a request for all documents connected with the agreement.

Dulles said, however, that:

1. Attorney General Herbert Brownell, in an opinion requested by President Eisenhower, held in January 1954 that participation in the cartel by the United States companies did not constitute a violation of the anti-trust laws. Dulles quoted from the opinion, which State Department sources disclosed at the time but which the Justice Department declined to confirm.

2. The plan worked out to settle the Iranian crisis has "fully justified the patient efforts made by this government during the years 1951 to 1954."

Strong Objections.

But Dulles firmly declined Celler's request to make public details of at least four supplementary agreements affecting the cartel's production and distribution of Iranian oil because of "strong objections" by the governments of Iran, England, France and The Netherlands.

Dulles said in view of the objections, "and the complications that might result in the operations of the Iranian oil industry . . . making them public would affect adversely the foreign relations of the United States."

All five of the United States oil companies in the Iranian cartel are defendants in a pending anti-trust action brought by Brownell in 1953. They are charged with conspiracy to divide foreign oil production and markets, to control foreign production, and to fix United States and world prices.

The companies are the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California, the Texas Co., Gulf Oil Corp., and Oil Co., Inc.

Under the oil "consortium" sponsored by the United States after Iran nationalized its oil industry with the threat of a Communist control, the five United States companies get 40 per cent of Iran's production.

Other Partners.

Other partners in the cartel the the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co., Ltd., with 40 per cent; the Royal Dutch Shell group (Netherlands) with 14 per cent, and the Compagnie Francais des Petroles with 6 per cent.

Some other firms have since been invited to participate.

The consortium was arranged to break the deadlock over Iranian oil which followed former Premier Mohammed Mossadegh's seizure and his subsequent overthrow by a government headed by Fazollah Zahedi in 1953.

Brownell's opinion, as disclosed by Dulles, held that the agreement "would not in itself constitute a violation of the anti-trust laws" in view of the tense circumstances surrounding Iran's oil production in 1952.

Furthermore, Brownell advised the President, the low would not be violated in view of "the determination by the National Security Council that the security interests of the United States require that United States oil sompaniec be invited to participate in an international consortium.

JAPANESE SHOTS WARN REDS TO AVOID FISHING FLEET

KUSHIRO, Japan, July 16 (AP)—A Japanese coast guard patrol boat fired 11 warning shots yesterday to keep two Russian gun boats away from ea Japanese fishing fleet, the coast guard reported.

A spokesman said the 30-ton patrol boat was cruising in Nemuro strait, off Hokkaido, when it spotted two Russian gun boats speeding toward a 30-craft fishing fleet.

The patrol boat herded the fishing boats toward the coast, meanwhile firing warning shots. Russian patrol craft have captured a number of fishing boats in Nemuro strait waters during the past year.

COUNTY STUDIES BOND PROGRAM OF $40,000,000

$250,000 for a connection with U. S. Highway 61, and Outerbelt, $1,875,000.

The other pending bond petition is the $800,000 item for children's buildings, as recommended by the screening committee. Of the total, $600,000 would go for three cottage-type buildings as a detention home for delinquent children and $200,000 for a building for temporary and emergency care of abandoned and neglected children.

Petition Deadline.

Petitions for any other proposals would have to be filed within about a month to permit processing in time for submission Oct. 4, County Counselor Herbert C. Funke said. A total of 2111 signatures is required for each petition.

The rest of the $24,500,000 to $28,500,000 for highways consists of these tentative items: Innerbelt north-south highway, $4,000,000 to $6,000,000; secondary highways, $9,000,000 to $11,000,000; bridges and viaducts, $3,000,000.

This highway bond program is roughly similar to the $32,124,000 proposition which, in an election Feb. 9, 1954, fell short of the necessary two-thirds majority by only 5315 votes.

Also defeated by narrow majorities in the 1954 bond elections were a $3,000,000 item for governmental buildings and $4,500,000 for parks and park development. Three other propositions received favorable majorities — $3,458,500 for hospitals, $1,000,000 for refuse disposal landfills and $650,000 for voting machines.

Paul Taub, attorney and chairman of the screening committee's subcommittee on highways, said final recommendations by his group would await reports, expected this week, from the county highway department and the planning commission staff.

About 20 secondary road projects are under consideration, he said, involving either new construction or substantial improvement. The Innerbelt project, somewhat similar to one included in the 1954 bond program, would extend from the Riverview Gardens area on the north to the Maplewood vicinity on the south, running through the central part of the county in the Hanley road-Brentwood boulevard area.

Carroll J. Donohue, attorney, Olivette board chairman and chairman of the subcommittee on public buildings, said the "general feeling" among members was that a 9-to-10-story building should be erected atop a three-tier parking garage on the two-acre site across the street from the present courthouse in Clayton.

The structure would provide room for at least 12 circuit courts, seven of which would be finished for immediate use and the rest used as offices until needed, Donohue said. Other space would be used by the circuit clerk, sheriff, probate court, magistrate courts, public administrator and related offices.

Space in the present courthouse then would become available, Donohue explained, for offices now forced to use rented quarters elsewhere. Needs of the rapidly growing county for governmental space would be satisfied for at least the next 20 years, he added.

The $3,000,000 building program under the 1954 bond proposal called for a $1,500,000 structure on the two-acre site, with the other $1,500,000 going to demolish the remaining part of the old courthouse and for construction of an addition to the present courthouse.

Discussing the park proposal, Mrs. Louis F. Booth Jr. of Webster Groves, chairman of the subcommittee on parks, said sentiment in the group was for acquisition of about 3000 acres for sites. This area, together with existing county and municipal parks, would give the county about one acre of park for each 100 residents on the basis of present population, Mrs. Booth said, a ratio recommended by recreation experts.

Early Proposal Reviewed.

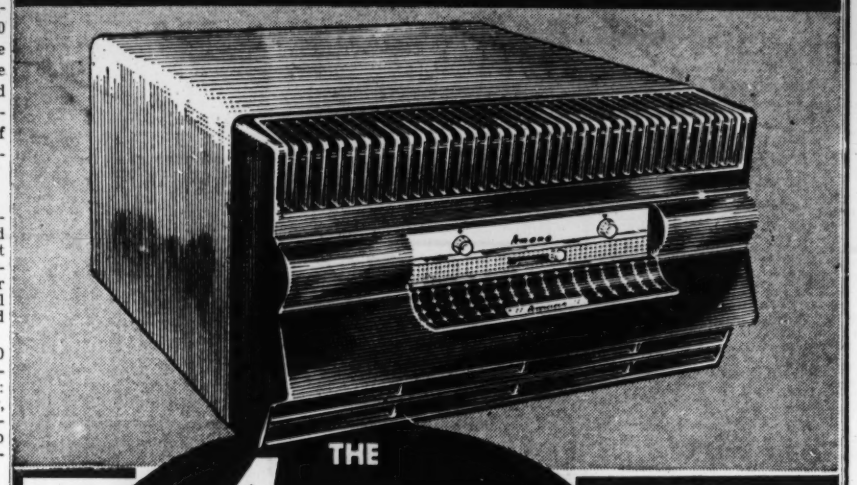

She said her subcommittee has been reviewing in more detail its recommendation, made last April, for a $5,600,000 park bond item. The recommendation at that time was tabled by the full committee.

The $4,500,000 park program defeated in 1954 called for acquisition of about 2000 acres of new park land for $2,000,000; additional acreage for present parks and their improvement, $2,000,000, and approach roads, dredging and similar work, $500,000.

The $500,000 voting machine bond item is proposed by the miscellaneous items subcommittee, headed by Maurice Schechter, attorney. He said he already has prepared petitions calling for submission of the proposal and that he will ask both party organizations and also the League of Women Voters to help get signatures. He said he hoped for 5000 signers, although only 2111 are required.

With the $650,000 voted in 1954 the county has been able to buy only 400 voting machines. The amount proposed by the Schechter subcommittee would buy about 300 more machines, he said. The Election Board reported to the County Council last month that 800 were needed.

The LAKE VACATIONLAND St. Louisans have always wanted

only 30 MINUTES FROM ST. LOUIS

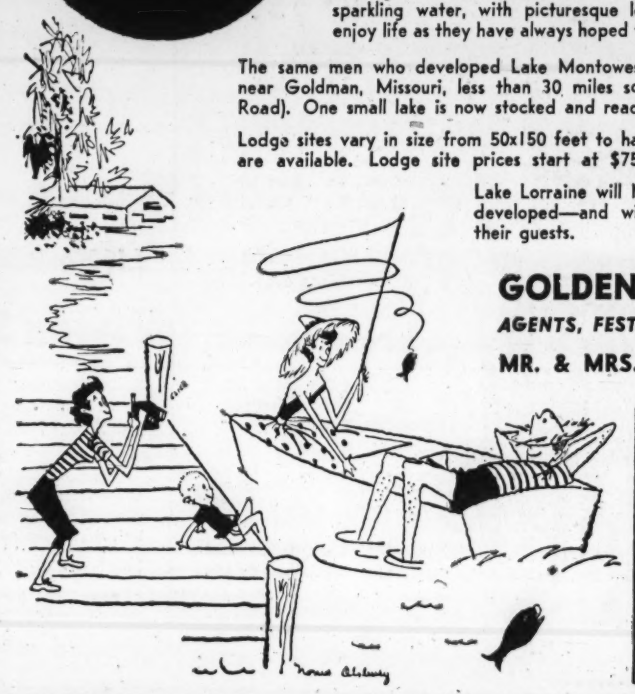

Only 30 minutes away from St. Louis a beautiful new Lake Vacationland is rapidly coming into existence.

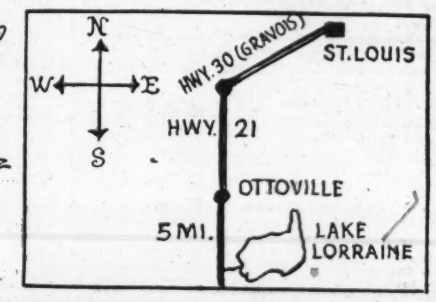

Among the beautiful hills of Jefferson County there will soon be a lake of clear, sparkling water, with picturesque lodges, where busy men and their families will enjoy life as they have always hoped to do.

The same men who developed Lake Montowese and Fond du Lac are building Lake Lorraine, near Goldman, Missouri, less than 30 miles south of Affton on Highway 21 (Tesson Ferry Road). One small lake is now stocked and ready for fishing.

Lodge sites vary in size from 50x150 feet to half-acre and acre tracts. Modern conveniences are available. Lodge site prices start at $750, and may be bought on convenient terms.

Lake Lorraine will NOT be open to the general public. It is being developed—and will be maintained—for Lodge Site owners and their guests.

101 Years Old

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

MRS. MARIA SCHOELLHAMMER, 4038 Pleasant street, 101 years old yesterday, blowing on the single candle on her birthday cake. She suffered a broken leg three weeks after turning 100 and was walking again in two months. Her key to happiness: "Take things easy, don't rush, and see some good in everyone."

THREE CHARTER CHANGES URGED BY COMMITTEE

eral highly-prized political patronage offices.

It was opposition to these provisions of the 1950 plan which caused the political organizations of the city to work intensely in the primary campaign against the adoption of the proposed charter.

Mayor's Efforts Stymied.

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker's efforts to bring about the election of a new board of 13 freeholders to study the city's charter problems and to produce a plan for presentation to the voters have been stymied in the Board of Aldermen or in Niemeyer's committee for 14 months.

The piecemeal method of amending the present 41-year-old charter, as proposed by the committee, is viewed by political observers as an attempt by the aldermen to obstruct the Mayor's announced plan to press for an election of freeholders this winter.

The Mayor has contended that the old charter needs complete rewriting and that freeholders elected by the citizens should do this job. He has challenged the contention of the aldermen that they, as elected officials, should determine what changes are proposed in the basic law governing their and other offices.

FEDERAL FARM CREDIT BOARD FOR CO-OPERATIVES MEETS

The 13-member Federal Farm Credit Board, policy-making group for the entire co-operative farm credit system, met here yesterday and Friday with officials of 45 production credit associations in Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas.

Purpose of the conference was to help the board develop long-range plans for improving the service of the credit cooperatives and for eventual farmer ownership of the Production Credit Corp. of St. Louis and the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis. Representing the credit associations were their farmer-directors and secretary-treasurers.

The associations are supervised by the Production Credit Corp., a government organization which supplied their original capital, and they obtain their lending funds from the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank by discounting farmers' notes with the bank. Farmers of the three states borrow about $138,000,000 annually from the associations for their operating expenses and capital investments.

NEW JOLT FOR SUZAN BALL

HOLLYWOOD, July 16 (AP)—Further misfortune today struck the family of actress Suzan Ball who is fighting cancer. Fire destroyed $10,000 worth of stock in a gift shop owned by her father, Dale Ball, and a cousin, Doris Howard. The stock was not insured.

Meanwhile Suzan's husband, actor Richard Long, says her condition remains "serious" but "not without the ever-present element of hope."

3 AFFTON BOYS ADMIT SERIES OF ROBBERIES

15 Burglaries Cleared Up With Arrest of Teen-Agers.

Fifteen burglaries of business establishments in Affton have been cleared up with the arrest of three teen-age Affton boys, the St. Louis county police department announced yesterday.

The burglaries, which were committed during the last six months, were among more than 30 which had upset buisness men in the Affton and Gardenville areas, causing some of them to sleep in their establishments. The Affton Chamber of Commerce last April offered a $50 reward for information about the burglars.

Officers Herman C. Birnes and F. J. Vasel arrested two of the boys, one 15 and the other 16 years old, after obtaining information they had robbed the Affton Service Station, 8500 Gravois road, Wednesday night.

Under questioning they implicated a 14-year-old boy. All three then gave statements, police said, admitting the theft of $41 cash, 10 cartons of cigarettes, three cartons of gum and $200 worth of fireworks. The fireworks were stolen from the Frisco Railroad depot shortly before July 4. They also admitted an attempted burglary.

In each case, the boys told police, they would break a window. Two of the boys would go in the place and look around while the other remained outside as a lookout. They will be turned over to county juvenile authorities.

UNITED FUND PLAN INDORSED BY ARCHBISHOP RITTER

Indorsement of the United Fund, an organization recently formed here to combine many charity drives into a single appeal, was made jointly yesterday by Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter of St. Louis and the boards of governors and directors of Catholic Charities, a federation of Catholic agencies.

The indorsement was issued following a study of the United Fund's objectives by a committee of Catholic clergy and laymen. Catholic agencies, which previously were supported through the Community Chest, will benefit from the United Fund campaign because the Chest has joined it, the statement said.

Support of the new appeal by all friends of Catholic Charities, particularly the 365,000 Catholics of St. Louis and St. Louis county was urged.

HIS ARM TORN OFF, MOTORIST DRIVES 8 MILES IN DAZE

DETROIT, July 16 (AP)—His left arm torn from its shoulder socket by a passing vehicle, Kenneth Jobe drove eight miles in a state of shock. Then he pulled his automobile to the curb, got out and walked into a store. It took police, called by horrified pedestrians who found the arm lying in the road, 40 minutes to find him.

The arm was torn off when Jobe's elbow hooked the extending tread of a steam shovel being hauled past his car on a flatbed trailer yesterday. He was still conscious when police got to him.

"I stopped three-quarters of a mile from the accident," the 44-year-old hospital attendant said. "Then I saw my arm was gone. That's all I remember."

There was more to it, though. Police said Jobe drove another seven miles before he pulled his car to the curb, got out and walked into a store. He was helped by a passerby who directed police to the scene.

Wayne County Hospital attendants said Jobe lost more than two quarts of blood, but his condition was satisfactory.

Most Modern, Shortest Stroke V8's* in any leading truck!

New Chevrolet Task-Force Trucks

All Chevrolet truck V8's are of oversquare design, with an ultra-short stroke that's smaller than the bore!

Be sure you don't buy a truck V8 that's out of date! Here's the measure of a truly modern V8 engine—Chevrolet's advanced oversquare design. It means less friction . . . greater efficiency . . . longer engine life!

Here are more dollar-saving reasons why new Chevrolet trucks offer you the most modern V8's* your money can buy!

MODERN 12-VOLT ELECTRICAL SYSTEM
You get double the punch for quicker starting (up to 30 percent faster cranking speed) and more efficient ignition for finer performance. Also, you have a greater reserve of electrical power.

GAS-SAVING HIGH-COMPRESSION RATIO
With a high 7.5 to 1 compression ratio, Chevrolet's new V8 truck engines squeeze extra power—and work—out of every tankful of gas. Your ton-mile hauling costs go down with this modern V8 power on the job!

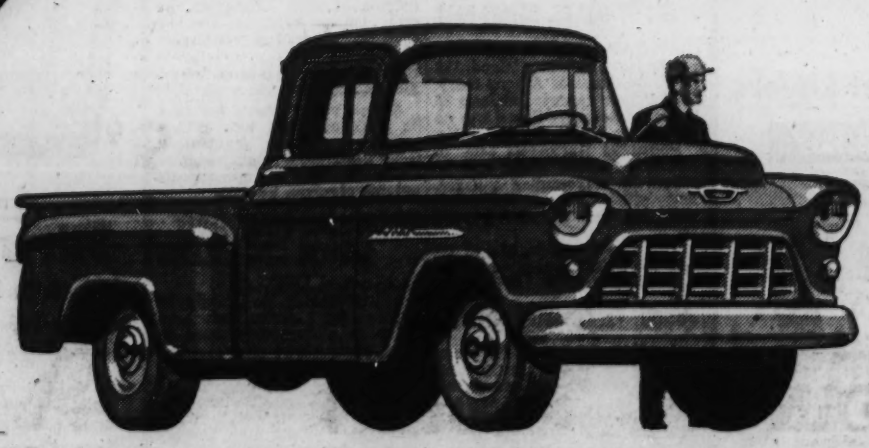

EXTRA-HIGH POWER PER POUND
The compact Powermatic features of these advanced V8's result in high power output per pound of engine weight. This means that more of the power is actually available for hauling.

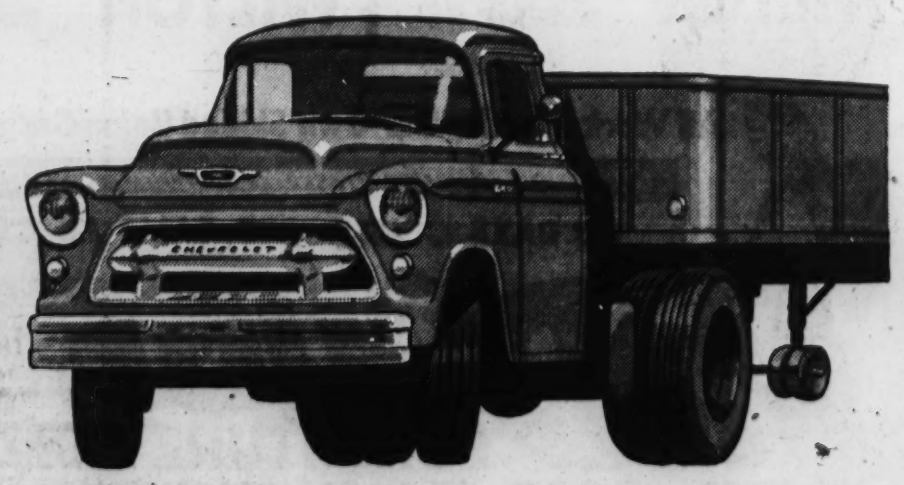

ADVANCED AIRCRAFT-TYPE VALVES
A completely new valve train design permits each valve to function independently—as in modern aircraft engines. Valve action is more positive at all speeds for finer, smoother performance.

FLOATING OIL INTAKE . . . FULL-PRESSURE LUBRICATION
New floating oil intake selects the cleanest oil for engine lubrication. Full-pressure lubrication system provides positive protection for vital engine parts . . . extends engine life.

V8 standard in the new L.C.F. models, an extra-cost option in all others except Forward-Control models.*

AUTO HITS TREE, TWO IN FAMILY KILLED, 4 HURT

Mrs. Richard Capps of St. Louis, Son Lose Lives in Crash Near Poplar Bluff.

Mrs. Richard Capps, 2915 Texas avenue, and her 15-month-old son, Richard Michael, were killed early yesterday when the automobile in which they were riding crashed against a tree five miles south of Poplar Bluff. Capps was injured seriously.

They were passengers in a car driven by Capps's brother, John. The accident happened when the machine left the road at a curve on U. S. Highway 51, the State Highway Patrol said.

Richard Capps's left arm was torn off above the elbow, and he was reported in serious condition at Doctors' Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Mr. and Mrs. John Capps and Ramona Capps, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Capps, suffered minor injuries.

Friends here said the Richard Capps family, former Poplar Bluff residents, had left St. Louis late Friday night with Mr. and Mrs. John Capps, of Chicago, to visit relatives in Poplar Bluff. Mrs. Richard Capps was 22 years old. Her husband is a press operator for the Marquette Tool & Die Co. Ramona and Richard Michael were their only children.

Mrs. Wanda Hartline, 6227A South Broadway, suffered serious head and chest injuries early yesterday when an automobile she was driving south in Broadway struck a concrete stand at a safety zone, police reported. She was taken to City Hospital.

Raymond G. Meyer Killed in San Francisco Accident.

Raymond G. Meyer, formerly of 642 East Clarence avenue, was killed yesterday in San Francisco when the automobile he was driving overturned after failing to negotiate a curve. His wife, a passenger in the car, suffered minor injuries.

Released from the Marine Corps in April, Meyer, 29 years old, was twice decorated for wounds received in the Okinawa campaign in World War II and the Korean conflict. Surviving, in addition to his wife, are a son, six brothers and two sisters, all of St. Louis. Funeral services will be Tuesday at San Francisco with burial there.

BRITAIN CANCELS TESTS OF SALK'S POLIO SHOTS, SEEKS 'SAFER' VACCINE

LONDON, July 16 (INS).

GREAT BRITAIN has canceled trials of Salk anti-polio vaccine.

Dr. G. S. Wilson, director of the public health laboratory service, said experiments were proceeding to find a "safer" vaccine.

Wilson said: "We do not feel justified carrying out in this country tests on the Salk vaccine as it is at present. There are many things about the vaccine that we do not like.

"One of the great difficulties was being certain of destroying bacteria or virus by such substances as formaldehyde. If not enough formaldehyde is used, some organisms might remain alive. And there is a very narrow range of safety between ineffectiveness and danger."

RICHARD RODGERS PUT TO WORK HERE AFTER MIDNIGHT

Broadway composer Richard Rodgers was taken aback on his arrival here yesterday to learn that he was due to plunge into a midnight rehearsal—the latest (or earliest) of his show business career.

Rodgers will conduct the Municipal Opera orchestra tomorrow night in selections from his musical, "Oklahoma!" in the opening performance in the week-long Rodgers and Hammerstein Concert.

The dress rehearsal for this concert was scheduled for the same time as for all other upcoming opera productions—Saturday midnight, an hour or so after the end of the regular evening performance at the Forest Park theater.

So Rodgers, after attending a dinner given in his honor last night by opera executives, was to put on his working clothes and rehearse into the wee hours of the morning.

ENGLISHWOMAN FREE AFTER EIGHT YEARS IN RED AREA

LONDON, July 16 (AP)—Mrs. Phyllis Sispera, 32-year-old Englishwoman who refused to bow to Communism pressure in eight years behind the Iron Curtain, flew home to Britain last night—clinging happily to the arm of a handsome young Czech now living in West Germany.

With her three children dancing around her, Mrs. Sispera posed for protographers at London airport. With her was Jaromir Chudy, young Czech who smuggled out details of her life to western reporters.

Czech authorities in London said last night Mrs. Sispera and Chudy met in a Prague jail. She later divorced her husband.

The Czech government agreed last week—after prodding by the British government — to allow Mrs. Sispera and her three British-born children, Martin, 13, Clarence, 12, and Jennifer, 10, to leave the country.

They refused an exit visa to Mrs. Sispera's former husband, Jaroslav, who served in the Royal Air Force during World War II. The entire family was arrested in 1950 while trying to cross the border. Sispera was sentenced to 11 years on treason charges and Mrs. Sispera to 18 months. The children were put in a state home.

MAN WHO FALSELY ADMITTED KILLING CHILD SENT TO JAIL

JOPLIN, Mo., July 16 (AP)—Audrey Brandt, whose story of kidnaping and raping a two-year-old girl in Sioux City, Ia., was found to be a hoax, was sentenced to 10 days in jail on a vagrancy charge today.

Brandt, 42-year-old resident of La Porte City, Ia., pleaded not guilty but after brief police testimony was found guilty and sentenced.

Police were informed by the United States marshal's office in Kansas City that a man would come to Joplin Monday to take Brandt into custody on a charge of giving false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Brandt was arrested at Joplin last Monday, the day after Donna Sue Davis was taken from her home, carried into a cornfield across the Missouri River in Nebraska and there was beaten, raped and left to die. Her body was found the next day. Under questioning, Brandt admitted and then denied the abduction but later was cleared when the authorities found he was in the vicinity of Salisbury, Mo., at the time of the crime.

PREDICTS SEVERAL ATOMIC POWER PLANTS BY 1960

By 1975 more than 20 per cent of new plants constructed to generate electric power may use atomic fuel, if the present rate of progress is mantained, Harold E. Gove, electrical engineer in charge of special studies for Union Electric Co., predicted yesterday.

If present plans are fulfilled, several atomic power plants will be in operation in 1960, he added.

Gove, who has studied the economics of atomic power, explained that one pound of uranium, worth $20, has as much energy potential as 2,500,000 pounds of coal. However, he said, before uranium can be used in generating equipment now being built, processing is required that makes it much more costly than $20 a pound.

Atomic power generators must be mass produced before they can be generally economical, Gove declared. Present reactors are custom-built and may rapidly become obsolete, he said.

ISLAND SOUTH OF ATHENS HIT BY QUAKE, HOMES FALL

ATHENS, July 16 (AP)—An earthquake hit Samos island, 175 miles southeast of Athens today. Police there reported at least 30 houses collapsed. There was no immediate report of loss of life.

Police at Karlovassi said 10 houses collapsed there and 20 others in surrounding villages. Sixty other homes in Karlovassi were reported damaged beyond repair.

The shock was registered on Athens seismographs at 7:45 a.m. (12:45 a.m. St. Louis time).

$3000 FELLOWSHIP AWARD

A $3000 fellowship has been awarded to the Washington University School of Medicine's surgery department by Swift and Co., it was announced yesterday. The one-year fellowship is the third to be awarded to the department by the firm.

The funds are used for research on the capacity of an individual to cope with infections, Dr. Carl A. Moyer, head of the department, said.

ST. LOUISANS START FLOAT TRIP TO NEW ORLEANS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGDALE, Ark., July 16—Three St. Louisans left here today in a flatbottom boat to float down three rivers — the White, the Arkansas and the Mississippi — to New Orleans.

They are James Petty, who said he is a writer of hillbilly songs, his wife, Dorothy, and his brother, Johnny Petty.

James Petty said they decided to start at the mouth of the White river near here because most New Orleans-bound boaters start their journeys on the Mississippi at St. Louis.

REVISED DESIGN REPORTED FOR AIR ACADEMY

Congressional Sources Say Talbott Will Present New Plan Tomorrow to Avert Delay.

WASHINGTON, July 16 (AP) —The Air Force reportedly hopes to provide a new design next week to prevent delay in building its new academy near Colorado Springs, Colo.

Congressional sources who asked not to be identified by name said yesterday that Secretary of the Air Force Harold E. Talbott will present a revised design Monday.

However, Pentagon Air Force officials said they knew of no new designs Talbott might present.

The congressional sources said they understood the new plan would eliminate about 45 per cent of the glass proposed in the $125,000,000 buildings for the academy.

At Colorado Springs, John Ferry, special assistant to Talbott, confirmed reports that up to 45 per cent of the glass shown in earlier models has been eliminated. Ferry is in Colorado Springs for an academy design conference with representatives of Skidmore, Owings & Merrill, academy architects.

Ferry denied that glass had been replaced by marble, and added: "It would be more accurate to state the glass has been replaced by masonry." He added that this decision was made "two or three months ago," and that officials agreed that much of the glass should be removed.

A House committee has refused to approve funds for the academy as now planned. The Senate Appropriations Committee is still considering the matter.

Famed Architect Frank Lloyd Wright, who had appeared before the House committee, told the Senate group yesterday that the present planned academy would be a "glassified box up on stilts."

He got attentive listeners. "The committee is sympathetic to your views," Senator Dennis Chavez (Dem.), New Mexico, told him. Senator John Stennis (Dem.), Mississippi, said he found the design in "shocking contrast with the surroundings."

"Shocking is the correct word," Wright said.

CAPITAL SPENDING BY STATE INDUSTRIES IS $79,000,000

JEFFERSON CITY, July 16 (AP)—Missouri industries had a total capital expenditure of more than $79,000,000 in the first half of 1955, the State Division of Resources and Development reported today.

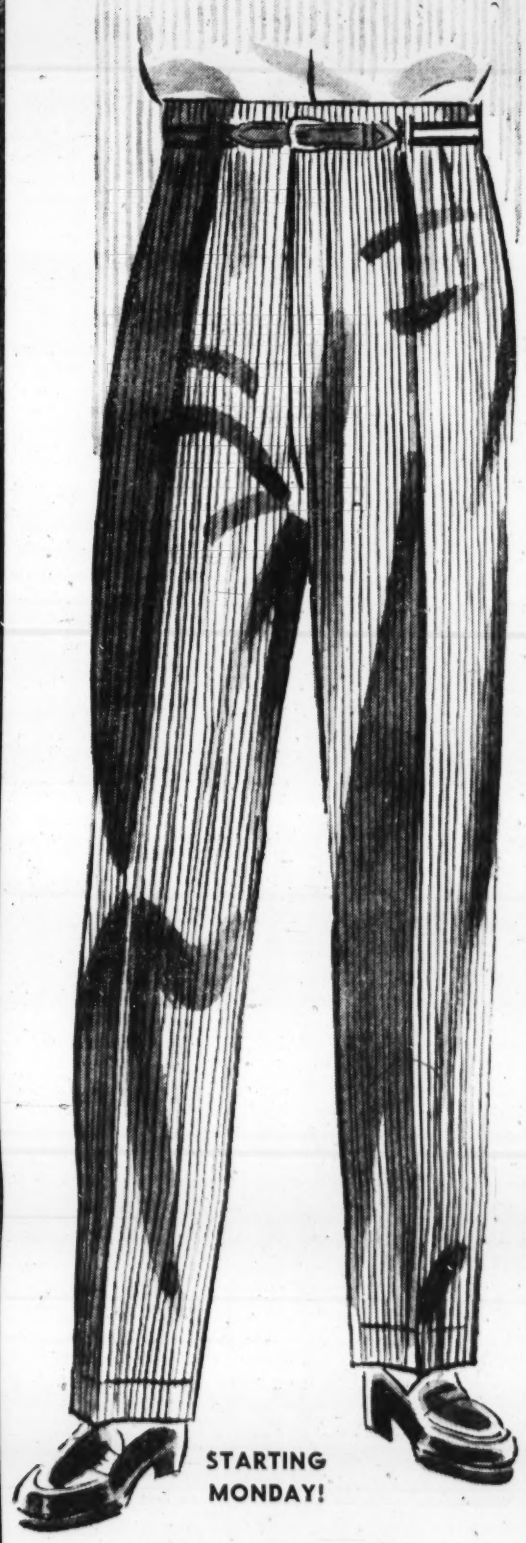

"The future of industry in Missouri continues to look bright," said James D. Idol, industrial director of the division. "Last year was a blue ribbon year and we have every reason to believe that 1955 will be another top year for new and expanding industry in the state."

New and expanding industries invested more than $26,000,000 in the first six months this year, adding more than $9,000,000 in wages and 3089 workers. A year ago the first half figure was $8,000,000. In addition a special industry group including defense construction, utilities and railroads built 70 new plants and expansions costing $52,991,000. Thirty-eight of the new and expanding factories were outside of the Kansas City and St. Louis areas. They had payrolls of $12,758,000. Twelve per cent of the outstate industrial growth was financed by local capital through industrial development corporations.

EAST SIDE FLOOD CONTROL U.S. FUND BILL IS SIGNED

Work in raising flood levees in East St. Louis will be financed with funds in a flood control appropriations bill signed Friday by President Eisenhower, Col. George E. White Jr., district engineer here for the Corps of Engineers, said yesterday.

He told the Post-Dispatch the measure included $1,285,000 to carry out part of the corps's long-range program to provide protection against a flood level of 52 feet at Eat St. Louis.

Another $700,000 in the appropriation will go for continuation of construction of flood-control projects in the Wood River drainage district, extending along the Mississippi river from Alton south to the Cahokia diversion channel, north of East St. Louis. The measure also provides $50,000 to plan flood control installations for Alton.

RICHARD L. GARESCHE APPOINTED BY G.O.P.

Named Executive Secretary of State Finance Committee.

Richard L. Garesche, public relations counselor, has been appointed executive secretary of the Republican state finance committee, Roscoe C. Hobbs, state finance chairman, announced yesterday.

Working under the direction of Walter E. Burtelow, St. Louis and St. Louis county finance chairman, he will seek to organize a system of year-round financial contributions to supplant solicitation of funds for specific campaigns, Hobbs explained.

Republican candidates in St. Louis frequently have complained that their campaigns are handicapped by meager party funds, and inadequate financial support was one of the reasons advanced to explain the poor showing in the last election here.

"Since the elections of last April, we have been studying plans to regroup and expand the Republican party in the city and county and, at the same time, to help the party throughout the state," Hobbs declared.

"It became obvious that one of our primary problems was in obtaining sufficient funds to properly support our candidates. To remedy this situation, we felt it imperative to create the position of a full-time executive secretary to formulate and execute plans for the solicitation of funds from all members of the party, and thus to provide a broad base of contributions and support."

Garesche resigned as a partner in the public relations firm of Olson, Garesche & Reiner to take the new position. His office will be at 418 Olive street.

He is 35 years old and a graduate of St. Louis University. He has been a precinct worker since 1947, and has served as treasurer of the Twenty-fifth Ward Republican Club.

SECOND ATOMIC SUBMARINE READY FOR LAUNCHING

GROTON, Conn., July 16 (AP)—The world's second atomic subarine, the Seawolf, will be launched Thursday exactly 18 months after her predecessor, the Nautilus, first hit the water.

Mrs. W. Sterling Cole, wife of New York Congressman, will sponsor the Seawolf, third submarine to bear the name.

The giant submersible is slightly more than 300 feet long and displaces more than 3000 tons. Its speed is rated in excess of 20 knots submerged.

Externally the Seawolf is virtually a sister ship of the 3000 ton Nautilus, which went to sea last January and currently is on active duty with the fleet.

Like the Nautilus, which cost about $55,000,000, it has been built at the Electric Boat Division, General Dynamics Corp.

The two atomic submaries look much alike, but there will be a major difference in their propulsion plants.

The Nautilus has a "thermal" type atomic reactor, which produces steam for the turbine system. In theiry, the "intermediate" type reactor being constructed for the Seawolf should have a better heat-producing efficiency.

7000 JAPANESE STILL HELD BY REDS, 40,000 MISSING

TOKYO, July 16 (AP)—Seven thousand Japanese are still held prisoner in Red China, the foreign office reported today.

It added that another 40,000 Japanese, last known to be in Red China, "are unaccounted for."

The foreign office released the report as Japanese and Communist Chinese consul generals in Geneva reportedly met there in an attempt to reach preliminary agreement on repatriation of all Japanese World War II prisoners still held in China.

Geneva Meeting to Seek Foundation On Which to Build East-West Peace

West Approaches 'Summit' With Caution—Russians May Use Conference for Propaganda Purposes.

Britain's EDEN — America's EISENHOWER — Russia's BULGANIN — France's FAURE

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1955, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

GENEVA, July 16.

GIVEN the perilous years lived on the ragged edge between war and peace, the most that can be expected out of this conference at the summit is the beginning of some small degree of mutual confidence. Out of such a beginning can come the slow and difficult process of negotiation which may ultimately bring peace.

From an authoritative source this reporter has had a closeup view of the unanimity reached by the three Western delegations, first at the working party level and then at the Foreign Ministers level in Paris on the eve of the conference. This unity, which appears to be a reality rather than merely propaganda, is a good portent for the West at the start.

THE THREE WESTERN delegations have agreed on their list of "causes of tension." They will put these forward to counter the "causes of tension" advanced by the Russians. Prominent on the Western list is the point which has caused so much agitation in the Senate and in public opinion in America—the status of the satellite peoples denied any of the democratic rights of which the Russians talk so glibly. As agreed to in Paris, this is not to be even remotely a call for "liberation" by force, but a presentation of the subjection of satellite peoples to Russian authoritarian rule and the manifold ways in which this has contributed to the cold war.

Examples will be cited of the refugees and escapees who daily risk their lives in fleeing from totalitarianism, and of the way in which this arouses Western feelings—particularly the feelings of those with racial ties in the satellite countries, passionately concerned with the plight of their former fellow countrymen. On this same point the tension resulting where the barbed wire and machine gun borders of the satellites coincide with the borders of free states will be stressed.

A second point on the list underscored by Dulles and agreed to by the others is the continuing existence of the Communist apparatus which functions throughout the world, in part through the various Communist parties and in part through an underground carefully organized in Moscow and made up of operatives trained over the years in every phase of infiltration and revolution. While this far-flung apparatus has been greatly curtailed, and while in some instances it has been allowed by Moscow to retrograde, nevertheless in many areas it continues to be a source of insecurity and tension.

This comes under the heading of propaganda, at the conference, and the Western delegates intend to make the most of it. For they know that one of the chief reasons the Russians are coming to Geneva is to spread through the medium of the greatest mass communication system ever assembled on one spot their new line of sweetness and light.

Advance preparation for any actual negotiating that may arise in the first tentative stage has also gone forward with a large measure of unanimity. Thus the West is prepared to assure Russia that if East Germany should be liberated there will be guarantees that it will not be made into an advanced base for the West. Similarly, the Russians would agree that West Germany under some future plan of reunification would not become an advanced base for the East. The likelihood of the latter is pretty remote in view of the present mood of the West Germans.

But it cannot be stressed sufficiently that any such preliminary "negotiation" would be from the Western viewpoint merely tentative and exploratory. The expectation is that the Russians will put forward several grandiose plans for world conferences—a world economic conference and a world conference on disarmament. Advanced planning has prepared the way to reject such heavy proposals that fit Russia's propaganda scheme and to insist that the conference stay within the framework originally agreed to when the four Foreign Ministers met at Vienna in May for the signing of the Austrian treaty. This is to refer all problems for direct negotiation to specialized bodies that will begin their work after the Geneva heads of state meeting ends.

This reporter has learned that in the first instance the West intends to move to have the entire agenda referred directly to the Foreign Ministers for their consideration, at a meeting which may follow immediately the conference at the summit, or may come after an interval of a few weeks. The Ministers will then, if the Western proposal is agreed to, allocate each separate problem to a specialized body—such as disarmament to the United Nations commission that has been considering it.

SUCH IS the atmosphere in the world today, alternating between hope and despair, that the concentration on this summit could hardly be greater if each of the heads of state was an absolute monarch with full power to carry out the terms of a final decision.

Certainly none of the four fits that description. With respect to Russia, one of the worries of the West is whether Premier Bulganin does have authority, or whether he is merely an interim figure to be swept aside when the outcome of a subterranean struggle is finally determined. If Stalin were here there could be no doubt of his authority, however much he might disguise his intentions.

In range of authority from Khrushchev, the political boss, to Zhukov, the head of the military, the Soviet delegation is far stronger than any Western delegation. But while this is obviously true, since the Western powers have confined their delegations below the very top level to foreign policy specialists, it nevertheless remains true that the final center of power among the leaders of the Soviet Union is still, in the view of those best qualified to know, a major uncertainty.

For France, Premier Faure represents still another of those uncertain coalitions that have tried, for the most part in vain, to resolve France's deep-seated internal problems. A shrewd politician, Faure is doing rather better than had been expected, and if only for the sake of prestige before the world his government has survived thus far the North African crisis. The growing belief is that he may carry through until the French elections next year.

Two months ago Prime Minister Eden had a substantial election victory in Britain, increasing the Conservative majority to 59, largely on the basis of "working for peace." The railway and dock strikes did great damage and there is the threat of an economic crisis just ahead. For so many years Foreign Secretary and a master of compromise, Eden has not yet shown the authority called for as Prime Minister.

As for President Eisenhower, his popular hold at home is great, greater perhaps in scope than that of Eden in Britain. Yet the President also has serious reservations on his authority both from the viewpoint of the dissensions in his own party and the innumerable conflicting claims of pressure and special interest groups.

If these four fallible men, with all their weaknesses and limitations, their strengths and capacities, were to explore future hopes under the most favorable circumstances it would probably be in the company of only their closest advisers on some lonely island or mountain peak. Then they could talk at all times with the informality and the freedom that may be achieved here for a few hours outside the formal sessions, at which formal speeches are consecutively repeated in at least two languages other than the original.

BUT HERE the greatest engine of mass communication ever centered on one event will mirror their slightest word or gesture, not to mention rumors of words and gestures, that may or may not have any basis in fact. The cynical are paraphrasing one of the great Churchillian wartime utterances to the effect that never before in history will so much be written by so many about so little.

There will, however, be quite a bit going on. Faure has his plan for phased disarmament, the savings to be put by each government in a common pool for helping underdeveloped countries. Severe financial penalties would be applied to nations failing to live up to the terms of the agreement.

Eden, in his speech to the English Speaking Union, proposed that Russia join with NATO in supervising and inspecting agreed levels of armament on both sides of the Iron Curtain. This would be conditional on Moscow agreeing to genuinely free elections, permitting a reunited Germany to make her own choice between East and West.

But Bulganin has already in effect rejected German reunification on such terms since he conceded, by implication at least, that a United Germany would line up with NATO. The rough outline of the proposal the Russians will make here has been projected by various neutralist and fellow-traveling sources. That is for a European security agreement which would be initiated by terms agreed to between NATO and the Soviet satellite powers, joined in the Pact of Warsaw. Within the framework of this agreement gradual disarmament would occur, with both sides pulling back from advanced bases, and when this process had progressed far enough Germany would be reunited by mutual consent.

THERE ARE SIMILARITIES between the Eden plan and what Russia seems likely to put forward. But an agreement between Warsaw and NATO would mean American acceptance of the status of the satellites. And even though the American delegation does not press the issue of freeing the satellites, as Dulles has suggested, it would seem unlikely that American approval could be given to such a permanent arrangement.

The Americans at this conference have assumed the role of ready but skeptical bargainers, examining each proposal put forward to determine whether the position of the West is sufficiently safeguarded.

As head of state, but in a sense that is real as well as official, this is the conference of the President rather than the Secretary of State. This reporter has frequently in the past heard the President, before he knew that the responsibility of the presidency in this moment of crisis would be his, talk of the frank and friendly relationship he enjoyed at the end of the war with Zhukov.

The American General never left the Russian Marshal under any illusions as to what he felt about the Soviet system, and Zhukov spoke with equal frankness of his complete disbelief in capitalism. Yet Eisenhower always believed that they could have agreed on a working understanding for Germany and perhaps, in a larger context, for Europe, if Stalin had not intervened. So it is quite possible that when the President of the United States and the Minister of Defense of the Soviet Union sit down for a quiet talk for the first time since the war's end, more may be accomplished in the direction of the first small beginnings of confidence than in all the formal sessions combined.

Perhaps the principal question that may be answered in the end is whether the Russian attitude has sufficiently altered to lead to the beginning of mutual confidence. The small gestures they have made thus far have, against the background of their monolithic resistance in the past, been unduly exaggerated. Yet when that has been said, the very fact of this conference being held at all would have been considered six months ago an impossible vision.

Touchstone

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS

GENEVA, July 16.

WHAT will be the touchstone of success or failure of the conference on which the attention of the world is so concentrated? In the view of those who have been framing the Western position it will be whether, at the end, the four powers can agree on a general directive to pass on to the Foreign Ministers.

This directive must put the problem of German reunification and European security in the same framework. If the conference ends without such an agreement then, in the view of those Westerners most concerned with the outcome, it will have been a failure.

Russian Agriculture Is a Problem, but Small Chance Of Soviet 'Collapse' Seen

Writer After Visit to Russia Reports Little Basis Found for Testimony by Dulles That Soviets Are Facing Internal Crisis — 'Ample Evidence That Regime Never Had a More Solid Position.'

Note—Writer of the following article has just returned from a 30-day visit to Soviet Russia.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1955.)

WASHINGTON, July 16.

IN the long run, the exchange of visits such as that of Middle West farmers to Russia and of Soviet farm leaders to the United States may give a broader basis for a just and fair peace than the Big Four conference of heads of government at Geneva next week.

To put it another way, the meeting of President Eisenhower and Prime Ministers Eden of Britain and Faure of France with Soviet Prime Minister Bulganin needs to be supplemented by a greater mutual understanding among the peoples of the Communist and the democratic worlds if the Iron Curtain is to be substantially lifted and the cold war is changed to something better than armed coexistence.

Propaganda would give way to substantial facts and personal observations. Instead of Communist Party Boss Nikita S. Khrushchev's boast that "we have never had a more solid position than now; our agriculture is in full swing and our industry is overfilling its plans," and the testimony of Secretary of State Dulles that the Russian economic system is over-extended and is "on the point of collapse," the visitors from each world would have first-hand knowledge of the other and would be able to give their views to their countrymen.

At Geneva, President Eisenhower is likely to follow the Dulles hypothesis, although he replied to Khrushchev that of course we recognize the great military strength of the Russians. Bulganin is likely to follow the Lenin-Stalin line that capitalism, of which the Russians know little in its modern form, is eventually certain to collapse because of its inherent weaknesses.

THE MIDDLE WEST farmers and the Soviet visitors, many of the latter government officials, will be able to see for themselves the examples of the strengths and the weaknesses of the capitalistic and the communistic systems. Both groups are certain to be astonished at what they see, and each is likely to be critical of the country visited. As other delegations are exchanged, however, the futility of war, especially an atomic or a hydrogen war, will be more and more evident. Popular opinion can then exert its pressure on government leaders—even in Soviet Russia.

Visiting Americans will see that the Russians are neither eight feet tall nor the undersized brain-washed robots of George Orwell's "1984." Visiting Russians will learn that American workmen, with their trade-union organization, are neither the downtrodden proletariat exploited by unrestricted capitalism, nor an upper class living like millionaires. They are likely to be amazed at American Negroes in the larger cities, pictured by Russian propaganda as slaves, wearing better clothes than any seen on the streets of Moscow, and some driving automobiles superior to those used by top Soviet officials.

Dulles's testimony was ill-timed with the Geneva conference, and although Khrushchev was in part boasting about Russian strength, there is ample evidence that the Communist regime never had a more solid position than now.

KHRUSHCHEV

The general conclusion from my trip through European Russia and from talks with Western diplomats in Russia is that any American strategy at Geneva based on a Russian economic "collapse" will not meet the immediate situation.

The one important thing to remember about Russia is that it has a population of 220,000,000 persons living under a dictatorship that can channelize the work of these people to whatever special projects the Kremlin decides are desirable, whether these projects be atomic-energy developments, creation of a strategic air command or the increase of farm production. In addition, it has satellites in Eastern Europe, which are being exploited; has an alliance with Communist China and its 600,000,000 population, and has signed a nebulous agreement with Prime Minister Nehru for economic co-operation with 400,000,000 Indians.

The Dulles testimony to the House Appropriations Committee was based on the present Russian agricultural situation and the signs of inflation discernible everywhere in the Soviet Union.

The plight of Russian agriculture is an admitted problem for the Kremlin, and Khrushchev has taken personal charge of a campaign to increase production, particularly of livestock through the introduction of corn raising. The Kremlin does not publicly admit the problem of inflation, and it will not let the word be used in cabled dispatches. But the tell-tale signs are evident that there is more money than available consumer goods.

DICTATORSHIPS have shown that they can radically change their course to meet changes in economic currents. I was in Russia in 1922-23, when the Hoover American Relief Administration was feeding millions of Russians because of the famine resulting from crop failures. Lenin then temporarily abandoned basic Communist dogma by inaugurating his "New Economic Policy," shortened to NEP, which permitted widespread capitalistic practices to encourage farm production and the making and distribution of consumer goods. By 1928 farm production reached almost pre-revolutionary levels.

I was in Germany in 1930 and in 1931, when it appeared certain that the Weimar Republic was doomed to economic collapse. Hitler came in as dictator in 1933 and, although his methods earned democratic condemnation, his Nazi dictatorship increased German production. In 1937, the Russian "purge trials" of governmental and military leaders were taken as signs of a Communist collapse, yet when the Germans invaded, Russia was able to win an eventual victory.

For the record, it can be noted also that in 1931 and 1932, when the American depression reached its nadir, some Americans thought the American economic system was doomed. President Roosevelt, in his inaugural address on March 4, 1933, declared that if Congress failed to take steps required by "a stricken nation in the midst of a stricken world," he would ask for as great executive power as if the nation were invaded by a foreign foe.

The Kremlin's new leadership has all the governmental and economic power any dictatorship could require. So far, it has not used it as ruthlessly as Stalin did in 1933 and 1934, when his farm collectivization program "liquidated" the rich and upper middle peasants, who were the best producers, and resulted in a man-made famine said to have cost millions of lives.

The present rulers are trying government by committee, and the outside world is asking whether a dictatorship can be run without a single dictator. It took

Portrait of a 'Neutralist'---Burma's U Nu in TVA Land

By DONALD GRANT
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 16.

WHAT does a "neutralist" look like? People on both sides of the Iron and Bamboo Curtains are in the process of finding out: India's Prime Minister Nehru has been visiting Russia, Poland and Yugoslavia, while his foreign policy adviser, V. K. Krishna Menon, has visited China, Britain, Canada and the United States. Indonesia's Prime Minister, Ali Sastroamidjojo, has been seeing the sights in Peiping.

In a comfortable farm home in Hardin Valley, in the foothills of the Great Smoky Mountains, 20 miles northwest of Knoxville, 2-year-old Bill Jones awoke from his afternoon nap last Saturday to see the face of Burma's Prime Minister, U Nu, smiling down at him. Bill smiled back.

Prime Minister Nu (the "U" simply means "Mr.") was visiting the Jones farm as a part of his tour of the Tennessee Valley, to see for himself what TVA has meant to the people there. Burma has one of the lowest per-capita incomes in the world—one report puts it at about $32 a year—and Nu naturally was interested in a region where, since TVA came into being, the per-capita income has risen from $163 to $1042 a year.

The Tennessee Valley was interested in U Nu, too. In the old days, when a Democratic Administration sat in Washington, important foreign visitors were pretty common—people like Nehru of India, Queen Juliana of The Netherlands and David Ben-Gurion of Israel. Lately, Washington hasn't been encouraging such visits. Prime Minister Nu, however, insisted on seeing the TVA, along with the Empire State building in New York, the White House in Washington, Niagara Falls, the big Ford plant outside Detroit, the Grand Canyon, and California. He was the first head of a foreign state to visit TVA since the Republicans took over.

When Nu arrived at the Knoxville airport the crowd saw a short, square-cut man with what seemed to be a dark coat of tan on his wide, smiling face. He was wearing his Burmese sarong and headdress. Nu was met by TVA Chairman Brig. Gen. Herbert D. Vogel, also smiling. They drove together to the Andrew Johnson Hotel, and the rest of the party followed, in a sort of cavalcade of cars.

One of the women in the crowd at the airport, commenting later, said it was something like a circus coming to town, what with Nu in his sarong, with Mrs. Nu and Mrs. James Barrington, wife of the Burmese Ambassador at Washington, both in sarongs of brighter colors than that worn by the Prime Minister, and both women carrying gay and dainty parasols against the sun.

U NU

That night Nu attended a Girls' 4-H Club meeting, ate half a sweet muffin baked by 14-year-old Jane Kyker, Blount County 4-H Club baking champion, and delivered a lecture on the need for a return to religion, morality and self-discipline among youth. The 4-H Club girls seemed happy, but a little puzzled. Nu might have been better understood had he given them a bit of his own history: the Prime Minister was the village drunkard in Wakema, on the Irrawaddy Delta, by the time he had reached the age of 16.

At the age of 18 he reformed; at 48 he is one of the leading lay leaders of world Buddhism.

The next morning in Knoxville, Prime Minister Nu put on a black silk Western business suit and a brown straw hat and went to the TVA headquarters to see a documentary film on the development of the Tennessee Valley. Nu found it exciting—the story of flood control, power generation, river navigation and, most of all, the improved living conditions for the people. Afterwards he had many questions to ask.

He learned that the valley has almost three times the number of manufacturing establishments that it had in 1933, that the number of farms using electricity has increased from 3 per cent to 93 per cent. He was told how malaria, formerly a serious problem in the Tennessee Valley as it still is in Burma, has been all but eliminated. He learned how floods—which still ravage the Irrawaddy valley where Nu was born—are now controlled in the Tennessee Valley, and how the use of the river for shipping has increased nearly tenfold.

You could see U Nu's enthusiasm for TVA mounting by the minute, even before he had seen a dam. At lunch, the Prime Minister raised his water glass in a toast: "To the everlasting prosperity of the TVA!"

After lunch they took him to the Jones farm, where the Burma party and the TVA people sat beneath a big maple tree in the yard, on steel camp chairs borrowed from the Hardin Valley Consolidated School. Young Bill Jones's father, W. K. Jones, told how the land had been improved with TVA fertilizer and with the help of University of Tennessee agriculture experts. U Nu took off his jacket, revealing bright blue and white suspenders. It was hot.

The party moved on to the Fort Loudoun Dam, 25 miles southwest of Knoxville. Here Nu stood fascinated by the four big electric generators, each producing some 32,000 kilowatts of electricity, driven by the force of water falling over the dam, through great turbines connected to the generators by huge steel shafts. The generators were mounted in a large, spotlessly clean, hospital-gray room; there was a humming sound in the air.

"All this," marveled Nu, "turns great waste into great utility—for the benefit of people. It is beauty itself."

Then, as if not wishing to seem to be carried away, he added, with a smile: "But some people can see beauty in the face of a bulldog."

Outside the powerhouse the party clambered into two fishing launches and entered the locks, and the TVA technicians opened sluices which lowered the level of the water by 70 feet in about 20 minutes, by allowing some 12,640,000 gallons of water to flow on downstream. Later the locks were refilled, and the launches raised to their former level.

On land again, the cavalcade moved on to visit a University of Tennessee greenhouse where fertilizers were being tested, and a university machine shop, where seeds were being treated with high-frequency electric currents, just to see what would happen.

Outside the machine shop, Nu delivered his verdict on the day:

"It has been a very valuable time spent here. I am most interested in TVA because we have similar problems in Burma. Our three big rivers flood every two or three years and cause great damage. We have engaged American experts to begin surveys of two of the rivers, but of course we will need foreign exchange to pay for the experts and for the equipment to harness the rivers. . . .

"But I am most impressed by the possibilities of projects such as the TVA, and especially by what it can do for the people.

"After all, is it not the duty of good government to look after the people, and to protect them as far as possible against natural calamities?

"I look upon the TVA as a successful democratic meeting of a great challenge."

The Prime Minister of Burma did not mention the Dixon-Yates affair. U Nu in his scholarly days not only translated into Burmese Karl Marx's "Das Kapital"—but also Dale Carnegie's "How to Win Friends and Influence People."

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Heritage of a Missourian

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

As a part-time prospector I have traveled throughout the world and always taken pride in calling myself a Missourian. Even so I never cease to be amazed at the attitude so many people have toward our fair state.

Whenever the conversation gets to lagging as we gather around the open campfire at night it is easy to get a rise out of the group. All I have to do is just casually remark that I hail from Missouri.

Instantly everyone will turn and stare at me. Then I just sit back and let their imagination take hold. It is really remarkable in a way because with only an occasional grunt or nod on my part they will ramble on for hours.

Usually I reluctantly admit that one of the Jameses or Youngers was my grandfather but only after they have me dead to rights. As they close in on me sometimes I am forced to confess that "Machine Gun" Kelly was my father, "Pretty Boy" Floyd my uncle and "Baby-Face" Nelson my cousin.

At this stage I usually decide to clean my revolver or sharpen my hunting knife. As I receive their solemn promises to keep my dour secrets the conversation sometimes shifts to other topics in which we are well known, such as floods, drouths and tornadoes.

At this stage a person must be extremely careful. If you try to explain that you actually see only two or three tornadoes a year some brave man is apt to call you a liar.

Better make it two or three a month, or even a week, unless you are looking for trouble. These people read the papers and they know!

By and large, people believe what they want to believe, and sometimes it seems downright cruel to try and change them. HUGH WIGGANS.

Dialogue on the Styx

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

If we may presume to fancy that on the houseboat on the Styx the principal newspapers are received and read, we may imagine two illustrious shades with bristling moustachios engaged in reading, smoking and commenting.

"Hey, Jack, look here, a feller writes a letter to the Post-Dispatch about me and that old weather chestnut and look at the name he signs to the letter—it's a swipe from the story that made you famous, 'The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard.'"

Jacques Thibault, known to letters as Anatole France, smiles at Samuel Clemens, known as Mark Twain, and says: "Well, Sam, if there remains a Sylvestre Bonnard in the world, you may still hope that dear Walt Disney will put Huck Finn on TV."

"Yep," countered Mark, "and you may hope that Cecil de Mille will find a way to film your 'Thais'—the hottest thing outside of the Bible."

"Ah, Cecil should have done it earlier, before the time of censors, and while you and I were still alive to see it in the silent movies."

Mark spat over the side of the houseboat. "Well," he said, "this feller in the Post-Dispatch mentions Charles Dudley Warner. I'm goin' over and ask Dud what he knows about that weather joke. Mighta been Ed Howe or Eugene Field told it first."

"Ah," mused France, "how goes it? 'Everybody talks about the weather but nobody does anything about it.' In Paris we had a saying: 'The more it changes, the more it remains the same.'" And he puffed reminiscently on his longstemmed porcelain pipe.

From Chinese Students

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We, as a group of Chinese students who have been recently granted permission to leave the United States and are very happy to be on our way home, have written to Dag Hammarskjold, the Secretary General of the United Nations, to bring to his attention some pertinent facts.

A statement has been made recently by the State Department of the United States Government that all the Chinese students who have expressed their desire to go home have been allowed to do so.

We would like respectfully to point out that this statement is not in accord with the fact. We know that at least three of our fellow students (two in New Jersey, one in Florida) are still forbidden to leave the United States. Yet no explanation was given by the Immigration and Naturalization Service for continuously doing so.

Even very recently some of our fellow students who applied for exit permits still have to wait for the so-called "investigation."

This investigation invariably takes a long time. Students who have family responsibilities refrain from applying for exit permits because they may have to risk the possibility of losing their jobs while waiting the long investigation procedures.

We take this opportunity to express our thanks to many American friends who have helped in bringing about our forthcoming happy reunion with our families.

At the Summit

Today and for the week ahead, the President of the United States is in Geneva, a quarter of the way around the world. That in itself is a historic occurrence for it has been just 10 years this summer since Harry S. Truman went as President to Potsdam.

Mr. Eisenhower, however, is in Switzerland for a purpose substantially different from that which took Mr. Truman to Germany in 1945. Mr. Truman went to help work out the final plans for winning a war then only partially won and to help decide the postwar fate of our enemies.

Dwight D. Eisenhower is in Europe to join with the chiefs of state of our World War II allies—Britain, France and Russia—in developing an accord out of which may come pacific adjustment of international differences and, so mankind must hope, a secure and lasting peace. The President is abroad, in his own words, to "engage in a conference with the heads of other governments in order to prevent a war."

Just as it would be a mistake to expect too much in immediate results from the Geneva meeting, so would it be wrong to dismiss the conference in advance as an inevitable failure. Extreme pessimism is no more the mood for those of us who must wait and trust than unbounded optimism. We can and should be hopeful and realistic at the same time. Prime Minister Eden, in his excellent English-Speaking Union address reprinted on this page, phrased it thoughtfully when he proposed "a blend of care and confidence and courage."

All the participating heads of state have done exceptionally well in setting a warm and friendly stage for their meeting. President Eisenhower and Premier Bulganin each made a remarkable statement over the air to his people shortly before leaving home. With only slight changes the words of the Russian leader could have been spoken by President Eisenhower and vice versa. Indeed Mr. Eisenhower did the fitting thing in his simple, sincere talk Friday night of calling attention to Premier Bulganin's reference to "conciliation and tolerance and understanding."

While the test of the Soviet chief's words will come, as the President in effect says, in their application, it is a gain to have Bulganin say that the Russian Communists "have never intended and do not intend to attack anybody." It is a gain to have him express the first yearning of the Western world when he says that "men and women are able to breathe freely only if and when they are confident of the morrow and know well that neither they nor their children are threatened by the monstrous calamities of war."

The attitude of the American delegation that Geneva must concern itself with methods rather than solutions is a sound one. For it will be a long step ahead merely to have Premier Bulganin and his amazingly complete Russian delegation meet the Western chiefs of state, for all to sit down together in an atmosphere of calm and quiet. It will be a long step to agree, if on nothing else, on further meetings below the summit at which specific problems can be taken up, analyzed, discussed and, let us hope, eventually solved.

Germany's reunification is a key problem, as Sir Anthony indicates, and while Geneva is not going to solve it, the steps taken at Geneva may include the first reassurances that will lead to Russian acceptance of the idea of a united German people. Thus Geneva can be the starting point.

Another tough problem is disarmament. Since both President Eisenhower and Premier Bulganin spoke of the economic waste that goes into munitions, the prospect is that here also a start, however tentative, will be made. Premier Faure of France takes a constructive plan to the conference table in his proposal for phased disarmament, with each country placing its arms savings in a pool to help underdeveloped countries. This too will require time and patience. Meanwhile, for reasons the President so well stated, the free world cannot afford to allow its security to be weakened.

Thanks to skillful leadership in the Democratic Senate, President Eisenhower is in Geneva knowing that Congress as well as the country is behind him. By the 77-to-4 showdown test, the extreme anti-Eisenhower wing of the Republican party has been sharply reduced in both numbers and influence.

The President gave credit publicly to this bipartisan co-operation when he said that he could leave the country, with Congress in session, only because the leaders of both parties had arranged their work accordingly. Earlier he promised leaders from Capitol Hill to keep Congress informed as to developments in Geneva.

Thus Mr. Eisenhower can negotiate from strength in more ways than one, and in a capacity in which he was notably successful in World War II. For in those trying years of 1943-45 he was diplomat as much as soldier. The man who must now sit down with Bulganin, Khrushchev and Molotov can remember his sessions with such difficult personalities as De Gaulle, Darlan and Giraud. Here is a highest level assignment for the adjuster and accommodator.

Paradoxically the first proposer of a meeting at the summit will not be among those present. But Britain's grand old man has the greater satisfaction of knowing that his idea, announced two years ago, has been adopted and made their own by others. May it begin to open at Geneva and then flower full as Sir Winston Churchill dreamed it might do!

AUDIENCE BELOW THE SUMMIT

Brave Thought in Kentucky

Down near the little town of Berea, Ky., a courageous thought is being spread out on the stage along the westerly slopes of Indian Fort Mountain these summer evenings. Paul Green, the distinguished playwright, has written a play for the hundredth birthday of Berea College, which was started by abolitionists in the stormy years leading up to the Civil War.

Mr. Green bids his Berea audiences think straight and hard about the race problem, and to help them do it he fires their imaginations with the story of a young highlander at about the time of Berea's birth who wants to teach a rural school where white and Negro children alike may learn.

It is a worthwhile and a courageous thing Mr. Green and Berea College are doing. For it takes a rare sort of fortitude to talk sense about the problems of race, religion and national origins in areas where prejudice is rampant, yet those are the areas that are most in need of hearing sense spoken.

And it is heartening to know that Berea, which gives the bright golden opportunity of an education to many young men and young women who might otherwise lack it, is still fighting the same good fight for the emancipation of the minds and talents of people—all kinds and conditions of people—that led to its founding those eventful 100 years ago.

When Missouri Fought Itself

Lloyd Lewis, that twentieth century reporter who grew up with young Capt. Sam Grant and marched with Sherman to the sea, always hoped to write the history of the Civil War west of the Mississippi. Particularly did he want to tell the story of the war among the families in the country towns of Missouri and the fighting along the edge of bleeding Kansas, for that western war had a fascination for him all its own. The Chicago newspaper man loved drama and he knew that nowhere from Bull Run down to Vicksburg and from Shiloh back to the Wilderness was there anything like the bitter struggle in and around Missouri.

But Lloyd Lewis overtaxed himself on the long tramp to Appomattox and so it fell to one of his comrades-in-arms to take up the assignment. The fellow historian, Jay Monaghan, who talked out many a campfire with Lloyd Lewis, has completed his mission with the publication of "Civil War on the Western Border: 1854-1865." Wherever they are, the spirits of the federals and the guerrillas must be buzzing excitedly, for a magnificent, moving, thrilling piece of historical research and writing it is. The wonder is that no Missourian years ago undertook what a Pennsylvanian, long a resident of Illinois, now living in California, has done so brilliantly.

Virginia and Georgia, Tennessee and Mississippi—these and other states south of the Ohio had their great, sometimes decisive tests with troops and arms. Missouri, as Jay Monaghan shows, had war of another kind—war with a battle in almost every town. As early as June, 1861, Boonville had its combat between Nathaniel Lyon's regulars and Gov. Claib Jackson's rebels in a field of waving wheat where puffs of white smoke bloomed like cotton bolls. Carthage saw Franz Sigel's gray-clad "Dutch" confound the frontiersmen with European military science. Lexington, Centralia, Pilot Knob, Westport—all watched the ebb and flow, and southwest of Springfield was Wilson's Creek, where Sterling Price joined with the Arkansas secessionists and the Yankee Lyon was killed in the dog days of August.

Young Sam Clemens volunteered in a regiment of Ralls County Rangers but soon decided he was unsuited for military life when he sprained an ankle in jumping from a hayloft set afire by a careless pipe smoker. Longhaired Wild Bill Hickok turned up one place and then another, as a Union scout, wearing dainty boots and a mustache almost long enough to tie behind his neck. And when it was just about over Lincoln's would-be assassin, Quantrill, was fatally shot in Kentucky, and the bushwhacker's estate of $500 in gold was inherited by Kate Clarke who used it to open a fancy massage parlor in St. Louis. Yes, Lloyd Lewis would like the book about the Civil War in Missouri and points west and south that Jay Monaghan has written for him.

Senator Bender's Footnote

It remained for Republican Senator George H. Bender of Ohio to make the most pertinent comment in the final report of the Government Operations Committee on the Peress case.

The Democratic majority, joined by Senators McCarthy and Mundt, denounced the Army for 48 errors in handling the famous "pink dentist" disclosure which touched off McCarthy's struggle with the Army last year. Doubtless the majority report was right as far as it went. Certainly it is no news to anybody that the Army bungled, bobbled, fumbled and covered up from start to finish.

But that is only part of the story, and Senator Bender is to be congratulated for insisting upon filling in the blanks which the majority report left. As he says, not one shred of evidence has been turned up to indicate any subversion or Communist conspiracy in the Army's handling of the case. It was pure, unadulterated, old-style Army snafu. This point is a crucial one and Senator Bender is right in refusing to gloss it over.

It is crucial because from the beginning Senator McCarthy's whole campaign was based on the premise that Peress had been "coddled." As a mere instance of Army snafu, the case had no interest whatever for McCarthy. What he wanted to make people believe was that Peress had been coddled because the Army was shot through with Communist influence and sinister conspiracies. As with so many of his charges, he never proved this principal one, and the majority should have made this clear in its report.

A Stiff Front for Summer

Recent hot weather has brought us a sheaf of correspondence demanding a revolution in men's summer clothing. Off with the neckties! the writers say. On with shorts!

Even the physicians support the appeal, for they observe that throttling the throat is not only uncomfortable but unhealthy. But will anything be done about it? Edward R. Murrow praised a taxi driver who defied convention in shorts and sport shirt, and then Mr. Murrow retired from the microphone to tie his tie.

The question which arises from all this is, What do men wear in places where it is really hot? Take Cuba, for example. The Cubanos, who have sense enough to stay out of the noonday sun, manage to look both dignified and comfortable without choking their Cuban necks. In summer they wear an open-necked shirt called the guayabera, which is accepted business dress.

The guayabera substitutes for both coat and tie. Stiffly starched, often pleated, sometimes ruffled and generally white, the guayabera is cool and also looks well. Presumably it would be even cooler without the starch or pleats, but then it would not look so well, and even Cubans make some compromises in a vale of heat.

An American exhausted by opposite pressures of conformity and comfort might find the guayabera an approximately middle-road solution edging onto the shady side of the street. But in St. Louis such dress would be as conspicuous as Bermuda shorts without knee-socks. The thermometer signals no such revolution. The inheritance of the necktie still pulls harder than the steaming environment, and rugged individualism still wears a coat.

Judging from all the communications, change may be in the air. But it took American men less time to invent the airplane than to get rid of vests.

What a wonderful tee the Matterhorn would make!

Anthony Eden Looks to Geneva

The Mirror of Public Opinion

British Prime Minister says unification of Germany is main problem for Big Four meeting tomorrow; suggests ways to assure Russia against aggression; 'cannot all be done at once,' he says, but it is 'reasonable to look for real if modest progress.'

Prime Minister Eden in an Address to the English-Speaking Union, London

The problem of Europe is the problem of Germany; and as long as Germany is divided, Europe will be divided. I said this in Berlin last year, and it is just as true today. What, then, can we do to bring about the unity of Germany?

There must be free elections throughout the whole country. This also we proposed at Berlin.

And when the elections are over, it will be for the United Germany to determine her own future. There are risks for everybody in any attempt to solve this problem. But we have to solve it all the same, because there will be neither security nor lasting peace in Europe unless we do.

Anthony Eden

I can quite understand that the Russians fear that a free Germany would probably unite with the West. I think that it would. The Russians may even consider this dangerous to their security. But the answer is that it need not be so. We are certainly ready—and I believe that the Western nations, including Germany, are also ready—to agree to any reasonable arrangement which will give Russia reassurance on this point.

Europe Limits Armaments

For instance, we've already begun to elaborate and apply a number of schemes for the control and limitation of our armaments in Europe. We began to do this amongst ourselves last autumn. It was part of a plan we worked out together in London and finally signed in Paris, when we joined to create what is now known as the Western European Union. With that agreement, and by signing it, we placed certain definite restrictions voluntarily upon ourselves. The Western German Government has undertaken those engagements, too, with us.

There has never been anything like it in the world before—a voluntary limitation of armaments, a voluntary system of control and inspection, and plans which are still being worked out for a pool of armaments and other arrangements of that kind. There is no reason why they should not be extended in some form from the West to the East; and maybe other plans could be worked out, too, to give confidence and security.

Negotiations and Principles

What we did last autumn, when we just had to, is a measure of what nations can contrive, if they just have to. And surely in this Hydrogen Age we must all have the will and the need. At the same time I believe that it facilitates negotiation if you make quite plain what are the principles from which you will not depart, even before the conference meets. And I would just like to spell out three such principles:

We are not prepared to break up NATO.

We will not be parted from the United States of America.

We will work for the unification of Germany.

Subject to these principles our position is negotiable.

Now I've spoken of policies and principles. In what spirit should we approach these discussions at Geneva? I suggest with a blend of care, and confidence, and courage.

Care, because diplomacy which is thorough, and thoughtful, and takes account of reality, and takes time, is always the best diplomacy. Some say—I read it in the press very often, hear it as well—that there is a new look in the policy of Soviet Russia. It may be so. I trust it will prove so. But I hope that nobody will accuse us of hanging back if we take a good look at the new look before we pronounce upon it either way.

And then there's confidence because we are a united nation, united within ourselves, and united with our friends. There is some criticism in these days, especially from behind the Iron Curtain, of what are called military blocs. So if I wanted to be controversial, which I don't, they ought to know something about them behind the Iron Curtain. But a close partnership of friendly and peaceful nations, provided it is defensive in character, is not a bad thing.

NATO Protects the Peace

That is precisely what NATO is—the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. In NATO small nations and large—the United States and Luxembourg, Canada and Belgium, Britain and Norway—all are bound together with the rest into defensive alliance. My friends, it has been under the protection of NATO that we have dwelt in peace these years.

And then the third element, courage, because if opportunity opens up at Geneva, we must not fear to seize it. It's not wise to expect too much of an international meeting like this which will be, we hope, the first of a series at varying levels. And yet, it is reasonable to look for a real, if modest, progress.

I will tell you, rather daring what I hope for—that by frank talks in private meetings—what I have called open covenants secretly arrived at—we may allay suspicions of our intentions.

To take one example, the suspicion held certainly east of the Iron Curtain of the free nations of the West. Of course it is true that we have become stronger in the last few years. But by doing this we build a guard for ourselves, not a menace to anybody else.

'The Harvest Can Yet Be Won'

Our first aim will be to allay mistrust on either side, and I hope that we might then agree to outline for the Foreign Secretaries detailed tasks on which they can be engaged. They might have a number of directives.

First, to bring about the unity of Germany; and as part of their instructions to work out plans for the security of Europe and, if possible, for the physical limitation of armaments on the spot. If we could agree on this, we should certainly get an increased measure of confidence for the future.

Finally, we should surely set to work to examine what the nations could do together to raise their standards of living and to increase the happiness of their people if the cold war were once thawed out, and if the skill of science was matched to the task of peace.

It cannot be done all at once. As some of you know, step by step has always been my motto in these troubled years. In that way, I am convinced that with perseverance the harvest can yet be won and all its sheaves be peaked.

JUDGING BY THE PRODUCT.

Fair Lies the Path

Helen Worden Erskine, New York newspaper writer and magazine editor, was in St. Louis recently for the national convention of Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalistic fraternity. Her late husband, John Erskine (1879-1951), celebrated professor of English at Columbia University, was the author of several widely read books, including The Private Life of Helen of Troy. His first book, Actaeon and Other Poems (John Lane Co.) was published in 1906. Here are selections from it.

The Old House

Unflagging still the home's deep pulse beat,
The voices dear, the constant murmur sweet
Of happy tasks and footsteps to and fro,
The earnest talk, the songs, the laughter low;
But oft at evening would my heart be free
From solemn questions what this house will be
In days too near, when this familiar door
We sadly close, and open it no more.
Fair lies the path, though fortune lead us far;
No backward wish the prosperous moment mar
When 'neath strange skies another hearth we light!
But here were joys that ne'er can seem so bright,
And for life's simpler sorrows, strength and cheer,
And once the darker Shadow touched us here:
So true a home, whate'er new fates may bring,
Lived in so long, some deep roots still must cling.
Some grace of life we cannot take away.
Henceforth whoever 'neath this roof shall stay,
Shall find old customs gently on him laid,
And unaccounted bliss his heart invade.
Or if for us a kindlier fate should be,
Once more the face of this old house to see,
And stung with deep regret, we find these halls
An empty shell, this home but soulless walls—
Still for our eyes the lifeless face shall keep Familiar lines of love, by time carved deep.

Parting

Not in thine absence, nor when face
To face, thy love means most to me,
But in the short-lived parting-space,
The cadence of felicity.

So music's meaning first is known,
Not while the bird sings all day long,
But when the last faint-falling tone
Divides the silence from the song.

Catullus

When we can sound the ocean from the beach,
Counting how oft the waves rise and return,
Then from thy words, Catullus, we may learn
All thy heart surging on the bounds of speech.
What swift design the lightning-fork would teach,
The startled eye not wholly can discern;
So into sudden words thy sorrows burn,
So darkness has them back beyond our reach.

Had thy love waned, clear were its history;
After the tide the cliff informs the skies
How the majestic waters scarred the stone;
But thou from life passed to proud mystery,
As when a rose escapes the praise of eyes
And all night long blooms to itself alone.

President's Personal Involvement Ends Dixon-Yates Contract but Also Provides Campaign Issue

Kefauver Keeping Attention on White House Role in Affair—Sherman Adams, Long an Opponent of TVA, Is Expected to Be Summoned to Inquiry.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 16.

THE DIXON-YATES contract is ending, as it began, at the personal direction of President Eisenhower.

When three of the five members of the Atomic Energy Commission opposed the deal 13 months ago, Mr. Eisenhower directed the AEC to negotiate the contract. Last fall, when a congressional committee was debating the issue, the President wrote a strong letter urging approval.

Finally, last Monday, after a conference with Mayor Frank Tobey of Memphis, Tenn., the President ordered "immediate steps" to terminate the contract.

President Eisenhower's personal involvement in the scheme to feed private power into the Tennessee Valley Authority system is one obvious reason why the dispute rages on. Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, among others, sees it as a good 1956 campaign issue.

New Substance to Disclosure.

Kefauver's anti-monopoly investigation, which kept right on despite the cancellation order, gave new substance to a disclosure by the Post-Dispatch last August that "some force within the White House" was leading a drive to ram through the controversial contract.

His investigation revealed that Mr. Eisenhower's own "chief of staff," Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams, was responsible for a mysterious three-day postponement of Securities and Exchange Commission hearings last month. The delay kept the House of Representatives from learning new details about the dual role of Adolphe H. Wenzell in early Dixon-Yates negotiations until after the House had finished debate on a crucial vote involving the contract.

Kefauver's subcommittee is expected to call Adams next week and demand a full explanation of his part in the secrecy-shrouded development of the private power scheme.

Adams, a bitter opponent of TVA when he was a member of Congress, later became Governor of New Hampshire, one of the New England states where feeling runs high that cheap TVA power has drawn away many of its industrial firms.

Avoided Compromise.

One of Adams's early achievements in the Dixon-Yates controversy was keeping Senator John Sherman Cooper (Rep.), Kentucky, from presenting to Mr. Eisenhower a compromise solution to the Dixon-Yates dispute. Under the compromise, TVA would finance its own new power plants without relying on congressional appropriations. It since has been adopted by the Administration as long-range policy.

Wenzell was a shadowy figure in the Dixon-Yates saga until painstaking investigation uncovered his key role, both as a consultant to the Bureau of the Budget and also as a vice president of First Boston Corp., the New York investment banking firm that eventually lined up $120,000,000 in loans to finance the Dixon-Yates plant.

After an investigation last August, the Post-Dispatch reported that preparation of the contract was "shrouded in secrecy" and that Budget Bureau staff members whispered of "a mysterious representative of eastern financial circles who was admitted to the inner sanctum of the Budget Bureau to work out details of the contract."

Architect of Deal.

It has been brought out now that Wenzell attended six important meetings at the AEC and the Budget Bureau in which the Dixon-Yates deal was worked out in the early months of 1954. Before that, in 1953, he outlined the essentials of what later became the Dixon-Yates scheme, in a report to the Budget Bureau on the financing of future TVA power plants. That report, pried out of the Budget Bureau by the Kefauver investigation, established Wenzell as the architect of the Dixon-Yates arrangement.

Yet the name of this key figure appeared not once in either of two chronologies released last Aug. 21 at the direction of the President, after bitter attacks on the secrecy that had surrounded the deal from the start.

No Word on Wenzell Meetings.

Both were supposed to tell the whole story, but both omitted all mention of several important meetings attended by Wenzell.

Concealment of Wenzell's employment by the Budget Bureau fitted the Dixon-Yates pattern. The draft contract itself was a carefully-guarded secret long after the chronologies purported to give all the important facts. Even the staff of TVA, supposed to be busy arranging contractual details for receiving power from the Dixon-Yates plant, did not get a look at a draft of the contract until last Aug. 31.

The secrecy was breached Oct. 12, when the Post-Dispatch reported it had obtained access to the contract and disclosed its provisions that gave a "virtual risk-free guarantee of earning 9 per cent on invested capital of $5,500,000." Administration spokesmen fiercely disputed this conclusion, but the SEC staff later said flatly that the contract provided for a guaranteed 9 per cent profit.

On Oct. 30, the Post-Dispatch reported it had obtained a copy of the contract and devoted four full pages to publishing its complete text with an accompanying explanation.

The AEC at last made the proposed contract public on Nov. 4, just a week before the commission signed the document with representatives of the Dixon-Yates holding company combine.

In the case of the Wenzell secret, his name first was linked publicly with Dixon-Yates last December, more than a year after he had outlined the basic elements of the deal as a special consultant to the Budget Bureau. Even then, it was only his last name that was mentioned, and two more months passed before his dual role in the affair was told publicly.

Mentioned in Memo.

Wenzell's name appeared in a memorandum, obtained with a mass of other documents from the Dixon-Yates interests by Joseph Volpe Jr., attorney for the state of Tennessee and other opponents of the power deal. Volpe submitted it as part of the record in SEC hearings on the $5,500,000 equity financing of the project.

The memorandum was signed by Tony G. Seal, a vice president of Ebasco Services, Inc., an engineering firm assigned to draw up preliminary designs and specifications and later hired to supervise construction of the Dixon-Yates plant. The memo, dated March 3, 1954, began:

"Monday night, March 1, I went to Washington at the request of the Budget Bureau people and Mr. R. W. Cook of the Atomic Energy Commission, to further discuss the recent proposal by Middle South Utilities and the Southern Co. (partners in the Dixon-Yates syndicate) to furnish 600 mw of power to TVA for the account of the AEC.

"Those present at the Budget Bureau included Mr. Wenzell, Mr. McCandless, Mr. Schwartz, Mr. Warner, Mr. Pilcher, Mr. Donnelley and Mr. Grahl and the undersigned."

Others in the group were all regular members of the Budget Bureau staff.

Went to Seal's Office

The memorandum said Wenzell later went to Seal's office and told him what had gone on at the Budget Bureau after Seal left.

Volpe produced the memorandum when Eugene A. Yates, board chairman of the Southern Co., was on the stand. Yates, who has been likened to a friendly old Saint Bernard, answered questions about it with his usual grandfatherly aplomb.

But when Yates had finished testifying and returned to his regular seat next to one of his attorneys, he showed clearly that he knew the dynamite contained in the document.

In a harsh whisper, he was heard to say: "That memorandum!" and to add a profane exclamation.

The full significance of the appearance of "Mr. Wenzell" in the memorandum was made clear in a speech on the Senate floor last February 18 by Senator Lister Hill (Dem.), Alabama. He told of Wenzell's dual part in the negotiations and called for a full investigation.

"It is startling indeed to find that an officer of the First Boston Corp., who presumably that very day was serving as an adviser and consultant to the Bureau of the Budget, later the same day met with Mr. Seal to discuss the status of the negotiations," Hill said.

"But even more startling is the fact that the First Boston Corp. was arranging the financing on a deal in which one of its officers was advising the Government, and apparently he had access to important confidential information concerning governmental policies and actions concerning the transaction."

Hill's speech attracted only passing attention at the time, but when Volpe called Wenzell to testify June 13 in SEC hearings on the Dixon-Yates debt financing, the pressure began to mount. It can be seen in retrospect that the decision to call Wenzell as a witness was the beginning of the end of Dixon-Yates.

A step-by-step review of events leading up to the President's cancellation order indicates that the Wenzell story had as much to do with it as did the decision of Memphis to build its own steam plant. The stated reason for the cancellation order was solely that Memphis no longer would need TVA power and that the Dixon-Yates plant at West Memphis, Ark., thus would have no demand for its output.

Month's Developments.

Here are the significant developments in the month preceding the cancellation order:

June 10—SEC scheduled testimony of Wenzell and Duncan R. Linsley, chairman of the executive committee of First Boston for Monday, June 13.

June 11—Adams telephoned SEC Chairman J. Sinclair Armstrong at his home, asking whether the SEC would consider a "brief adjournment" of the hearings. Armstrong has testified Adams told him some Justice Department lawyers familiar with the case were out of the city but wanted a chance to object to Wenzell's and Linsley's testifying. Armstrong said he could not remember whether Adams named the lawyers.

June 13—The SEC ordered suspension of the hearing "for a short period of time, subject to call by the commission." The commission secretary, Orval L. Du Bois, called the order "virtually unprecedented." He said he had been directed to explain it only by saying there were "several procedural questions involved that the commission wanted to consider before the hearing goes forward again." There was no mention of Adams's request in the SEC minutes.

June 13—The House Appropriations Committee reported out a bill knocking out a $6,500,000 item requested by the Administration for a power line to connect the Dixon-Yates plant at West Memphis, Tenn., with the TVA system and applying the same amount to the long-sought TVA Fulton steam plant.

June 15—Adams called Armstrong again. Armstrong has testified that Adams told him the Government attorneys had decided not to intervene in the case. The SEC ordered resumption of the hearing as soon as possible.

Power Line Funds Restored.

June 16—House knocked out the Fulton plant appropriation and restored funds for the Dixon-Yates transmission line. On the same day, the SEC hearing resumed, with Linsley and Wenzell as witnesses.

June 16—Thomas H. Allen, president of the Memphis Light, Gas and Water Division, said Memphis would go ahead and build its own power plant unless the Senate reversed the House action on Dixon-Yates. Mayor Tobey said the same thing and added that Memphis would have to have assurance by July 1 that the Fulton plant would be built or else go ahead with its own plant.

June 21—Gov. Frank G. Clement of Tennessee, under questioning by Senator Hill in an Appropriations subcommittee, said Wenzell "by his own admission . . . was serving two masters." Clement accused Budget Director Hughes of "wilful concealment."

June 23—The special Kefauver subcommittee was created, with full powers to investigate the Dixon-Yates deal. Up to then, Kefauver's fellow Democrats had blocked his efforts to begin a new inquiry.

June 23—The Memphis city commission voted unanimously to proceed with construction of a municipal plant.

June 27—Hughes told the Kefauver subcommittee Wenzell had no policy role in the Dixon-Yates deal. Hughes said he still did not believe that First Boston was financial agent for Dixon-Yates.

Eisenhower Blocks Kefauver.

June 28—President Eisenhower personally blocked Kefauver's attempts to get a copy of Wenzell's report to the Budget Bureau from the bureau's files.

June 28—Hughes consented to appear again before the Kefauver subcommittee at 8 o'clock the following evening.

June 29—President Eisenhower, at his regular news conference, supported Hughes and said Wenzell had been brought to Washington "as a technical adviser in the very early days when none of us here knew about the bookkeeping methods of the TVA or anything else. He was brought in as a technical adviser and nothing else, and before this contract was ever even proposed." The President said Wenzell "was never called in or asked a single thing about the Yates-Dixon contract."

June 29—Senator Kefauver sent the President a three-page letter saying Mr. Eisenhower's remarks showed "that even at this late date you have not been fully and accurately informed." Kefauver gave the President a summary of Wenzell's testimony before the SEC.

June 29—Later, the White House issued an amplifying statement admitting that Wenzell gave the Budget Bureau technical advice from Jan. 14 to April 3, 1954, "that entered into preliminary exploratory discussions that the Atomic Energy Commission and the Bureau of the Budget were conducting at that time." It was noted that Wenzell left the bureau one week before Dixon-Yates made its first definite Proposal for a contract.

June 30—TVA informed Hughes that Memphis had decided to build its own plant and that this eliminated the only practical outlet for Dixon-Yates power.

President Orders Study.

June 30, at 7 p.m.—The White House announced that the President, in the light of the Memphis action, had requested Hughes "to confer promptly with the AEC and the TVA to determine whether it is in the interest of the people of the area now to continue or to cancel the Dixon-Yates contract."

June 30, at 8 p.m.—Hughes testified before the Kefauver subcommittee.

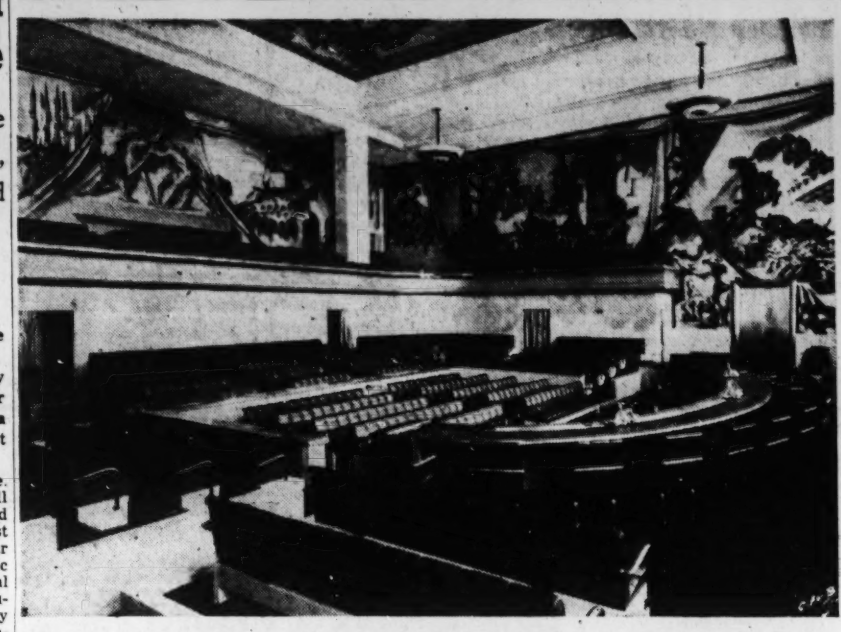

The rest was denouement. The final order to cancel the contract came last Monday, July 11, at the conclusion of a meeting of the President and Mayor Tobey. The White House several times has said the President has preferred all along that Memphis build its own plant.

Ever since the President's order to restudy the Dixon-Yates deal, the Administration has been giving ground. It finally agreed to release the Wenzell report, establishing him as the architect of the Dixon-Yates scheme.

It also, after SEC Chairman Armstrong had first refused to say whether there had been any White House pressure, let him tell about the Sherman Adams telephone calls.

As one of the investigators put it: "We've got them on the run. They've admitted White House intervention. Every time they refuse to talk now, they blacken the record still more."

Russian Agriculture a Problem, But Small Chance of 'Collapse'

Stalin four years to eliminate opposition within the Kremlin and he did not really consolidate his power until the beginning of World War II, as shown by the purge trials and the frequent "cleansing" of the party membership in the late 1930s. Whether emergence of a single dictator would mean that Russia is in a serious economic plight or whether it would be the result of a powerful personality like Stalin is an unanswerable question.

FOR REASONS of its own, the Kremlin is opening Russia to foreign inspection, something Stalin apparently did not dare to do. This is official policy and applies to Westerners, who have high standards of comparisons in their own countries, as well as Orientals who may be impressed by the progress a backward nation has made in the past 35 years.

Travel is not restricted, and Russians, no longer fearing punishment if seen with a foreigner, are friendly and curious. For Americans accustomed to creature comforts and a variety of foods, trips outside the large cities are strenuous but richly rewarding.

Any extended trip will convince the Westerner that the Kremlin needs a long period of peace to finish its armament program and develop the Russian economy.

Analysts of Russian military organizations, such as Brig. Gen. Thomas R. Phillips (retired), of the Post-Dispatch, assert that by channelizing their best materials, scientific brains and manpower to nuclear and thermonuclear projects and the creation of a strategic air command, the Russians can equal or surpass the American defense forces-in-being within three years, unless the Administration increases the tempo of our production. If the Kremlin could be assured of a period of peace for the next eight or 10 years, it could slow down its accelerated arms production rate and divert men and materials to civilian production. Many competent persons, including officials high in the Administration, believe this is the basic reason for the intensified Russian peace campaign and explains to some extent the present more friendly attitude of Kremlin officials.

These officials do not imply Russia would start a war after three years under its present arms program or after eight or 10 years if that program could be stretched out. They assert, however, that world domination remains the Communist goal and that Communist propaganda, subversion and infiltration would continue, to attempt to get the United States out of Europe, Africa and Asia.

The Russian visitors to the United States will see an expanding economy that can support a large military program and at the same time produce sufficient industrial goods for this country plus sizable exports abroad and agricultural surpluses.

A government official recently remarked that he hoped Russian visitors could come by airplane from Newfoundland and enter the United States by way of New England so they could see the factories there before landing in New York. Thereafter, he said, they should fly—perferably at low altitudes—over upstate New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio before going to Chicago; then they should inspect the farming areas of the Middle West.

The Russian farm leaders will make such a trip and then go to California and come to Washington by the southern route. If they follow a recently acquired Russian hobby, they will carry cameras. They will carry back pictures of an economy under which agriculture overbalances industrial production. This has resulted in billions of dollars of government holdings of basic farm crops, something almost incomprehensible to the non-American world.

The big Four conferees will have their first opportunity to see and appraise each other at Geneva. The Russian and American farm groups will have similar opportunities to see and appraise the countries they are visiting. Geneva is likely to be the first of a number of international meetings at the summit. The farm visitors to the grass roots could symbolize the beginning of a much wider understanding among the peoples of free and the Communist worlds.

RED CHINA NEEDS DRAFT NOW, SAYS DEFENSE MINISTER

TOKYO, July 16 (AP)—Communist China must speedily adopt compulsory military service, Defense Minister Peng Tehhuai told the National People's Congress today, the Peiping radio reported.

Asking Congress for approval of a compulsory draft, Peng said voluntary enlistments "no longer serve current and future requirements."

A congress committee has worked on a draft law since last February. The state council recently approved revisions.

Peng, who is also vice premier, said a volunteer system was satisfactory during the Korean war.

But under "conditions prevailing," Peng said, Red China "must speedily build up powerful, modernized armed force. We must have not only a mighty army, but also a mighty air force and a mighty navy."

Peng said the army must "in the internal situation strive to consolidate the people's democratic dictatorship and vigorously build up strength for the liberation of the Chinese territory of Taiwan (Formosa)."

He said the army, externally, "must be on guard against imperialist aggression."

JAPANESE WRITER REPORTS GERM WAR EXPERIMENTS

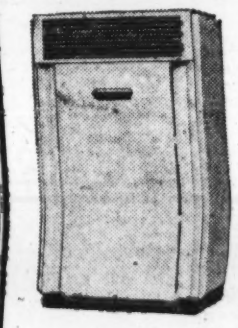

TOKYO, July 16 (AP)—A Tokyo magazine, Bungei Shunju, today published an article by a Japanese telling of alleged Japanese germ warfare experiments in Manchuria in World War II.

Editor Goro Kanbayashi said he believed the story but admitted it "might be totally false." The Soviet Union in 1950 had charged Japan with using germ warfare and declared Japanese Lt. Gen. Shiro Ishii was in charge of such work.

A Foreign Office spokesman told reporters: "We don't know anything about this germ warfare center."

Author Hiroshi Akiyama said 1500 to 2000 persons were killed in germ experiments on human guinea pigs at an experimental center operated by Gen. Ishii 25 miles south of Harbin.

Stage Story Makes Good Summer Fare

THE FLOWER GIRLS, by Clemence Dane. (Norton, 629 pgs., $4.95.)

R. E. HASWELL

IN 1947, after his mother died (so goes the story) Jacy Florister went to London to investigate his father's family, a long-time desire which he had been unable previously to satisfy because of his mother's bitterness toward the husband she had divorced when Jacy was an infant. Jacy had already had a career as a child movie star and was then a hopeful playwright. About all he knew of his British relatives was that they were also connected with the theatre.

What he walked into, so unsuspectingly, is an extensive set of fascinatingly individual people that include two uncles, three aunts (the Flower Girls, first generation), and six cousins (one illegitimate). One uncle is a theater owner and producer, the other England's Lionel Barrymore. All three aunts are established stage stars, as is the husband of the one who is married. One cousin is on radio, one is a stage designer, one a model, and one is England's Ethel Barrymore.

And then there is his father, whom his mother had led him to believe long dead, but who turns out to be a noted dramatic critic, at the moment buried in Celtic antiquities but soon to return to his profession.

He also finds most of a play by England's most popular playwright, killed just at the end of the war, which needs to be edited and finished. Jacy, it seems, had been typist for the author in Hollywood when he had been working on the first outline, and so was equipped to finish the play.

IF ALL this seems somewhat unbelievable—that Jacy could have lived 27 years without catching some tidbit of all this fame—one's doubts are soon lost in the fascination of meeting these people and watching Jacy feel his way blindly but sensitively through the tangle of conflicting ambitions and personal ties. One comes to accept the impossibilities as one used to in "The Amateur Gentleman" and "The Broad Highway," to which "The Flower Girls" bears a generic resemblance in spite of 50 years' difference in time.

One can still question, however, the current tendency to make a plot depend on the combined ignorance of reader and hero about the circumstances of the story, particularly when the ultimate revelation does not explain what has happened, as in a "whodunit," but determines what happens next. Good plots are more solidly based.

Despite this weakness, "The Flower Girls" is the best big package of summer fiction in a long while.

LEAPS THE LIVE THUNDER, by Gerald Laggard. (William Morrow, 256 pgs., $3.50.)

LT. RACKHAM BALLAROL finds guerrilla warfare under the auspices of Confederate Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest very exciting because in addition to being awed by "Bed's" constant snortin' an' cussin' he is always running into a traveling carnival show between and even sometimes during battles. These are lucky events for Kelsie Cochran, featured dancer of the show, but believe it or not, the owner of the carnival is a wicked feller who would rather make a pass at Kelsie than wax his mustache, and he jest hates Rackham no end.

The author of this folderol about Ballarol is a native of California and as a consequence all his Rebels sound like Amos 'n' Andy. There is, however, one interesting character, a large yellow cat named "Colonel Turpentine," owned by Rackham and used by him mainly, it appears, to shine his boots. Rackham says live cat's fur's the best thing in this here world to put a polish on a boot. Your reviewer can only add, "jest don't never try hit with no Siamese cats, bo', 'cause hit haint hailthy."

War Emotions, Theme of Searching French Novel

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN

Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch

THE NAVIGATOR, by Jules Roy. (Knopf, 177 pgs., $3.)

"THE NAVIGATOR" by the the French novelist Jules Roy is a searching commentary on the nature of patriotism, esprit de corps, courage and cowardice, as exemplified by a group of Free French flyers operating from a base in England during the last war.

Ripault, the young navigator who gives the story its title, is the sole survivor of a collision between two bombers which occurs over the landing field. As a result he feels a strange detachment from his fellow aviators even though he was in no way responsible for the accident. This emotion, however, is purely subjective. His associates treat him as they always did and continue to do so until it becomes known that he has declined to accept an assignment on another mission on the plea of illness.

Actually he does not trust the pilot who has a reputation for bungling. But even here it is not a failure of nerve that restrains him—as his comrades suspect—but a subtle distinction that he makes between dying uselessly and dying significantly. As it happens another pilot falls under the suspicion of the base commander when this pilot confesses that he can no longer see the field lights when he comes in for a landing. The commander tells him: "You'll either see the lights or break your neck."

Presumably the Commander is merely applying a harsh therapy intended to cure a strictly psychological condition. Ripault is convinced that the pilot—for whatever reason—actually is suffering from a kind of blindness and offers to go up with him as navigator on the next strike. The mission meets with disaster even though Ripault successfully aids the pilot in getting off the ground.

What's involved is the conflict between a group code of behavior and the individual reactions, differing with each person, to the dangers and stresses of war. Even when one readily concedes that honor requires sacrifice it is evident that honor is sometimes invoked as a means of escaping criticism for being too "soft." Such apparently is the base commander's reason for being so arbitrary with a subordinate who should have been hospitalized or retired.

"The Navigator" is a sensitively and sparely written novella with many implications. So much is left to the reader, however, that it is easy for him to draw an inexact set of inferences. It is also possible that the story would have had a greater spiritual resonance if the author had supplied a little more interpretation. The original French may have had this quality, but the English translation by Mervyn Savill appears to be an excellent one. It is still a remarkably engrossing story.

Siegfried's Fresh Look at Us

AMERICA AT MID-CENTURY, by Andre Siegfried, translated by Margaret Ledesert. (Harcourt, Brace and Co., 357 pgs., $5.75.)

Reviewed by

IRVING DILLIARD

ANY LIST of books about the United States as seen through the eyes of visitors from overseas would certainly include "America Comes of Age," which a warm friend from France, Andre Siegfried, published in 1927. That was 28 years ago and no one needs to be told that a lot has happened in the United States since Coolidge.

At the age of 80, Andre Siegfried has been back to visit us again, to travel about the country he analyzed so keenly in the '20s, to note down his impressions and to write them out in a new inventory. "America at Mid-Century" is the result. It is most appropriate reading for the week of the Four Power meeting in Geneva.

The plan of the book is simple and makes for easy reading. After a quick review of the "geographical aspect" of the United States, the author moves rapidly through what he calls the "formation, composition and psychology" of the American people. Then he takes up our economy, with chapters on the labor force, mass production, the threats to American capitalism, the 1929 crash and the subsequent depression, the New Deal and the "welfare state."

A special section deals with the social background and the formation of public opinion which he regards as the all-controlling factor in the United States. Without public opinion in the United States, he writes, "nothing can be achieved or endured, and its veto is final." It is clear that in Siegfried's opinion nowhere else in the world is the view of the individual of such importance.

THE perceptive Frenchman presents an excellent review of the 1952 campaign. Obviously neither a Republican nor a Democrat, he writes with the detachment of an observer. Asserting that "what Eisenhower says matters little," Siegfried concludes:

"It was not the General's program, vague, unstable and even contradictory, which swept all before it in an irresistible wave, but the extraordinary radiance of his whole being, though he is not outstanding physically. This radiance was expressed in his smile, his contact with people, even in the simple fact of his presence. The masses saw in him a leader, who, by his destiny, his honesty and his simplicity, would govern and administer better, settle national and international problems better, quite simply, because he was himself."

Andre Siegfried selects the words "I shall go to Korea!" as the work of genius on the part of one of the Eisenhower campaign speech writers, and in evaluating them says: "Perhaps this was the only real campaign pledge Eisenhower made."

The 1952 election was a victory for Eisenhower, he thinks, rather than a defeat for Adlai E. Stevenson, who rates high in the Siegfried appraisal. This is demonstrated, the French observer writes, by the failure of the Republicans to win anything like a commensurate victory in Congress.

He thinks the G.O.P. right wing in Congress probably more representative of the party than Eisenhower himself.

Taken as a whole, "America at Mid-Century" is an optimistic book, but here and there are words of regret that the United States is not doing more to spread its prosperity, its belief in freedom and its moral power to the rest of the world. Andre Siegfried hopes for more of this in the years immediately ahead.

East - West Dialogue

THE BENT WORLD, by J. V. Langmead Casserley. (Oxford University Press, 286 pgs., $4.)
RECOVERY OF FAITH, by Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan. (Harper & Brothers, 205 pgs., $3.)

DONALD GRANT

READ together, these two books form a dialogue on the subject of religion and the modern world. Casserley, an Anglican clergyman, is an orthodox Christian; Radhakrishnan—vice president of India and a professional philosopher—finds any orthodoxy too confining.

Both agree, however, that people pretty much act from belief, and if they believe in nothing worth-while they are likely to act from belief in the worthless.

"The wave of secular and skeptical liberalism that has swept across the Western world since the eighteenth century," says Casserley, "has created a tragic void in the Western soul. . . . There would be very little temptation to believe in Marxism if modern men and women could only be delivered from the misleading — and, logically speaking, quite unnecessary—prejudices and attitudes that make it impossible for them to believe in Christianity."

Or Radhakrishnan: "Belief and behavior go together. If we believe in blood, race and soil, our world will be filled with Belsens and Buchenwalds. . . . We need a faith which will assert the power of spirit over things and find significance in a world in which science and organization seem to have lost their relationship to traditional values."

Recovery of belief in the worth - while, for Casserley, means a return to "theological orthodoxy." For Radhakrishnan, on the other hand, "All religious proclaim as their goal the unification of humanity. . . . We do not want a new religion but we need a new and enlarged understanding of the old religions. . . . Our unity is of the heart and spirit."

Certainly Radhakrishnan's is the broader sweep, a glimpse at "The great lights . . . the Buddha, Socrates, Zoroaster, Jesus . . ." India's vice president has long been an advocate of the reconciliation of the highest human values, East and West.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

NEW YORK, July 16 (AP)

THE nation's prosperity was underscored this week by surging income reports from big business. Industrial output was strong. Pay was high. Jobs were plentiful. Meanwhile, reports of a bumper 1955 crop gave housewives hope for lower food prices in the future. They could even look for cheaper coffee in the fall, judging by reports from South America.

Mr. and Mrs. America were spending money in stores at a record rate for this time of year. Cut-price sales helped many merchants sell more than in the previous holiday-shortened week. In dollars, retail trade was 3 to 7 per cent higher than in the like week a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet estimated. The boom looked as solid as ever.

Consumer Debt Concern.

Economists, those weathermen of business, scanned the horizon for storm clouds and came up with nothing new. Concern continued about the mounting tide of consumer debt. Straws-in-the-wind were blowing both ways on this question.

But there was nothing dubious about the earnings reports from the nation's giants of business and industry. They came like a blare of triumph. The world's largest utility, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported a solid gain for the second quarter. Another monster, International Business Machines Corp., came up with record half yearly earnings. The nation's third largest steel producer, Republic Steel Corp., reported near-record sales and operating revenues for the second quarter. "There is every evidence at the moment that fourth quarter operations will be at a high rate," said President C. M. White. Two smaller steel firms reported earnings from triple to nearly five times the earnings for the first half of 1954.

Steel Log-Jam.

The biggest order log-jams in history prevailed in the steel industry, said the magazine "Iron Age." Current operations, still rebounding from the brief strike of July 1, were scheduled at 92.5 per cent of capacity from last week's actual rate of 85.9. Steel production hit a record for June and the second quarter. Steel's best customer, the automobile industry, reported the output of cars and trucks was the highest in six weeks. Passenger car production and sales seemed headed for new records in July. While Ford and Chevrolet continued their ding-dong battle for first place, Chrysler raced along on its comeback, reporting more cars built in the first half of 1955 than in all 1954.

Auto industry experts figured this year's new record may be close to 7,500,000 passenger cars, smashing 1950's record of about 6,600,000 units. So far, car retailers have sold about 4,000,000 cars. But the big volume is being achieved by price slashes at retail. Manufacturers were offering cash bonuses to dealers from around $25 to $250 for each sale above a specified number.

The sales drive was aimed at moving the outgoing models before the 1956 models begin arriving from factories.

For the first time in the nation's history, personal income reached an annual rate of 301 billion dollars in May. Total factory payrolls increased 1½ billion at a seasonally adjusted rate. National production of goods and services ballooned to a record rate of nearly 380 billion dollars a year in the second quarter. June industrial output topped June 154 by 14 points.

LONG-TERM U.S. ISSUES FIRM, SHORTER EASE

Some Turnpike Bonds Improve After New York Rejects Bid for Its Offer.

NEW YORK, July 16 (AP)—Long term government bonds held steady and intermediate issues eased this week after the Treasury reported "highly successful" results in the reopening of the 40-year 3 per cent issue.

Railroad bonds tended to improve and convertibles backed down in a mixed corporate market. Profit taking hit some of the Iron Curtain bonds, which had risen sharply as investors looked ahead hopefully to the Big Four talks in Geneva.

The Treasury's 40-year 3s and 30-year 3¼s stepped ahead at midweek but fell a bit on Friday. As a result, the 3¼s wound up exactly where they started, and the 3s managed a gain of 1-32 for the week. The victory loan 2½s were bid down 10-32 during the week to 95 8-32.

Tax-Exempts Quiet.

Trading in tax-exempt state and city bonds continued relatively slow. Some turnpike issues improved by ¼ to ½ a point after the state of New York rejected bids for $125,000,000 of throughway guaranteed bonds on Tuesday. Dealers pointed out that some of the money that might have gone into the throughway bonds was diverted to the current backlog of turnpike financing. Otherwise the municipal market remained pretty much in the doldrums.

DIMINISHING VIGOR, CAUTION MARK 9TH WEEK STOCK RISE

Brokers Find Much Switching From One Stock to Another, and One Group to Other.

By RADER WINGET

NEW YORK, July 16 (AP)—The stock market this week scored its ninth straight weekly advance despite growing hesitancy. Such a sustained advance is an unusual occurance, and the steepness of the rise adds to the uniqueness of the performance. The whole thing, however, was put into new perspective this week by hesitancy and caution seen in almost every session.

The market this year has been advancing with great forward strides. Three times there have been corrective reactions, and three times there have been sharp recoveries that have carried the market still higher than before.

The last reaction ended in mid-May, and the market since has advanced to record high peaks in the longest and hardest forward drive of the year.

In Wall Street it is recognized that the current bull market boom that has been going strongly since 1949 is the greatest ever known. Brokers don't think this is an unusual thing in the light of the record pace of business and industry in America. There never has been anything like it before.

In the vital steel industry, for instance, the magazine "Iron Age" said steel producers are swamped by one of the biggest log jams of orders in their history.

All of this has been translated into mounting earnings and dividends which are beginning to appear in greater numbers for the second quarter and first half. They make excellent reading, and they encourage higher prices for stocks. After all, earnings and dividends are the final arbiters of stock prices.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks this week managed to gain only 30 cents, the smallest net gain in the nine-week rise. The average closed the week at $174.30, only a slight distance from the record top established in the previous week.

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks lost .95 of a point on the week, closing at 460.23. The 20 rails gained 1.52 points at 159.17 and the 15 utilities rose .39 to 65.15 approaching the year's high of 65.52.)

The week's trades totaled 11,606,683 shares, compared with 11,565,490 for the previous period (4 days). Of the 1422 issues dealt in, 700 closed the week higher, 540 lower and 182 unchanged.

Brokers this week found a lot of switching from one stock to another and from one group to another. This apparently was an effort to seek protection in case of a reaction. In other words, an attempt to get into stocks that would be the least affected by a drop in the general market price level.

400,000-TON SUGAR SURPLUS UP FOR SALE BY MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, July 16 (AP) —Mexico is trying to find somebody to buy 400,000 tons of sugar. An excess of any foodstuff is something new for Mexico.

Mexico was an importer of sugar until six years ago. Its annual production, then around 500,000 tons, began to climb until this year's crop is expected to top 900,000 tons.

Russia has taken about 20,000 tons this year, but can't be depended on to take much more. Indonesia was interested but hates to see its unfavorable trade balance increased.

Mexico asked the international sugar board to increase its export quota of 75,000 tons to 150,000 tons this year. Instead, the board reduced the quota to 69,000 tons because world production is above consumption.

That leaves the United States. Mexico, through its ambassador in Washington, asked the United States to increase Mexico's present quota of 11,445 tons to 160,000 tons. The matter is still pending.

Mexico is a good customer of United States exports but Cuba, whose main crop is sugar, is our largest foreign supplier.

About 1200 students enrolled and 150 received credit applicable toward a degree.

FAULTY FIELDING LEADS TO CARDS' 5-1 LOSS TO PIRATES

Nashua Wins the Arlington; Gold Cup to Rejected

ARROYO REMOVED IN SIXTH WHEN BUCS MAKE FOUR RUNS; BIRDS GET ONLY FIVE HITS

By Bob Broeg
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

PITTSBURGH, July 16—The defense rested for the Cardinals again today, unfortunately, and the offense took a mid-afternoon siesta, too, an unhappy combination that resulted in a 5-1 Redbird defeat at the hands of the last-place Pittsburgh Pirates and the National League's newest tamale, Lino Donoso.

Senor Donoso, a dusky Ken Raffensberger and a non-expectorating Preacher Roe, fluttered an occasional knuckler with a slinky curve and a sneaky fast ball, all thrown, of course, with a left hand that permitted the Cardinals just five hits.

The 32-year-old Cuban rookie, finishing what he started for the first time in the big league, was scored on only in the sixth, then there was a question of what the outcome might have been or how far the Havana perfecto would have gone, if it hadn't been for a continuance of the bad defensive baseball that also damaged the Cardinals yesterday at Brooklyn.

Oh, Those Errors.

Then it was Bill Virdon and Nelson Burbrink who committed the fielding faults that hurt. This time Wally Moon, Alex Grammas and Boyer—yes, especially Ken Boyer—provided the off-color plays that cost Luis Arroyo a chance to outduel his Latin-American rival. Boyer, described as the greatest thing since Pie Traynor, played his poorest on the same strip of Forbes Field real estate on which Traynor won Hall of Fame recognition.

So Arroyo, seeking a fourth victory over the Pirates and an eleventh of the season, was forced to take a fourth defeat. Pittsburgh, collecting 11 hits, thus gave a second big league triumph to slender, easy-does-it Donoso, who previously had failed three times as a starter since his recall from Hollywood. In the Pacific Coast league, the loosey-goosey, lollipop lefthander had a 19-8 record last year, but in spring training with the Pirates he'd looked like . . . well, remember Memo Luna?

Fans Five.

Donoso, who owned only seven strikeouts and had walked 13 in his previous 28 innings, reversed the pattern this muggy afternoon as he fanned five—he couldn't blacken Grandma's eye with his fast ball—and passed just one.

The walk came in the first inning to Stan Musial, but two were out because Boyer, after opening with a single, had been sent in motion on a "2-0" pitch to The Man. It was low, ball three, but Boyer was pegged out by Catcher Jack Shepard. And after Musial walked, Rip Repulski looked at a third strike—for the first of two straight times.

Then in the home half there was a resumption of the misplays that at least momentarily have stalled a Redbird surge toward the first division.

With two out Roberto Clemente skipped a grounder on which Boyer gave ground, the ball bounding past him for a scratch hit, Clemente taking second on a fumble by Repulski. Then Frank Thomas lifted a high fly to short center, plenty high for Moon to gather it in if he had run in a straight line, but Wally traveled by the great circle route, it seemed, and the ball fell in front of him for a run-scoring single.

The score stayed that way, Arroyo working his way out of difficulty, until Boyer teed off in the sixth to hit the light tower next to the scoreboard in left field.

The tie was short-lived, though, for the Pirates won it with the Cardinals' help in the home half of the sixth.

Elusive Sphere.

Thomas, first up, singled past Boyer. Shepard bunted into a force play, but Johnny O'Brien bounced one just to Boyer's right. The third baseman reached backhanded half-heartedly, it appeared, and—to his surprise—felt nothing. The ball went through for a tainted double on which Shepard stopped at third.

Pitching carefully to Dale Long, Arroyo issued a walk that loaded the bases and Dick Groat lifted a two-run single to short center. On Donoso's grounder to Alex Grammas with the infield pulled in, the shortstop made a between-hop grab of the grounder and threw high to the plate, Long sliding across safely on the late fielder's choice.

Off Willard Schmidt, Eddie O'Brien singled home the fourth run of the inning, a run Donoso didn't need because, as mentioned, the Cardinals' offense was as tired as their defense.

Redbird Notes.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 16.

HARVEY (6-9) HADDIX and Floyd (2-2) Wooldridge of the Cardinals probably will be opposed by righthanders Elroy (0-2) Face and Ron (6-11) Kline of the Pirates in Sunday's doubleheader.

Johnny O'Brien of the Buccos' bonus twins was forced out with pulled leg muscle just after his sixth inning double.

Manager Harry Walker and two Cardinal coaches who formerly were with the Pirates, Bill Posedel and Johnny Riddle, tonight attended a dinner for Charles (Chilly) Doyle, veteran Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph baseball writer. The Sharon (Pa.) Irishman, a former minor league shortstop, has covered the Pirates—and lived and died with them—for 41 years.

Only 2570 cash customers attended the game, about 300 the dinner.

Athletics Drop Sain, He May Leave Game

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 16 (UP)—Ex-Yankee pitcher Johnny Sain received his unconditional release from the Kansas City Athletics today and probably will retire from baseball as he wanted to do at the start of this season.

Sain, 36, was acquired from New York by the A's May 11 on a deal which sent Outfielder Enos Slaughter to Kansas City and Pitcher Sonny Dickson and an undisclosed amount of cash to New York.

Sain appeared in 25 games for K. C., had a 2-5 won-lost record and gave up 29 earned runs for a 5.60 average. He pitched for the Athletics for the last time yesterday against Baltimore.

Sain indicated to New York Yankee officials at the start of the season that he wanted to retire from baseball and devote his time to a successful automobile company he has in Walnut Ridge, Ark.

An Amazing Quail: Holds To Dog in Sparse Cover.

MISSOURI bird-hunters will watch with interest an experiment being conducted by the State Conservation Commission. Seventy-five pairs of Coturnix quail are being studied by the Commission and if all goes well, birds will be released, probably in the prairie sections of western and northern Missouri, where the commission's official publication, the Missouri Conservationist, says cover conditions are "making it tough for native bobwhites."

Coturnix, the publication informs, are the quail mentioned several times in the Bible, and are different from the Missouri bobwhite in that they seem to prefer what our quail consider poor cover. Coturnix, the magazine says, hold well to dogs, take off like rockets and afford wing-shooting as tricky as dove-shooting.

If all that is said about the Coturnix is true, they must be unusual birds. In the first place Coturnix have done a big job in persuading the Commission that breeding and stocking with them might be a plausible way of giving the state's many thousands of bird-hunters something to shoot at. It long has been known that the Missouri conservation people will have nothing to do with any project to breed and stock with native quail.

What the Book Says You Have to Believe.

BOBWHITE quail are bred, pen-raised and released in many states, including Illinois, but in Missouri the men in charge insist that the birds can't survive in wild conditions after being pen-raised. There have been sporadic efforts by private organizations to raise and release quail. Missouri quail hunters reported some good results and some bad when new-born chicks were released with a wild mom and pop. The idea was that the young birds, released before they had a chance to learn the secret of their birth in an incubator, might take to wild, wild ways. We had the privilege of releasing a wild pair and a nest of chicks on a Jefferson county farm and there was more whistling and bird sign in the fields for the next two years than there had been in 10 previous seasons. But three bad summers with too much heat and not enough rain thinned the covey until now you rarely hear a whistle.

The Commission's policy has been to preach that quail can't thrive or even survive without better habitat. And while the excellent Conservationist presents a convincing and persuasive story, the farmers have not been converted. They keep on trying to make a living, cleaning out fence corners and grazing cattle. And so, despite very interesting reading, quail hunting has deteriorated until it is only a memory in many parts of the state.

Perhaps Coturnix quail are the answer. According to the Conservationist, "the quail of Exodus migrated and landed in a desert region," and if they did all right in a desert they may do well in the poor-cover areas of Missouri. But if the Coturnix want a tip, they'd better not stand too well to dog in that poor cover. They'll wind up in frying pans with sawmill gravy before they can say habitat. And in some conservation circles you're a meat-hound if you don't keep on saying habitat.

Magic Wand Is a Good Thing if You Can Get It.

DON NEWCOMBE, the Brooklyn Dodgers and Leo Durocher and his Giants will suffice as proof that there's no magic wand that a manager in baseball can wave to do his bidding. A few neurotic people were prattling excitedly about what Harry Walker had done for the Cardinals after Larry Jackson, a good young pitcher, had handcuffed an injury-hobbled Dodger team. Then Big Newk came along, Duke Snider returned to duty, Cardinal pitching went sour again, eager young players fumbled, and the Redbirds looked like awkward boys.

Eddie Stanky didn't have a magic wand and Harry Walker doesn't have one, either. Stanky was a hard worker, Walker also is an eager perfectionist. Hard work started by Stanky and continued by Walker, plus experience, plus a pitching staff, will take the Cardinals out of the doldrums and make them a pennant-contender again. But it will take time, and there will be bad days along with the good ones.

Durocher can tell you about magic wands. His worked when Dusty Rhodes was hitting home runs every time you looked up and when Johnny Antonelli and Marv Grissom and Hoyt Wilhelm were getting the other teams out. It's the same Durocher and the same team, but there's no substitute for hits at the right time and tight pitching.

The Cardinals are learning, though. They learned recently why one of their good pitchers was being hit so hard. He was tipping off his pitch. He was throwing his fast ball one way, his curve another. Wouldn't you think a manager and three coaches would have noticed that? They didn't notice it. It was an enemy coach or manager who noticed what the pitcher was doing. Word spread until it was common knowledge long before the information leaked to the Cardinal dugout.

It wasn't like that when Mike Gonzalez was on the Cardinal bench. When a good pitcher was being hit unreasonably hard, the canny Senor would know something was wrong.

"I don't know what he is, but I tole you she do something," Mike would bellow. "We must fine out what she do."

A tedious inspection would follow. The good pitcher who was being hit unreasonably hard would throw and throw and throw.

"I see what she do now," Mike would exclaim triumphantly. Perhaps the pitcher was clenching his fast ball and gripping his curve with relaxed muscles. The forearm would move, with the clench. The batter, when he saw that forearm move would know it was a fast ball.

Perhaps the pitcher was throwing straight over-hand with his curve, because he got a better spin that way, and using a slightly side-armed delivery with his fast ball, because he could throw harder that way.

"You gotta change," Mike would insist. "You keep on telling everybody what you throw, you soon be humpty-dumpty in minor league. You tell me, my fren, you like go back to Appalachian League? You no change, you soon on way. I tole you."

Nashua won the Arlington Classic at Arlington Park in Chicago and Rejected took the Gold Cup at Hollywood Park in California. The Classic had a gross value of $148,500 and the Gold Cup $137,100.

CHICAGO, July 16 (AP)—The brilliant Nashua needed a terrific stretch prod by Eddie Arcaro today to score a one-half length victory over lightly-reckoned Traffic Judge in the $148,500 Arlington Mile Classic before 34,132 wildly cheering fans at Arlington Park.

In carrying the white and red-dotted silks of Belair Stud to a $91,675 triumph Nashua had to overpower pace-setting Impromptu at the final eighth and then stave off the hard pressing Traffic Judge, who moved up from sixth place at the head of the stretch.

There was no show betting as Nashua, beaten only by Swaps in the Kentucky Derby in nine starts this year, went off a 3 to 10 favorite and paid $2.60 and $2.20.

Traffic Judge, ridden by Willie Boland, paid $5.80 to place. Impromptu, which led most of the way, finished third, a length and a quarter behind Traffic Judge. There was no show betting.

The rest of the seven horse field trailed behind in this order:

Nashua Not at Best.

Nashua, in swelling his two-year earnings to $782,565, needed a terrific spur to cut down a four length lead held by Impromptu at the three-quarter mark to register his seventh victory in two years that grossed over $100,000.

The powerfully built Nasrullah bay colt, in the words of Jockey Arcaro was "not at his best, to say the least, in today's race."

Nashua's time for the mile on a fast track was 1:35 1-5, well behind Equipoise's Arlington Mile record of 1:34 2-5 set 23 years ago.

Arcaro seemed irked at the outcome of the race, snorting "Whwy he could beat the second horse from here to the paddock. He was all out and doing his best at the end. I hit him at the eighth pole and at the finish."

The close triumph apparently did not do much toward spurring a widely-demanded match race between Nashua and Swaps. Belair Stud's owner, William Woodward Jr., stuck by an earlier announcement he would ship Nashua early tomorrow morning to Sarasota Springs, N. Y., for "a much-needed vacation."

Plans Undecided.

Although Woodward said he personally would like to see a Swaps-Nashua match race, he added his plans for August were undecided.

Nashua carried the top weight of 126, six more than Traffic Judge and Impromptu.

Nashua's 1955 earnings now are $589,700 closing in on Citation's all time one-year mark of $709,470. Nashua's two years earnings of $782,565 left him about $3000 shy of fourth place Native Dancer, who has a $785,240 total in the all-time money winnings.

Rejected In Stretch Run.

INGLEWOOD, CALIF., July 16 (AP).—Stretch-terror Rejected from the King Ranch of Texas staged a typical come from far behind race today and barreled in to capture the $137,100 Gold Cup Handicap at Hollywood Park.

It took a mighty surge of power to accomplish the feat, but the powerful Kentucky-bred 5-year-old, given a tremendous ride by Gordon Glisson, charged up to win the $100,000 net purse

Traffic Judge Bears Down on Nashua

The great Nashua had all it could do to hold off the closing bid of Traffic Judge (left) in the surprising finish of the Arlington Classic at Chicago. But the Belair Stud star ridden by EDDIE ARCARO, did win to capture the $91,576 top prize. The time was 1:35 1-5 on a fast track, well behind Equipoise's Arlington mile record of 1:34 2-5. Early leader Impromptu (right) was third.

Middlecoff Has 197 at Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 16 (UP)—Cary Middlecoff, shooting them dead to the pin on rain-spongy greens, recaptured the lead at the three-quarter mark in the $35,000 Milwaukee Open today with a 13-under-par 64-67-66—197.

Middlecoff moved two strokes ahead of halfway leader Jim Turnesa, who scrambled for a 69 in the third round after blasting a 63 course record in the second round.

Turnesa soared to a 37 on the front nine but recovered with three birdies on the back nine for a 32.

Tied for third at 200 were Paul McGuire, who also shot a 37 on the front nine, and Mike Souchak, golf's leading money-winner this year.

McGuire, playing in Middlecoff's threesome, knocked off five birdies on the back nine for a 30 to give him a 67 for the day to keep him among the leaders.

Tommy Bolt, Chattanooga, Tenn., and Mike Fetchick, Lake Mahopac, N.Y., were tied for fifth at 201. Julius Boros, Mid Pines, N.C., and Ted Kroll, Utica, N.Y., trailed at 203 with 18 holes to go tomorrow.

A total of 41 golfers shattered par of 210 at the three-quarter mark despite a heavy rain at one point which raised a number of scores.

The crowd of an estimated 14,200 rabid Milwaukee sports fans, which spread the three-day attendance to more than 30,000, were not dismayed by the rain. They flocked behind their favorite golfers in the middle of the downpour.

Middlecoff had four birdies and no bogies. Most of his putts were under 10 feet except for one 25-footer which he sank for a birdie on No. 6.

Middlecoff declined to pick a winning score after several earlier bad guesses, but Bolt said he thought anything from 265 to 268 would win. Middlecoff said the field had shot better than he thought it would.

Art Wall Jr., of Pocono Manor, Pa., got the day's low round of 64 which was as good as the pre-tourney Blue Mound course record before Turnesa broke it with a 63 in the second round.

Gene Webb of St. Louis had a third round 72 to go with his first two rounds of 67 and 68 for a 54-hole total of 207. This put him in an 18th place tie with Sam Snead, Porky Oliver, Errie Ball, Fred Wampler, Wally Ulrich and Bud Holscher.

Ed Furgol of St. Louis had a total of 214 after rounds of 69, 71 and 74.

Adios Harry Beats Week-Old Record

VERNON, N. Y., July 16 (AP)—Adios Harry paced the mile in 1:55 flat tonight to break his own week-old world competitive record and win the first dash of the $26,000 American Pacing Derby.

He equalled the record that Billy Direct set in a time trial at Lexington, Ky., in 1938.

Adios Harry toured Vernon Downs in 1:55 2-5 on July 8 for the old race mark.

Baltimore Pays $30,000 for Jim Dyck, Man It Traded Away

CHICAGO, July 16 (UP)—The Baltimore Orioles sold outfielder Gil Coan to the Chicago White Sox today for an estimated $20,000 and promptly purchased Jim Dyck, the American Association's leading batter, from the Indianapolis Indians.

To make room on their roster for Coan, the White Sox put Pitcher Bob Keegan, who has a spur on the heel bone, on the disabled list. Keegan was one of Chicago's most effective pitchers in 1954 with a 16-9 record, but has compiled only an 0-4 mark this year.

The Orioles were able to collect more than the standard $10,000 waiver price for 31-year-old Coan because the White Sox were the only team that claimed him after his name was placed on the waiver list. Although Coan's overall average is only .240 this season, he has made nine hits in 17 pinch-hitting appearances. He also is a fleet outfielder.

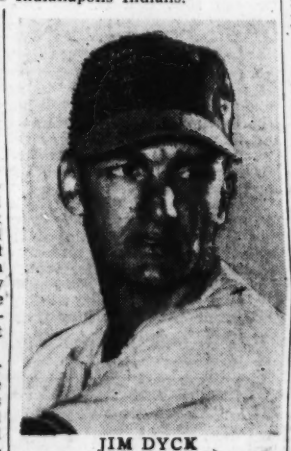

Dyck, a 33-year-old outfielder who had a .381 batting average for Indianapolis through games of Wednesday, was purchased for a reported $30,000. He will report to the Orioles here Sunday for the double-header against the White Sox.

The Cleveland Indians, who own the Indianapolis farm club, tried to purchase Dyck early this month, but the deal was nullified when it was learned that Cleveland had exercised the third option on his services last winter. Dyck thus was sold to Baltimore to prevent him from being claimed in next winter's baseball draft for only $10,000.

Dyck, who also can play third base, also had 58 runs batted in and 17 homers for Indianapolis including last Sunday's games. He was one of the old St. Louis Browns who was transferred to Baltimore with the franchise and then traded to the White Sox for Bob Kennedy in April, 1954. Dyck now is the only "old Brown" on the Baltimore roster now who was on the St. Louis roster when it was transferred.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 16 (UP)—Jack Faszholz of St. Louis pitched Rochester to 9-0 victory over Syracuse tonight in the second game of an International League doubleheader.

Homer in Ninth Wins For Brooks

NEW YORK, July 16 (AP)—The red-hot New York Giants matched the weather yesterday and polished off the Milwaukee Braves, 8-7, to move within two games of second place in the National League race.

The triumph was the ninth in the last 10 games for Leo Durocher's operatives. By beating the Braves, however, the defending World Champions enabled the Brooklyn Dodgers to lengthen their lead to 12½ games, since the Brooks came through with a come-from-behind 5-4 decision over the Cincinnati Redlegs.

In other National League action, the Philadelphia Phillies stopped the Chicago Cubs 5-4, behind Robin Roberts, and the last - place Pittsburgh Pirates routed the Cardinals, 5-1.

Chicago and Cleveland both closed in on the New York Yankees in the American League and at the end of the day's proceedings, New York's lead over the White Sox had shrunk to three games, with Cleveland another half-game back.

The White Sox downed the Baltimore Orioles, 4-3, mainly through the charity of Bird pitcher Ray Moore, while the Indians halted the Boston Red Sox, 4-1, with Art Houtteman allowing only four hits and facing just 31 batters.

Tigers Win, 6-3, 2-1.

While the White Sox and Indians were winning, the Yankees dropped a doubleheader to the Detroit Tigers, 6-3 and 2-1.

Phil Paine, a rookie up from Toledo of the American Association, permitted the Giants to win when he let go with a wild pitch with the bases loaded. The Giants went into the ninth trailing by two runs. Don Mueller hit a home run to start the inning.

Then the Giants loaded the bases and in came Paine with none out. Bill Taylor flied out, but Al Dark scored after the catch to tie it with Hank Thompson going to third. Thompson was caught in a rundown on Davey Williams' grounder, but the Giants wound up with men on second and third. Whitey Lockman was purposely passed to fill the bases and with an 0-2 count on Willie Mays, Paine uncorked his wild pitch.

Duke Snider was the big gun in the Brook triumph over the Redlegs, hitting his twenty-ninth and thirtieth homers of the year. No. 30 provided the winning margin in the ninth. It also enabled him to go one-up on the Redlegs' Ted Kluszewski in the home-run derby. Reliever Clem Labine was the winner.

Roberts gained his fourteenth victory of the campaign in setting down the Cubs. He got off to a shaky start by permitting Ernie Banks to hit a two-run homer, but he steadied down after Andy Seminick and Roy Smalley put the Phils ahead in the second with round-trippers.

The White Sox found themselves in much the same position as the Giants—behind in the ninth after the Orioles had broken a 1-all tie with two runs in the first half of the final inning.

Gift Run.

But Marty Marion's lads loaded the bases and Gil Coan, obtained from Baltimore today, singled one run home. That left the bases still loaded and Moore hit Sherman Lollar to force the tying run home. Then he walked Pitcher Dick Donovan and the ball game was over.

Houtteman needed very little help from his mates. Larry Doby and Gene Woodling chipped in with home runs and that was plenty. The Tribe hurler forced Ted Williams to hit into two double plays and pitched to only three Red Sox each inning from the third through the eighth.

Al Kaline powered the Tigers to their first-game triumph over the Yanks by slashing a home run with one on off Relief Ace Jim Konstanty to break a 3-3 tie in the seventh. Ned Garver went all the way for the Bengals for this third straight victory.

Billy Hoeft outduelled Whitey Ford in the second game. The Tigers scored both their runs in the fifth inning and Hoeft held the Yanks at bay the rest of the way.

Campy Sidelined Again.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., July 16 (UP)—Catcher Roy Campanella of the Brooklyn Dodgers was sidelined again today because of a severely bruised little finger on his left hand.

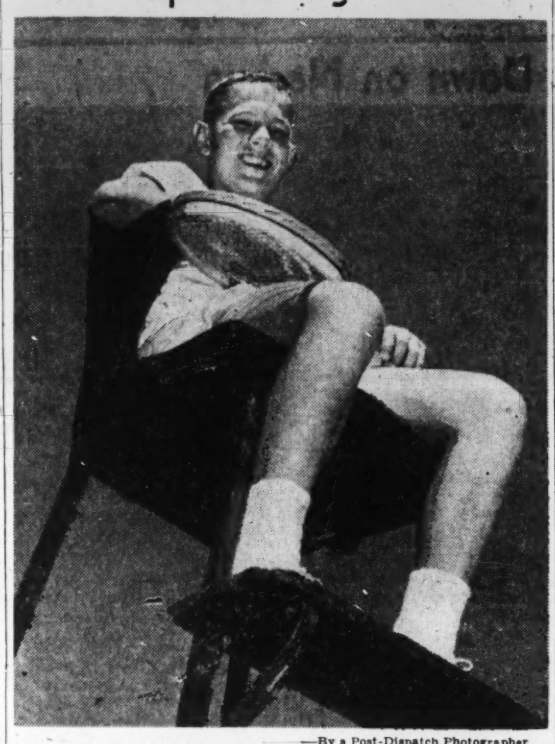

Campanella, who returned to the Dodgers' lineup only Thursday, after missing about three weeks because of a knee ailment, was hit on the left hand yesterday while batting against Willard Schmitt of the St. Louis Cardinals.

X-rays of the finger proved negative, but it was too painful to permit Campanella to play.

OTTAWA, July 16 (UP)—The Ottawa Rough Riders today put Gene (Choo Choo) Roberts, former Chattanooga and New York Giants halfback, on the waiver list.

Hanover, traveled the mile and 70 yards in 1:41 3-5, just three-fifths of a second off the track record he had set last year.

Galway Boy, which paid $19 to win, was one length ahead of Gallaride. Black Bantam was third. Jimmy Duff rode the winner.

There was a daily double of $153.40, when Nosy Sue won the first race and Val Vez took the second.

Bill Gummow rode the winning horse in the fourth and sixth races. He scored on First Return, paying $7.20, in the fourth race, and on Fearnaught, paying $4.20, in the sixth.

Rinderknecht's Son Follows In Dad's Footsteps as Catcher

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

ARTHUR RINDERKNECHT and his son ARTHUR JR.

By Neal Russo

He doesn't look like an Old Man River, but that No. 2 catcher-outfielder for Carondelet Sunday Morning Club earned quite a distinction five years ago: he caught for the 1932 Muny senior baseball champions and 20 years later, for another Muny title winner, caught the son of a pitcher from the 1932 club.

Art Ridenerknecht, at 39 probably the oldest player in Muny baseball today, was only 16 in 1932 when he was behind the plate for Pitcher Emil Schuettenberg of Manager Pete Fix's city champion Sentinels.

In 1952, the battery again was a tough one for the Fairground Park public address announcer: Schuettenberg and Rinderknecht. Emil's son Ronnie was a pitching star for the Kelly Shamrocks in those playoffs.

After several seasons as manager of the Craig Club No. 1 team, Rinderknecht switched to the South Side League this season and has filled in adequately as catcher and outfielder in addition to serving as a coach with Manager Monte Gummels and Coach Mark Christman of Carondelet.

Rinderknecht, a steady hitter, also doubles as manager of a Khoury kids' team that includes one of his two sons. Right now little Art Rinderknecht Jr. has Pop smiling. Since switching from the infield to his dad's old job with mask and pad, young Art's play has improved and the Reavis-Montrey team has taken over first place in the County Khoury circuit.

Gary Stroot, 12 years old, hurled a perfect seven-inning game for the Hampson Cardinals in a Khoury Ritenour game. He struck out eight on the Marty's Hawks team.

Frank Mirielli, third baseman, and Sam Chetta, catcher, who starred for Coach Homer Hughes in Khoury ball, continue to star in the professional ranks. Mirielli is hitting well over .300 for the Daytona Beach club managed by Johnny (Double No-Hit) Vander Meer and Chetta is whacking the long ball for the Yankees' Class A farm at Binghampton, N. Y.

Pete Fix, Muny baseball chairman, has called a meeting for July 25 at the new Muny office to make playoff plans for the six teams that qualify—champions and runners-up of the three leagues.

Clay Surface Expert Bartzen Faces Trabert

ATLANTA, July 16 (AP)—Handsome Tony Trabert, Wimbledon champion from Cincinnati, and Bernard Bartzen, defending champion from San Angelo, Tex., rolled into the final of the United States Clay Courts tennis tournament today with four-set victories over nationally ranked foes.

They play tomorrow in the championship match.

Trabert blasted through Eddie Moylan of Trenton, N.J., 2-6, 6-1, 6-0, 6-2. Bartzen, 28-year-old retriever who is at his best on clay, outlasted Ham Richardson, No. 3 ranked player in the nation from Baton Rouge, La., 7-5, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4.

Trabert had trouble getting started and Moylan jumped off to a 5-0 lead, then lost two games before breaking his opponent's service for the set. Tony's booming cannonball service started clicking in the second set and that was all for Moylan. The big blonde forced the issue throughout.

Moylan, seventh ranked nationally whose game is much like Bartzen's, simply couldn't cope with Trabert's power.

Bartzen, eighth ranked nationally, also stayed on the baseline. Richardson, a Rhodes scholar, pressed the attack, but was caught in errors and fine placements by Bartzen time and again. Richardson's inability to score with his first serve was a big factor in the outcome. When he did get it in, Richardson more than held his own. He committed three double faults, one at a crucial stage in the final set.

Dorothy Head Knode of Alameda, Calif., and Janet Hopps of Seattle won the women's double crown with a 6-2, 3-6, 6-3 victory over Pat Shaffer of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Barbara Brett of North Hollywood, Calif.

Miss Breit and Mrs. Knode will meet for the women's singles crown tomorrow. Miss Breit defeated Jean Clarke of Birmingham 6-3, 6-0, and Mrs. Knode downed Yola Ramirez of Mexico City 6-3, 6-1 in semi-finals matches today.

Determined Aussies Continue Davis Bid by Beating Mexicans

by W. J. McGoogan

Ray Robinson Meets Castellani Friday.

RAY ROBINSON, former welterweight and middleweight champion of the world, takes on Rocky Castellani in San Francisco Friday night in a bout which is expected to provide Carl (Bobo) Olson, the present 160-pound title-holder, with his next opponent. And it is scheduled to be telecast nationally over KSD-TV, Channel 5 in St. Louis.

The Friday night bouts were suspended recently until September but because of the importance of Robinson and Castellani, it is being put on TV as a special.

Should Robinson win, it is likely the bout with Olson would go to San Francisco. If Castellani defeats Robinson, the site of the title match would be Cleveland with Larry Atkins, former St. Louis promoter, as co-promoter with the International Boxing Club in the Ohio city.

If Robinson has approached his oldtime form, he probably will rule the favorite over Castellani, who was defeated by Olson last August on a decision in 15 rounds.

Robinson was severely beaten by Ralph "Tiger" Jones in Chicago last January but since that time has won from Johnny Lombardo and Garth Panter and stopped Ted Olla. Castellani recently won from Chico Varona by decision.

It is imperative for Robinson that he win, of course, because in his comeback attempt another loss would just about take all the interest out of his activities.

Ray defeated Olson on a decision once and handed Bobo the first knockout of his career in 12 rounds.

Castellani is a grab and run artist without too much punch but he may prove too young and fresh for Robinson.

Happy Days Here Again.

THE International Boxing Club reports that the advance sale of tickets for the Archie Moore-Rocky Marciano heavyweight title match scheduled for Yankee Stadium, Sept. 20, looks like the good old days of the reign of Joe Louis.

"The ticket sale won't be opened until next month and yet the orders are coming in," Harry Markson, executive director of the I.B.C. in New York, told reporters. "The thing I like best is that orders are coming in from all over the United States and Canada, like it used to be in Louis's time.

"We are not filling any orders as yet, just accepting them," Markson concluded.

Bob Baker meets Rex Layne at West Jordan, Utah, in a heavyweight match tomorrow night which is a risky deal for Baker, even though he is said to be getting a guarantee of $15,000.

Baker has won nine straight and is in line for a title shot with Marciano early next year which a defeat at the hands of Layne might wash out.

Phil Kim, Hawaiian boxer, who was stopped by Johnny Lombardo at the Auditorium, April 21, on the program promoted by the Teamsters's Union, has announced his retirement.

He was defeated in his most recent match against Ramon Tiscareno in Hollywood, Cal. After that he decided to quit.

There have been eight gates of a million dollars or more in boxing history. Jack Dempsey figures in five of them—with Gene Tunney twice, Georges Carpentier, Jack Sharkey and Luis Firpo.

Joe Louis was in on three of them with Max Baer, Max Schmeling, the second time, and Billy Conn, the second time.

Now they are talking of a million dollar gate for Moore and Marciano. That seems a bit optimistic unless the closed television receipts are taken into consideration.

It is being said in New York that the likely gate will be $640,000 on the basis that there will be 8000 ringside seats sold at $40 each for $320,000 and it is said that experience at outdoor bouts has been that the total receipts usually double the amount taken in by the sale of ringside seats. The amount seems reasonable.

And it might be a good idea if Moore's advice were followed and the bout put on home television. No doubt a sponsor could be found who would bid a substantial sum. Even if it were not so high as closed TV is expected to bring, it might be more satisfactory all around.

Cus D'Amato, manager of Floyd Patterson, is pointing his charge for a shot at the heavyweight championship in 1957 and doesn't intend to be panicked into having Floyd make an earlier effort.

Meanwhile Gus is bringing Patterson along in the way he thinks best even though the manager, a veteran gymnasium proprietor in New York, is in debt $10,000.

"I am sure I could sell his contract for $100,000," D'Amato told Jack Cuddy of the United Press. "But I've been developing talent for 20 years, and I never sold a fighter and never had a partner. I won't change now."

Cuddy writes that D'Amato has no other interest in life than boxing and boxers. He is single but is so busy with his work that he has no hobbies.

"Recently one of my friends mentioned something about Arthur Godfrey," Cuddy reports D'Amato as saying, "and I asked him 'Who's he got?' He thought I was kidding."

"Who's he got" in boxing terms means "whom does he manage."

Lead, 3-0, After Win In Doubles

CHICAGO, July 16 (AP)—Australia, relentlessly determined to recapture the Davis Cup it lost to the United States last year, breezed into the semi-finals of the American zone tennis competition today by taking the decisive doubles match that assured victory over Mexico.

The Aussies' two young stars, Rex Hartwig and Lew Hoad, fresh from their Wimbledon doubles championship, overpowered Mexico's two veterans, Gustavo Palafox and Francisco Guerrero, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

The decision in doubles, coupled with singles victories yesterday by Hartwig and Ken Rosewall, gave Australia the decisive three points in the five-point competition. Two final singles matches tomorrow thus will have no bearing in the opening round as Rosewall goes against 18-year-old Esteban Reyes, Jr. and Hartwig faces 31-year-old Palafox.

Australia's semi-final opponent will be either Brazil or Cuba next weekend at Louisville, Ky. If the Aussies win that test, and they will be highly favored again, they will move into the finals against Canada. If they keep stretching their winning streak, they next will go into the inter-zone ties, drawing Japan in the first round, and then meeting the European zone winner at Germantown, Pa., Aug. 12-14. The next step will be the challenge round against the United States at Forest Hills, Long Island, N.Y. The Aussies held the Davis Cup four years before relinquishing it to the United States.

Hoad, 20, and Hartwig, 25, a pair of power hitters touted by Australia as the world's greatest doubles team, had brief moments of wildness during the match with Mexico. However, their sizzling services plus aggressive smashing volleys at the net baffled Palafox and Guerrero and kept them off balance much of the way.

Hoad's tremendous overhead smashes were fatal to Guerrero's softer returns while Hartwig excelled in sharp volleys to the deep corners of the court.

The first two sets, which required only 24 minutes to compete, saw the Mexicans score only two points on placements, errors of the Aussies accounting for their other points.

Only in the final set did the Mexicans display the finesse and stamina to take a lead. Palafox and Guerrero went ahead at 3-2 and 4-3, but that was as far as they could get.

In exhibition matches Ashley Cooper, 18, Australian junior top-ranking player, defeated 18-year-old Manuel Gallardo, Mexican alternate, 6-0, 6-1; and Neale Fraser, young Australian lefthander, downed Esteban Reyes Jr. of the Mexican team, 6-1, 6-3.

Sweden Leads Chile, 2-1.

BASTAD, Sweden, July 16 (AP)—Sven Davidson and Torsten Johansson swept to an easy doubles victory today to give Sweden's defending champions a 2-1 lead over Chile in the semi-finals of the European zone Davis Cup tennis competition.

The Swedish pair prevailed 6-0, 6-1, 6-4 over Chile's Luis Ayala and Andres Hammersley to take some of the pressure from tomorrow's final singles matches.

Sweden's Lennart Bergelin will play Ayala, who scored a surprise victory over Davidson in singles yesterday, while Davidson will take on Hammersley.

The Swedes, playing inspired tennis, set a terrific pace from the start, winning the opening set in 10 minutes with the loss of few points. The only Chilean game in the second set came off Ayala's well-placed service. Ayala also gave a topflight performance in the third set but the Swedes were too strong.

Italy Scores a Sweep.

EGBASTON, England, July 16 (UP)—Nicolo Pietrangeli and Orlando Sirolo won the final two singles matches today, giving Italy a 5-0 sweep in its Davis Cup European zone semifinal series against England. Italy had clinched its victory Friday.

Pietrangeli defeated Bill Knight, 3-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4, and Sirola whipped Roger Becker, 10-8, 6-2, 7-5.

Falkenburg Helps Brazil.

HAVANA, Cuba, July 16 (AP)—Brazil fought its way to the semi-finals of the North American zone Davis cup tennis competition today by winning the doubles match from Cuba's youthful combination to gain a 3-0 margin in the first round series.

The Brazilian pair of Bob Falkenburg, former Wimbledon champion from the United States who now resides in Brazil, and Ronald Moreira turned back Juan Weiss and Orlando Garrido 7-9, 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

Two singles matches to be played tomorrow will have no bearing on the result.

New Champion Coming Up

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

One of the two men above will be the new St. Louis District golf champion when the shooting's all over, late this afternoon at the St. Louis Country Club. At left is BOB GOALBY, representing the St. Clair Country Club of Belleville, and at the right JOE SWITZER. Goalby is in the final round for the first time; Switzer, of Old Warson club, has tried often but never achieved the title. The final will be a 36-hole match. The 1954 champion, Les Slattery Jr., was eliminated in the second round.

Switzer Sentimental Favorite but Goalby Looks Like Winner

By Robert Morrison

Joe Switzer was a sentimental choice for today's district amateur golf title match scheduled for 36 holes at St. Louis Country Club. He will play Bob Goalby, newcomer from St. Clair in Belleville, the morning round at 9:30 and the afternoon round at 1:30.

The 44-year-old Switzer, who seldom has missed a district amateur in the last 25 years, never had made the final before but he probably will have many pulling for him today.

He has been around that long and the 25-year-old Goalby has a bright golfing career ahead of him, so it wasn't unusual that old-timers hoped Switzer would make it in this thirty-sixth annual tournament.

"I'll tell you why I think Switzer can do it," said old pro Johnny Manion of Normandie, who started the now-gray Switzer in the game at Sunset many years ago.

"I'll tell you why he has played so well in this tournament," said John. "He knows how to play, how to hit over and out of traps and out of rough, and his experience and judgment just might carry him through those 36 holes. I know Goalby is a good player but Joe might win it."

Switzer was the sentimental favorite but Goalby looked like the man to win, on the basis of his youth and shot-making plus the judgment of standout tournament golfers who have seen him play or encountered him in tournaments.

Believed to be the first from the east side of the river to reach a St. Louis district final, Goalby is a rapidly developing Belleville golfer who defeated both Gus Moreland and Jim Frisina in reaching the quarter-finals of the recent Illinois state amateur.

"Just don't treat me like you treated Frisina," Switzer told Goalby after their semifinal victories Friday.

"How do you mean?" Joe was asked.

"Frisina shot even par against Goalby," Switzer explained, "and was out of the running."

In the district championship so far, Switzer has been approximately 33 over par for 97 holes played, including the qualifying rounds, and Goalby has been 36 over par for 101 holes.

This is only Goalby's second district amateur tournament. In contrast Switzer has played in many events. He was a quarter-finalist eight years ago in the Western amateur over the tough Wakonda of Des Moines course. About the same time he went to the final of an Eastern Missouri P.G.A. match play open, which included most of the district's best amateur players as well as professionals.

It appears now that Joe is just going to keep right on going, and his game is getting better since joining the Old Warson Club, where a demanding course and Dutch Harrison have helped.

George McQuinn Quits As Atlanta Manager

ATLANTA, July 16 (AP)—Earl Mann, president of the Atlanta Baseball Club, announced from New York today that George McQuinn has resigned as manager of the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association.

Mann, who telephoned the announcement from his New York Hotel, said he had no idea who would succeed McQuinn to become the fourth Cracker manager in less than four years.

The Cracker president quoted McQuinn as saying he was quitting as a result of criticism.

A veteran of 25 years in baseball, 12 in the major leagues with the St. Louis Browns, the Philadelphia Athletics, the New York Yankees and the Cincinnati Reds, McQuinn, 44, owns a sporting goods store in Arlington, Va.

Two-Hitter by Choate Boosts East St. Louis

Don Choate pitched a two-hitter as East St. Louis Post shut out Granite City, 7 to 0, in an American Legion junior baseball playoff game yesterday at East St. Louis's Jones Park. The victory left the East Siders as the only undefeated team in the four-club playoff.

In a game between the previous day's losers, Belleville defeated Collinsville, 4 to 0, and thereby eliminated Collinsville from the tournament.

Belleville will play Granite City on Monday, at a site yet to be determined. The winner of that game will meet East St. Louis Tuesday.

East St. Louis's victory was its second shutout in as many days. Lou Holdener, who blanked Collinsville, 3-0, Friday, played in the outfield yesterday and got three hits, including a pair of doubles.

Choate struck out six, walked none, and pitched to just 23 batters in the seven-inning game.

St. Louis Has 15 in Western Amateur Golf

ROCKFORD, Ill., July 16 (AP)—A classy field of 200 of the country's best amateur golfers will tee off Monday in what has become one of the game's most rugged championship grinds—the Western Amateur.

St. Louis has 15 entries in the tournament, including Walker Cup star Jim Jackson, who repeated this summer as the Trans-Mississippi amateur champion.

Other St. Louis entries are Bob Cochran, Hord W. Hardin, Mel Wilke, Milton Frank, Jerry Stanford, Tommy Hullverson, Paul Kiebler, Arthur Jennemann, Bob Hrastich, Vince Greene, Walter Robyn, Bob Nieberding, Jim Johnson and James Benson.

The prestige-packed tournament will inaugurate an innovation for its 53rd year of competition by making the week-long meet at wooded Rockford Country Club a gruelling medal-match play event.

Medal play will stretch through 72 holes with the seven low scorers joining defending champion Bruce Cudd, 21-year-old Walker Cup star from Portland (Ore.) University, in match play for the title.

The eight will start man-to-man combat Friday with 36-hole routes daily through the title match Sunday. The eventual winner—if he is extended the full 36 holes on the match-play days—will have played at least 180 holes to win the crown.

Cudd qualifies for match-play automatically by competing in the preliminary 72 holes.

He is listed among the early three top favorites. The other two are Don Bisplinghoff, 20, of Orlando, Fla., winner of the 1955 North-South title, semi-finalist in the British Amateur and finalist in the French Amateur; and Walker Cupper Dale Morey, 1953 Western Amateur champion.

But the field is laced with other fine players.

They include, besides Jackson, another Walker Cup member, Don Cherry; Charlie Harrison, 23-year-old Atlanta insurance man who recently beat Billy Joe Patton for the Southern Amateur title, and long-hitting Hobart Manley Jr., of Savannah, Ga.

Hillman Robbins Jr., of Memphis, 1954 National Intercollegiate winner; Ed Meister of Cleveland, a Walker Cup alternate, and Eddie Merrins of Meridian, Miss., recent winner of the Colonial Invitational at Memphis and former Jaycee junior national champion and captain of the L.S.U. golf team.

"Under the new schedule of play, we feel that a true champion is assured," said James L. O'Keefe, president of the Western Golf Association. "It will take a superior golfer to shoot 72 holes for a qualifying score then fact three days of 36-hole match-play."

Kansas City May Draw 1,500,000 Fans; Average 20,000 Day

HOME attendance is averaging nearly 20,000 per day for the Kansas City Athletics.

Although their fortieth home game, an afternoon affair, drew only 4946 cash customers, the Athletics have now pulled a total of 79,720 through the turnstiles. At this pace, they will approximate 1,540,000 for the 77 home games this season, their first in the American League.

Nashua and Rejected Win Big Stake Races

by a nose over Louis B. Mayer's betting favorite, Alidon.

Game little Determine, the smallest horse with the most weight aboard in the field of six contenders, got up to take third in a rousing battle over a mile and a quarter of ground.

Track records, which come cheap at Hollywood Park today, fell as the timer flashed on 1.59 3-5—one-fifth of a second better than the great Irish Horse, Noor, set in 1950.

Rejected, last in the bettors' fancy this summer afternoon, returned $14.10, $5.80 and $3.30; Alidon $3 and $2.40, and Determine $3.10.

Andy Crevolin's tired little gray, Determine, the 1954 Kentucky Derby champion, was three-quarters of a length behind Alidon, and four lengths back was Alfred G. Vanderbilt's eastern importation, Social Outcast.

Trailing fifth and sixth was Llangollen Farm's second-choice betting entry of Mister Gus, the pace setter, and Porterhouse.

The victory ended a nine-race losing streak by Rejected, and brought some consolation, one year later, for the gallant but belated bid he made for this same handsome Gold Cup victory in 1954.

Correspondent beat out Rejected that year, but today the big brown horse would not be denied.

Alidon, with Johnny Longden aboard and gunning for his fourth victory in the Cup series, went into the race with two good stakes victories scored at this meeting, and he was heavily backed.

The crowd was estimated at about 49,000.

The last time Rejected hit the winner's circle was last January in a major stakes at Santa Anita. But this was the third hundred grander victory in his career—the Hollywood Westerner as a 3-year-old, the Santa Anita Handicap, and now the Gold Cup.

Louise Suggs, Beverly Hanson In P.G.A. Final

FORT WAYNE, Ind., July 16 (AP)—Beverly Hanson of Indo, Calif., and Louise Sugg of Sea Island, Ga., led the field in the Women's Professional Golf Association championships at the end of 54 holes of medal play today. They'll meet each other in 36 holes of match play tomorrow to decide the title in the $6000 tournament.

Miss Hanson shot two par 75s today, giving her the best 54-hole total—70-75-75—220. Miss Suggs, steadiest performer in the tourney, had a pair of 74s and a 75 for 223.

Fay Crocker of Montevideo, Uruguay, winner of the National Open at Wichita, Kan., missed a six-foot putt on the 18th hole in her afternoon round today and that cost her a chance to tie Miss Suggs. Miss Crocker finished with a 71-75-78—224.

She'll tee off tomorrow with the 15 who finished behind her for 18 hole playoffs to decide the rest of the prize money, while Miss Hanson and Miss Suggs battle for the title.

The same pair met in a playoff match earlier in the season at the Los Angeles open. That time Miss Suggs, top money winner for the women's circuit this season, with $10,458, took top honors.

The Cat's Meow

BROOKLYN, July 16 (UP)—Now, it seems, even the cats in Brooklyn are Dodger fans.

A woman, attending today's game with the Redlegs, brought along her pet kitty. At the ticket window she said she wanted two tickets, for herself and for her cat.

"That's all right lady, the cat doesn't need a ticket," said the ticket man.

"No, I want him to be comfortable," the woman replied. "I want him to have a seat all his own. And I want to pay for it."

So the cat sat—all the way through the game in his own pew.

It's Sam Kocsis from Start to Finish in Public Links Final

Detroit Man 2 Up Over Bean

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 16 (UP)—Slender Sam Kocsis, a typical weekend golfer from Detroit, led from start to finish today for a 2-up victory over Lewis Bean of Summerville, Ga., and the 30th annual National Public Links championship.

The 35-year-old tool firm efficiency expert won the first two holes of the 36-hole match and stayed ahead the rest of the way.

Conqueror of defending champion Gene Andrews in yesterday's semi-finals, Kocsis went 3-up at the end of 18 and was 2-up at 27. Kocsis was approximately five over par in the morning and four over in the afternoon.

Bean, wearing pink slacks, a black shirt and green sox, never was in contention. He had difficulty finding the greens.

It was a great victory for Kocsis, member of a well-known golfing family and a former Michigan Amateur champ. This was his first bid for the crown.

He took the first hole of the morning round with a par five and the second by sinking a 23-foot putt. Bean got one hole back on six when Kocsis three-putted, but the Michigan swinger got even on eight when the tobacco-chewing Bean missed the green.

Kocsis went three up on 11 with a par four and held that margin through the morning round.

He went four-up on 19 when Bean three-putted for a double bogey seven, but Bean came back with a 15-footer and a 12-footer to be only two down at the end of 27.

They halved seven holes on the final nine. Bean got a lease on life when Kocsis missed a four-foot putt on the 35th hole to be only one down.

On the next hole his approach shot landed in a ravine off the green while Kocsis was 12 feet from the pin, and the Georgian who never figured to get past the second round of match play, conceded.

Khoury Leaders Matched Today

The Trojans and the Second Ward Democrats, tied for first place in the Khoury Missouri senior baseball league, match their 6-3 records in a 1 o'clock game today at Fairground No. 6.

Stockham Post and Yellow Cab, each beaten once, are expected to continue sharing first place in the University City League at Heman Park. The Legion team faces the Murals at 1 and Yellow Cab opposes Bartmers at 3:30.

The Radison Pirates are the only unbeaten senior team in Khoury play (all Muny, C.Y.C., County and Inter-City league seniors have lost at least once). They have a wide margin in the St. Louis League at Fairground No. 3. Schmersahls are far in front in the Central County circuit.

ASK ME ANOTHER

By Harold Tuthill

"Was Ted Williams of the Red Sox ever injured in an All-Star game?" Walter B. Lohman.

"Did Williams ever refuse to play in an All-Star game?" Joseph Havlicek, 12275 Bellefontaine road.

Williams fractured his left elbow when he crashed into the left field wall in the first inning of the game at Chicago, July 11, 1950. Despite his injury he remained in the game until the ninth inning.

Wiliams has not refused to play in any star game. He has missed only one, in 1939, his first year at Boston, while he played regularly for the Red Sox.

"Is Paul La Palme, Cardinals' pitcher, the same player who was with Pittsburgh a few years ago? If so, with what clubs did he play after leaving Pittsburgh?" Doug Curnayn, 5914 Ferris.

La Palme was brought up by Pittsburgh in 1951, played in 22 games, won one and lost five. He also played with Indianapolis and New Orleans in 1951, with Hollywood in 1952 and then Pittsburgh recalled him and kept him through 1953 and 1954.

Matty's No-Hitter.

NEW YORK, July 16 (UP)—Christy Mathewson of the New York Giants pitched a no-hit, no-run game against the St. Louis Cardinals 54 years ago, winning the game, 5-0, on July 15.

North or South? Muny Fans Have Problem Today

Suggestion for Muny baseball schedule-makers next winter: Arrange the schedule so that the key games at Fairground No. 1 and Carondelet No. 1 diamonds do not come at the same hour each time the top contenders meet during the season.

The big attractions all season have been Kutis North, defending Muny champion, against Borbein-Young in the North Side League at Fairground and Carondelet Sunday Morning Club, 1954 South Side League titleholder, against Kimacks at Carondelet.

It's the same story today. Fans and scouts have to decide whether to watch Lloyd Merritt of Kutis pitch against either Elmer Sexauer or Dick Loeser of Borbein or Kurt Krieger of Carondelet against probably Don Munn of Kimacks. Both games start at 3:30 o'clock.

Borbeins (7-4) need a victory over Kutis (9-1) to retain a slim chance of overtaking Manager Al Mick's champions. They meet only once after today.

Coach Mark Christman, the former major leaguer, will be in charge of Carondelet (7-3) when it attempts to regain the lead from Kimacks (8-3). Manager Monte Gummels, out part of last season with a broken leg, is back in the hospital.

The Heine Meine League remains a free-for-all, with 2½ games separating the four teams. Leading McNearys (7-4) face Carondelet Advertisers (4-6) at Meine Field and Hoffmeisters (6-5) play Luigis (4-6) at Porky's. Both start at 3.

Third No-Hitter.

Dan Rudanovich, 11-year-old righthander for the Waterson Leopards in the South Side Optimists League at Fox Playground, pitched his third no-hit game in beating the Wasps, 8-0, yesterday. He has had one, two, three and four-hit games in efforts thus far.

Women Golfers Ready for Tee And Crumpets in State Tourney; Mrs. Conroy to Defend Title

By Jack Rice

The annual tee and crumpets, sandtraps and socials, session of the Women's Missouri Golf Association will begin tomorrow morning at the Indians Hills Country Club in Kansas City. Formally, it is the seventeenth annual women's state golf tournament.

It frankly is designed to meet a woman's ideal of a crackerjack of a tournament, with a prize in every putt. This does not lessen the worth of things in the championship flight itself, for the actual state title. It merely assures golf for all.

The field will be divided into 11 flights of 16 players each. The method of division is tomorrow's 18-hole qualifying play. Match play in all flights will begin Tuesday, but there will not be a genuine loser until Wednesday, in the first round of consolation play. Title matches in all flights will be played Friday and the closing competition, presumably trudging along behind the finalists in "J" flight, will be a "Losers' Event."

Indian Hills was open for a practice round by early-arriving competitors yesterday, but according to advance advice by the Women's Association, a golf course remains a man's world on Saturdays. The women were to begin their practice "prior to 10 o'clock, front nine only."

Early arrivals in Kansas City, among the 45 women entered from St. Louis, included Mrs. Thomas Conroy of Algonquin, Last year, she was Marilyn Herpel, and she was women's state champion, for the third time in five years. If Mrs. Conroy successfully defends her title, it will be the first time in 14 years that one woman has held the state title three successive years.

At Algonquin, the champion's father was a fairly relaxed, modestly confident, parent. Algonquin professional Homer Herpel, asked about the general state of his daughter's game, "Well, she played Westwood the week after she won the District and had a 73, six under the women's record . . ." There was nothing to suggest her game has had a relapse since.

"I asked her caddy, and I asked her," said Homer, "and they both said yesterday she's really hitting the ball well. She's strictly a pressure player, at her best under pressure."

The front-nine restrictions at Indian Hills yesterday should not have deprived Mrs. Conroy of much. The Indian Hills course, said her father, "is pretty much like Algonquin, though there aren't so many trees bordering the fairways. It's about the same yardage, about the same test of golf as her home course, although this course (Algonquin) is a little tighter because of the trees."

Norwood Hills Country Club has 13 entrants, a contending sort of total.

Mr. Turf Takes Jamaica Stake With Stretch Drive in Mud

First Big Triumph Of Career

NEW YORK, July 16 (UP)—Mr. Turf took the lead in the water-soaked stretch at Jamaica today to win the twenty-sixth running of the $22,500 Wilson Handicap by one length and record the first stakes triumph of his career.

A heavy thunder shower shortly before the race swamped the running strip, but Mr. Turf took to it like a water buffalo as he charged home ahead of Meadowhill's Hartsville in the six-furlong sprint. Jan Burke's Squared Away was third, with high-weighted Bobby Brocato fourth. Tahiti and Red Hanigan completed the small field.

Mr. Turf, a six-year-old gelding owned by Jack Amiel, who won the Kentucky Derby with Count Turf, completed his mud running victory in the good time of 1:11 3-5. The bottom of the track remained firm despite the heavy downpour.

The rain had just about stopped when Jockey Jim Nichols rode Mr. Turf to the post for the forty-fourth race of the gelding's career. Laying fourth while Hartsville and Squared Away battled for the early lead, Nichols made his bid with Mr. Turf once he reached the top of the stretch. Charging down the middle of the straightaway the gelding got to the front about a sixteenth of a mile from the finish and was going away at the end.

Mr. Turf was a slight favorite over Tahiti and he returned $7.40, 3.90 and $3.10 across the board, while Hartsville, with Hedley Woodhouse riding, returned $7.70 and $5.00 after beating Squared Away another three lengths. Squared Away, a veteran of 78 races which has been plagued by unsound legs throughout his career, paid $5.20.

Victory was worth $15,300 to Amiel, a New York restaurant owner, associated with Jack Dempsey, it boosted Mr. Turf's lifetime earnings to $66,705. It was his third victory in eight races this year and the fourteenth of his career. It was the richest purse he ever has earned.

A crowd of 28,346 fans, driven under the stands when the rains struck, were back on the rail when Hartsville, a three-year-old, tried to steal the race. Taking the lead at the start, the son of Alquest still was in front half way through the stretch. But it was then that Nichols charged up with Mr. Turf to snatch away victory in the closing yards.

St. Philip Needs Victory to Tie For Loop Lead

St. Philip Neri, 1954 C.Y.C. senior baseball champion, needs a victory today over Holy Rosary to tie that team for the title in the Bishop Helmsing League in the 3:30 game at Fairground Park No. 2.

Holy Rosary has an 8-3 record, St. Philip 7-4, as they go into the league's final game.

Epiphany (7-2) meets St. Cronan (6-3) in a Bishop Winkelmann League double-header at Cherokee Park No. 1 starting at 10 a.m.

St. Pius (8-1) already has clinched a tie for the title in the Cardinal Glennon circuit and faces St. John twice at Cherokee No. 2, starting at 10 a.m. St. Raphael (6-4) meets Our Lady of Sorrows at 3:30.

Ozark Seniors Swim July 27

The Ozark A.A.U. senior swim meet—for men and women—will be held July 27-28 at the Webster Groves pool, Mrs. Thomas G. Hughes, chairman of women's swimming announced. The meet has been changed to an invitational and large entries are expected from Indianapolis, Kansas City, Springfield, Mo., and other cities.

The preliminaries are scheduled the first day, starting at 6:30 p.m. Diving will start the second day's program at 6, followed by finals in 23 other events. There is one new event for both men and women—the one-mile freestyle.

Women expected to compete include Helen Hughes of Ferguson, now a student at Purdue, and Lita Cole, a star backstroker. Miss Hughes will compete in all the freestyle races.

Entries must be submitted by Thursday to Wally Lundt, men's chairman, at Shaw Park in Clayton, or Mrs. Hughes, 401 Chanslor, Ferguson 21, Mo.

Soccer Notes

Winners of last week's opening games, the St. Philip Neri and Liberty clubs meet tomorrow evening in a St. Louis County Summer Soccer League match at Fee Fee Gardens. Their game, second on the program, will start at 7:45, immediately after the game between Dogtown and Tabacchis, which will start at 6:45.

Fee Fee Gardens is on Fee Fee road, one mile south of St. Charles road. Fee Fee is about two miles west of Lindbergh. Liberty (formerly Pastures) tallied five goals in defeating the home club, Fee Fee, last week, but will be up against a much stouter defense in opposing St. Philip. The latter club shut out Tabacchis.

Tuesday evening's schedule: Jones club vs. Fee Fee; Richmond Heights vs. Brehenys.

While three of his players (Harry Keough, Herman Wecke and Bill Looby) get in shape for their visit to Iceland next month, Nick Jost, manager of the Kutis soccer team, is lining up an early fall program. Jost expects to close matches with the Uhrik club of Philadelphia and the Danes of Los Angeles, all in September. The Danes are the club that defeated St. Louis Simpkins in the western final of the National Open Cup tournament, and then lost to New York's Eintracht in the grand final.

All signs point to a greatly increased enrollment in the Khoury soccer leagues in the fall, according to Sponsor George Khoury.

"We will operate in the various age groups the same as we do in baseball," said Khoury. "I see no reason why we should not have from 75 to 100 teams." His senior clubs operated in two divisions last season, one at Fairground Park and the other at Carondelet. He said he expected all senior clubs of last season to come back for another year.

DOWN THE STRETCH

Moving Over.

WHEN Cahokia Downs opens its second race meeting Saturday night, trainers who were leaders at Fairmount Park will again seek honors at Cahokia's meeting. . . .

Bryan Wise saddled 29 winners last season, 12 of the number from his own stable, while Haymaker, who handled a public string, had 23 wins to his credit during the 70 nights. . . . Some of Wise's horses are at Fairmount in charge of E. G. Mahoney, while Haymaker is at Randall Park, Cleveland.

The present leaders at Fairmount, who will move over to Cahokia following the close of the Collinsville track Friday night, were unable to match these figures. . . . The Fred Roenigke-C. Howard Springs Combination had 18 firsts . . . Springs is the Fairmount leader with 24 . . . Tom Pruett had 16 and Pete Maxwell 15 wins at Cahokia in 1954, while Thurman Gammon finished with 13. . . . Don Kerrone, who trains for the Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Holman stable, did not have too much success in his venture at Cahokia, coming up with eight winners. . . .

The second renewal of the St. Louis Derby on the night of Sept. 17 will again highlight the Cahokia program. . . . The added value has been upped from $10,000 to $12,000, which means that the race will be worth $7800, plus nominating fees, to the winning owner. . . . Last year, Marion H. Van Berg's, Endon, piloted by Howard Craig, won the race with a net value of $9250 to the winner. . . .

Derby Night was the biggest of the meeting at the new track. . . . It was on that night that 13,173 fans sent $464,182 through the mutuel windows.

An effort is being made by the track management to get Craig, who piloted the Derby winner, to return for the meeting to continue his rivalry with Clarence Meaux for jockey honors. . . . Meaux won in '54 with 80 firsts to Craig's 63.

AMONG the highlights of the 1954 Cahokia meeting was a double worth $764.20 for $2. . . . That came on Oct. 2, with Valsca's Pride and Senecas Flash coming into the winner's circle. . . . Senecas Flash paid off to the tune of $197.60 for $2 for the longest single payoff of the meeting. . . . Mrs. Pruett's horses accounted for 16 firsts and $35,855 in purse money, while those of Mikel Farm, back for the coming meeting, were in the winner's circle 13 times. . . .

Fairmount Park's officials have been disappointed with the season's crowds and mutuel handles. . . . "We were plagued with bad weather for a month at the start of the meeting and that may have been the cause," said General Manager Ray Bennigsen. . . . Statistics show that even after the weather improved, crowds and handle did not improve. . . .

Since July 1, Fairmount has had the benefit of the new tax bill which went into effect. . . . This cut the state's take from handles of less than $300,00 from 6 per cent to 4 per cent and resulted in quite a saving to the track. . . . Cahokia will have the benefit of this new law throughout its meeting. . . .

"That new law is the difference between a losing and a successful season to the smaller tracks," is the way Bennigson put it. . . .

HOOFBEATS: Trainer Norman Haymaker announced in Cleveland that he would send Djeddah's Star to Cahokia for the second annual St. Louis Derby. . . . Owner Ernest Noe has been suspended for the remainder of the Fairmount meeting and his case referred to the Illinois Racing Board for failure to disclose true ownership or interests in a racer owned by him; for making misrepresentations in his application for a license and for activities and practices detrimental to the best interests of racing.

Jockey Edgar Wallace has been suspended for the remainder of the meeting by the stewards with the recommendation to the board that the suspension be OKd for three additional days. . . . He was set down for interference while riding Flossie Daisy last Tuesday. . . . Flossie Daisy finished first, but was disqualified and placed fourth. . . . The latest claim sent Like To to Eugene Choisser for $1500.

All-Stars at Vashon Park.

All-star teams composed of players from the Tandy League and the Vashon League will play a baseball game this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, on the Vashon Park diamond. At Tandy Park, the Tandy and Vashon "veterans" will play an "old-timer's" game today, beginning at 1 o'clock.

Dr. Stan London in Hawk Organization

Dr. Stan London, former basketball star at Washington University, has been named club physician by the St. Louis Hawks, the National Basketball Association team has announced.

Following his last year of varsity competition at Washington, in 1948, Dr. London served as assistant basketball coach and head baseball coach, in 1949.

In the field of player personnel, the Hawks have signed their leading draft choices — Dick Ricketts, Jack Stephens and Al Ferrari—and expect soon to get a large start on signing their veterans. Seven-footer Charley Share, the Hawks' center, is to come here to sign his contract.

Junior Golf Entry List One of Finest in Years

An impressive lineup for the District Golf Association's Junior championship for boys under 19 years of age was announced yesterday, and it recalled the years of the 1930s when it was hard to separate the men from the boys in amateur golf in this area.

The Junior tournament, in which Sunset's Don Dupske is scheduled to defend his title, will begin Tuesday at Westborough Country Club with an 18-hole qualifying round.

Tournament Chairman Ross Lillard said Dupske will be exempt from qualifying and the title flight will consist of either 16 or 32 players, depending upon the size and quality of the field. Entries will be accepted at the first tee.

The advance entry of almost 60 was in itself full of quality. It included Jim Remmert, the 18-year-old Lakeside representative who celebrated a recent appointment to an Evans caddie scholarship by going to the quarterfinals of the District men's tournament during the past week at St. Louis Country Club.

In addition were such impressive young players as Bill Johnson, Algonquin and Joe Duffy, Westborough, both of whom recently qualified for the national Jaycee championship as part of the Missouri State representation.

The list of standouts was even broader. The Zeigler boys, Larry and Charles, from Westwood; Jay Aldinger of Greenbriar, the Cochran boys, Bob Jr. and Billy, Mike Kennedy, Charley Shaiper, Skip Schoenberg, Jack Delahunt, Bob Davis and Sid Salomon all have made an impression in a young men's golf here in recent years.

Concurrently with the District Junior qualifying, the U.S.G.A. junior national qualifying will be held for five entrants who will be shooting for one place in the national tournament.

The five national entries are Al Johnson, unattached, from Webster Groves; Salomon, William Barnett of Franklin, Ill., Allan Morrison and Ray Weidner Jr., both of Westborough.

This year the U.S.G.A. junior tournament will be at the Purdue University course in Lafayette, Ind., Aug. 3-6.

It's the Sport That Counts, Not Size of Fish.

GRAND HAVEN, Mich.

THE STRANGE fascination fishing holds for many persons is demonstrated daily on the long pier jutting into Lake Michigan at this summer resort.

One would believe, seeing the crowds, that fish of remarkable size or choice species were being taken. On the contrary, all these fishermen are only after the lowly lake perch, few of which are more than six inches long. A Missouri bluegill would put most of these perch to shame.

The big attraction here, it appears, is that almost everyone who fishes catches something.

The thrill of putting a line into the lake and pulling out a fish, even a little perch, brings grandmothers and grandfathers, fathers and mothers, girls and boys to the pier. Some are on hand as early as 4 o'clock in the morning, others as late as 9 or 10 o'clock at night. No license of any kind is needed for fishing on the pier.

During the day, one standing at the shore end of the pier and looking lakeward will see a row of extended cane poles, perhaps a half-mile long, looking like a wind-toppled long-picket fence overhanging the water.

All the fishermen use the same technique—minnows and a heavy sinker to pull the bait close to the bottom. These perch put up little fight. There is a sudden drag on the pole, and the fisherman simply lifts his catch out of the water. Usually two hooks are used, and sometimes two fish are caught at the same time.

This may not seem like sport to some anglers, but it certainly has an attraction for local residents and visitors, particularly the contingent of trailer campers in the nearby state park.

When the perch are running well, a fisherman may take more than 100 in less than two hours. These little fish are somewhat of a nuisance to clean, but they make a mighty tasty dish.

The long pier offers other attractions besides fishing. At the end stands a big lighthouse, which has a huge red light at the top and a foghorn that sounds with frequent regularity on some nights.

The pier also affords a vantage point for seeing the little sailboats and pleasure cruisers enter the harbor as night falls. From the base of the lighthouse one gets a magnificent view of the sun setting over the huge expanse of water.

Largemouth and smallmouth bass are found in the bayous near the entrance of Grand river into the lake.

For many years a favorite method of catching bass was "spatting." A fisherman would obtain the longest bamboo pole he could find. To the hook on the end of the line he would attach a piece of pork rind.

Then he would ease his boat as quietly as possible into a bayou filled with "duck meat," an organic substance on the surface of the water. In spatting the pole is held far out and then lowered and raised quickly in various spots in the "duck meat," where bass likely would be lurking.

Often a bass, glimpsing the moving pork rind, would make a strike and find itself hooked.

Although still popular, spatting has been losing ground to spinning tackle and to the weedless lures used with casting outfits. The newer methods of fishing involve less effort and seem to be just as effective.

Some trout are netted far out in the lake by commercial fishermen. However, the blood-sucking lampreys are sill preying on these trout.

Dates for the dove season have not been set, but hunting should be excellent this year in Missouri and Illinois.

The mourning dove population in Missouri is reported to have risen for the fourth straight year. On a recent trip through a section of Illinois within 100 miles of St. Louis, the writer observed many doves along the highway.

Of course, a cold snap in early September will send the doves out of Missouri ahead of the hunters.

Posters attached to tree trunks were gifts from Dr. Neinhaus, Lord Mayor of the real Heidelberg, who sent a cablegram offering his best wishes.

Dress was optional. Men took advantage of the warm night and wore Bermuda shorts or lederhosen, sport shirts and Tyrolean hats. Dirndl skirts and peasant blouses were popular with the women.

Entertainment included songs by Edward Roecker and Christine Palmer, stars of "The Desert Song," current Municipal Opera production, and a series of folk dances by a group of 32 costumed young German men and women, all of whom have been in concentration camps. Twenty-eight City Hospital student nurses were guest of honor.

THE RIGHT WORD HERE IS PRESTIGE !

This may be his first Imperial, or it may be his fourth or fifth. In either case, he knows by now his judgment was correct—and not solely because he's a man who is in the habit of making right decisions in both his business and personal life!

In the world he lives in . . . of men and women at the highest level of achievement . . . Imperial is the one motorcar most closely associated with genuine stature and success.

The gentleman here knows this. Yet, being the kind of man he is, his choice of a 1955 Imperial was actually determined not so much by the impression it would create on others as by the immense superiority of the car itself.

He has found that the faultless performance of the Imperial's great 250 hp V-8 engine and fully automatic transmission is unlike anything he has ever experienced before. Smoother. Quieter. Ready on the instant to supply the tremendous surge of power any driving need may call for.

He has discovered in Imperial's fully powered steering and mammoth power brakes a degree of driving control never before possible. He has discovered a relaxation in motoring that entices him to "take the road" more often . . . and more enjoyably . . . than he's done in years.

And he's re-discovered the wonderful feeling of being glanced at with admiration wherever he drives!

It's the grandest experience a motorist can know, and one you can enjoy without a bit of trouble or delay. Just call on your Chrysler Dealer and ask for an Imperial demonstration. Then watch the heads start turning your way!

OLD MAINE FORTS IN SCENIC SPOTS

With interest in our country's history at a high pitch these days, Maine's famous old forts are proving to be a foremost attraction for those who visit the Pine Tree State.

Most of these fortifications are situated in picturesque spots—strategic locations at points on the coast of the banks of the state's scenic rivers. Most of these sites have become state parks or memorials and are maintained and preserved for public use. Most have picnic areas and other facilities.

One of the most unusual is Fort Knox, located on U.S. Route 1A at Prospect, Maine. This site was selected for fortification at the time of the Aroostook War, a United States-Canadian border dispute in 1846. It was named in honor of Gen. Henry Knox, Washington's Secretary of War, who built and resided at "Montpelier" in Thomaston after serving his country in war and peace. The masonry in the fort is the work of master craftsmen, withstanding the elements for a century, and remaining in excellent shape. The brick arch work, granite bastions, and circular stone stairways are the envy of masons and architects alike.

One of the earliest fortifications in the nation is located at Castine. This earth-work was built in the late Seventeenth Century and was under the flags of four nations, French, English, Dutch and American. It is the burial site of British officers and seamen.

Fort McClary, at Kittery Point, is the first recorded fortification of the Massachusetts Bay Colony on the Maine side of the Piscataqua river. Built in 1715, it was later called Fort William in honor of Sir William Pepperrell who was born in Kittery in 1696 and later knighted for his success at Louisburgh. At the time of the Revolution, the name was changed to Fort McClary in memory of Maj. McClary who was killed at Bunker Hill. The present fort was built in 1844 and is hexagonal in design.

The present fort at Pemaquid Beach, Bristol, is a replica of Fort William Henry which stood there from 1692 to 1696. The masonry parapet wall encircles the overhanging rock which was originally used as a powder magazine. In the fort are old relics, portraits, maps and copies of Indian deeds. The fort was first built in 1630 as protection against pirates. Rebuilt in 1692 it was destroyed by Baron de Castine, the builder of the first fort at Castine. It was rebuilt during the Revolution.

One shouldn't miss the John Paul Jones Memorial at Kittery (U.S.1). Near this site, the U.S.S. Ranger was built and launched in 1777. On the Ranger, Jones received the first salute given a man-of-war flying the Stars and Stripes.

Fort Popham, Pittsburgh, was fortified during the Revolutionary period and the War of 1812 to guard the entrance of the Kennebec River. The present granite Fort was erected in 1861 and was garrisoned in 1865, 1898 and both World Wars.

Fort Baldwin, also at Phippsburgh, is the most modern of Maine forts, being built between 1905 and 1912. Three concealed batteries guarded the mouth of the Kennebec River.

Fort Edgecomb, at North Edgecomb, is a historic eight-sided old block-house built in 1808 to defend Wiscasset Harbor in the War of 1812. It overlooks the picturesque Maine sea-coast town of Wiscasset, which has some of the most beautiful old homes in the state.

Fort Western, at Augusta, a block-house and palisade fortification, has been preserved in its original state. Here Benedict Arnold marshaled his forces for the famous march on Quebec. At one time, Miles Standish was commanding officer of the garrison.

Fort Machias, at Machiasport, was part of the national defense system under General Washington. Constructed in 1775, it was destroyed by the British in 1814. Off this fort, the British schooner, "Margaretta" was captured in one of the earliest engagements of the revolution.

The block-house at Fort Kent and Fort Halifax at Winslow complete the roll call of historic Maine fortifications.

MISSOURI FAMOUS FOR OZARKS STYLE SQUARE DANCING

CAMDENTON, Mo. — "Swing your pardner round and round" is getting to be a national by-word these days, and indications are that Missouri may be destined to become the "square dance center of the world."

With national television shows featuring the Show Me state's square dancers, separate groups becoming nationally known through personal appearances, and square dance instruction getting so popular that resorts are turning folks away, Missouri has taken the leadership in one of America's most popular vacation pastimes.

Not all folks want to become experts, but most everybody finds square dancing, Ozark style, a unique, pleasant form of dancing which allows individuality, a different sort of recreational outlet and a way to "break the ice" at resorts and get folks acquainted.

Each year visitors come to Missouri from every state in the Union to learn this form of dancing.

Perhaps the answer is found in a quote from Buford Foster, a leader in Missouri's square dancing promotion:

"The Ozark square dance is the authentic American dance—with the old Irish jig the nearest point of origin. It's a 'natural' dance with styles left more-or-less to the individual. Each has a separate style and change all the time after learning the basic steps."

All this makes Ozarks style square dancing easier to learn than other forms and this, perhaps, is the secret of Missouri's fabulous square dance empire.

LAKE ERIE

Lake Erie, shallowest of the Great Lakes, was discovered by Joliet in 1669. Its name is a corruption of the original Iroquois name "Erige," meaning cat or panther.

This was the name applied by the Iroquois to the Indian tribe living on its shores—the "People of the Cats." Early French maps show it as "Lac du Chat"—being French for Lake of the Cat.

Miss Thompson Becomes Bride Of John H. Fajen

THE marriage of Miss Margaret Irene (Peggy) Thompson to John H. Fajen of Stover, Mo., took place June 19 at Messiah Lutheran Church. The Rev. George W. Wittmer performed the ceremony by candlelight. Later the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hardee F. Thompson, 4726 South Grand boulevard, gave a reception at the parish hall.

The former Miss Thompson wore a white organdy and lace gown and a tulle veil held by a wreath of lilies of the valley. She carried white orchids and stephanotis.

Her sister, Miss Susan Thompson, served as maid of honor and her godchild, Ann Obermeyer, was flower girl. They wore ice blue organdy gowns and held pink carnations and deep blue daisies.

Mr. Fajen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Fajen of Stover, had Edward G. Fisher as best man. Ushers were Herbert Schmitt and Fred Hess.

Last month the bride was graduated from Washington University and Mr. Fajen received his theological diploma from Concordia Seminary. They will live in Berkeley, Calif., where she will teach in an elementary school and he will do graduate work in physics at the University of California.

Carole Jean Niewald Prospective Bride

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE W. NIEWALD held open house recently at their home, 706 Sappington Barracks road, Sappington, to announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Carole Jean Niewald, to Paul Ellis Graesser. The bridegroom-to-be is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Otto Graesser of Valparaiso, Ind.

Miss Niewald was graduated from Lutheran High School in St. Louis and has recently completed her freshman year at Valparaiso University. Her fiance, a junior at Valparaiso, is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

At Possum Trot Farm

Oh for Boyhood's Painless Play . . .

By Leonard Hall

MOST of us whose lives have flowed along at a fairly normal tempo have certain memories which we especially cherish. Many of mine have to do with happy boyhood summers spent in the country in the company of my grandfather. "Doc Lem," as he was called, was both physician and farmer; a man who had a tremendous interest in the natural world and growing things, whether these latter were mountain children, Jersey calves or the wheat crop at the farm. He lived in a time and in a manner which we will hardly see again in America.

There were chores enough in those days to keep a country vacation from ever becoming dull or time from hanging heavily on a youngster's hands. We always milked a dozen Jersey cows and these must be driven each day to and from the farm, which lay just at the edge of town. A busy chicken house supplied eggs and fryers; and baby chicks were hatched without benefit of incubator, so that even the small flock required some care. The vegetable garden was big and, at least in memory, comparatively bugless. But it required hoeing and the endless stream of vegetables which flowed into the summer kitchen for canning must be picked each day.

Somehow, though, there was still plenty of time for the normal pursuits of boyhood. The swimming hole in the creek was a couple of miles below town, but it seems to me we went there every day. The small grain harvest was a wonderful time of following the horse-drawn binder round and round the field and chasing the young rabbits as the cutting neared an end. There were blackberries and huckleberries to pick and trips to the barn atop loads of fragrant clover hay. Always during the summer there were a couple of camping expeditions out to Fourche au Renault creek, not to mention a full quota of church picnics and ice cream socials. But best of all were the trips into the surrounding hill country mounted behind Doc Lem on old Sally, the saddle horse, as the doctor made the rounds of his patients.

● NOW IT HAS BECOME MY TURN to be the "country grandpaw." And though I wouldn't trade the experience for even my own boyhood memories, I wonder a dozen times each day where Doc Lem ever found all the hours which he devoted to us youngsters during the summer months. Perhaps, as we like to think, the tempo of life was easier and gentler in those horse and buggy days. Perhaps, though medicine is always an exacting profession, the cares of the farm weighed less heavily. Many of the things we enjoyed most were part of the daily round of life. And certainly there were fewer distractions; no radio or television or comic books, fewer magazines and not as many visitors from far places—although those who came were likely to stay a month, since they might visit only once or twice in a lifetime.

Regardless of this, it would be hard to imagine a more rewarding comradeship than that of a 7-year-old youngster who loves the outdoors and is well adjusted enough to enjoy equally the time spent with adults and with his contemporaries. Greatest pleasure of all is to watch a boy become gradually conscious of the world around him—a world of Irish setters and baby calves, young rabbits just out of their furry nests, black snakes and blackberry patches and bobwhites, saddle mares and milk cows, tractors and mowing machines, balers and hay wagons and countless other wonderful things.

● THE CONSCIOUSNESS OF THESE does not dawn all at once. The youngster, like the adult, must develop the seeing eye. At first it is enough to ride the tractor with

Matt or me, to go for an afternoon paddle in the creek and play in the swing beneath the big sugar maple tree. Then next thing we know, young Ricky is lugging the water jug down to the field where we're mowing or to the barn where the boys are stacking bales clear up to the track that carries the hay fork. He doesn't quite get to the point where he can go blackberrying without eating all he picks. But he does put out hay for the young bulls morning and evening, helps bring in the old cows to the calves in the pen, picks his share of vegetables from the garden. And in the evening, as we play our daily game of checkers, he will announce his score for the day. "Let's see," he will say. "Today we saw five rabbits, a lizard, two turtles, a whole lot of tadpoles and three snakes."

Last Friday as we made ready to drive to the city for our weekly television program, Ricky announced that this week he'd have to stay in town with his family. We agreed, but worried that he might be homesick or had begun to find life dull. Not at all. He'd just acquired his first real pocket knife; a Scout knife complete with many gadgets. This prize must be shown to his friends at home and a few hours on Friday afternoon and Saturday morning wouldn't be enough to make the desired impression. So he will be back this weekend to continue a kind of education which we believe is invaluable—of coming unconsciously to know that he is part of the great world of nature. This is a world of woods and fields and streams; of animals wild and tame, of frogs and fish and birds. It is a world which many adults have forgotten and city bound children hardly know exists; and yet, the most important world of all.

In Past Several Years They've Sprung Up All Over Country and St. Louis Is No Exception, Where Three Are Furnishing Thrills for City's Small Fry

By Clarissa Start

ONCE upon a time there was the merry-go-round and perhaps a ferris wheel whenever the carnival came to town. And then there were the amusement parks, which because little brothers and sisters came along on school picnics and wanted to go on the forbidden fun rides, installed small-sized merry-go-rounds and a few little automobile rides. And then some anonymous genius thought of setting up a public pony ride. And then someone else, even more promotion minded, thought of combining the pony rides and the amusement parks for the very young, and the Kiddie Land was born.

No one seems quite sure who invented the first Kiddie Land, but it has become one of the phenomena of our age. Seven or eight years ago, there were a few of them scattered around the country; now there are hundreds. Almost every town of 100,000 population has at least one and some of the major cities, like Chicago, have 18 or 19.

In St. Louis there are three, the largest of which is Kiddie Land at 7407 Page boulevard. It is a veritable paradise for small children, where every youngster can ride a train, drive a hot rod, fly a plane or pilot a boat, and parents meanwhile can get motion sickness, jangled nerves or go bankrupt. Which means that in the great American tradition a good time is had by all.

"I wanna ride somp'n' else now," is the most frequently heard refrain at Kiddie Land, or at least it seemed to be the afternoon we visited there with our retinue consisting of our husband, another mother, and three deliriously happy children. It was a steamingly hot day, the kind on which only mad dogs, Englishmen, and small children race around. After two rounds on a train, which thunders through a tunnel, whips around curves, and makes realistic train noises, we tottered off to a shaded bench. The children stayed on for eight more rounds.

AFTER one ride on the airplane, the other mother joined us, looking pale green and muttering something about air sickness pills. When they weren't riding, the children were drinking soda pop or eating some violently vivid colored concoctions called snow cones which seem to be a juvenile delicacy.

The Page boulevard Kiddie Land's president, David Litvag, who is an insurance salesman at Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. for most of the months of the year, has some definite theories explaining the success of his summertime enterprise. He believes it was started by the baby boom of the war and post-war years.

"For instance the years 1946 and 1947 were big birth rate years," he explains, "and there was a need for more recreation facilities for children. People were looking for things to do with their children other than going to parks and zoos. Simultaneously there was an increase in the ownership of cars. Also all the larger cities began growing into their suburban areas and there was a greater need for neighborhood entertainment. The result has been the driveins and Kiddie Lands."

Litvag started his Kiddie Land in 1949 after mulling the idea over in his mind a couple of years. What he thought at the time was an original idea occurred to him one night as he and his wife were out riding and passed a pony track. He remarked to his wife that it would be a smart idea to open a pony track that also had other entertainment for children. They begin discussing possible locations and the idea expanded still further.

"Then I found out there were Kiddie Lands all over the country," he says, "and that most of them used that name. It just seemed to be a natural."

Litvag started out with six types of diversionary activities, the pony track, a merry-go-round, train, boat ride, auto ride and airplane ride. He has since added a handcar ride, a miniature roller coaster, tubs of fun, ferris wheel, and, most recently, the kiddie "hot rod," small electrically operated cars which whiz children around a twisting, turning track and give them the illusion that they're driving the car themselves.

Tickets for rides and refreshments sell for 12 cents apiece or five for 50 cents. It's an optimistic parent who doesn't buy them by the handful. On the basis of tickets collected, the merry-go-round seems to be the most popular ride, and is the one most kids head for first. Some children have favorite rides and can't be dragged away from the handcar, for example, even by glittering promises of fun on the ferris wheel. As best Litvag can figure out, the all time record for consecutive rides on any one thing is 25. In addition to the rides, Kiddie Lands all have free slides and swings but they run a poor second in popularity.

THE ponies on the pony track all have names and some children insist on waiting until Trigger or Baldy or Midnight or their favorite mount is available. Kiddie Land's Little Joe, aged 32, is believed to be the oldest track pony in the country. Boats also have names—Jerry, Judy, Patsy, Cathy, Ricky, and Davie, but there seems to be less attachment to specific boats. The boats also have bells which clang, it seems incessantly to the bystander. The merry-go-round is wired for sound, the predominant tunes apparently, "Slow Boat to China" and "Ghost Riders in the Sky."

"People are always asking us if the music gets on our nerves," Litvag commented. "We're so used to it, we don't even notice it."

Slightly older and smaller than the Page boulevard Kiddie Land is Ted's Kiddie Land at 4600 Hampton avenue in southwest St. Louis. Ted's Kiddie Land is operated by Ted Sneed and was started eight years ago.

"As far as I know," Sneed said, "there were Kiddie Lands in existence 25 years ago in the east, but they didn't catch on elsewhere until eight or nine years ago. There are only three independently operated ones that I know of in the St. Louis area besides those at the big amusement parks, the Highlands and Chain of Rocks."

Sneed is selling his Kiddie Land because it conflicts with his other business, the manufacture of the Tubs-o-Fun ride, standard equipment at Kiddie Lands. He has converted a farm at Portage des Sioux on Alton lake into a manufacturing plant and plans to devote all his time to that end of the business.

The manufacture of children's rides has become big business with the growth of Kiddie Lands. There are 60 or 70 companies throughout the United States. Rides vary in cost from $3000 to $13,000, a fact which shakes some indulgent fathers who casually inquire how much it would cost to duplicate the equipment in their own back yards.

The third children's park in the St. Louis area, also on Hampton avenue near Arsenal street, a dozen blocks or so north of Ted's, is Kiddie Park, operated by a group including former Police Inspector Curtis Brostron and managed by his son, Curtis. This is the second season for Kiddie Park and tall, lanky, 28-year-old Brostron estimated that business is on the upgrade.

"Although the weather's been too cool so far," he said, a fact the average citizen might dispute. "You can't get enough people out when it's nice at home."

The season for Kiddie Lands is about four and a half months long and depends heavily on weather. ("We don't even mention rain," Mrs. Litvag shudders.) Many patrons are regular ones who come back each year. Both Hampton avenue parks report some families who visit nightly and Litvag knows of a couple who have been bringing their daughter three times every week during the season for the past six years. Occasionally customers seek him out to tell him they've come all the way from Illinois or some outlying Missouri town.

KIDDIE LAND employes all have other jobs. Some of Litvag's 23 assistants are schoolteachers and most of them are older men. Brostron has a welder, a machinist and a college boy among his operators and tries to hire only men who "will watch the children every minute, not just stand there and run the equipment." Since the Kiddie Lands are open only at night and on Saturday and Sunday, they lend themselves to part-time help. Litvag makes special arrangements during daytime hours for private birthday parties, and every year, certain days are set aside when the park is turned over to orphanages.

During the winter months, the train tunnel, a quonset hut, serves as storage room, paint and repair shop and one man works full time refurbishing the rides. Each spring it takes three days to assemble the rides and each fall three days to take them down.

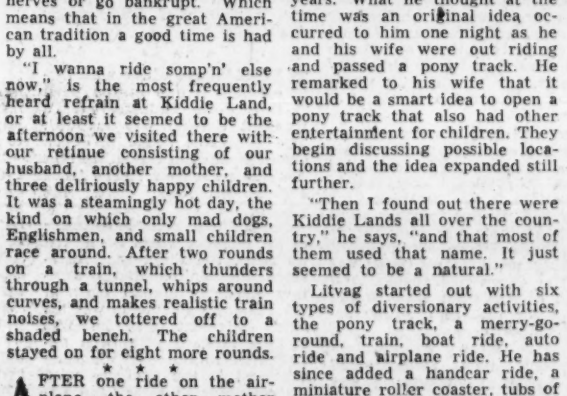

Litvag, a good looking, dark-haired fortyish man lives in University City and has two daughters, Judy, 12, and Cathy, 8. Having a father who owns an amusement park might seem to be a wonderful setup but Litvag's daughters have never visited the park more than once every two or three weeks and Judy comes only to eat hot dogs now, having lost interest in rides. Brostron has a son, Kenny, 6, and he, too, comes to the park only occasionally.

Bad weather and safety are the two principal problems for any Kiddie Land operator, and the latter is the lesser problem. Considering the fact that the bulk of the patrons are 2 to 10 years old and accident prone, the Kiddie Lands have enviable safety records. The most serious accident he's ever had, Litvag says, occurred when two children stepped into 18 inches of water, getting out of the boat ride. Most kiddie rides are designed with every conceivable safety device.

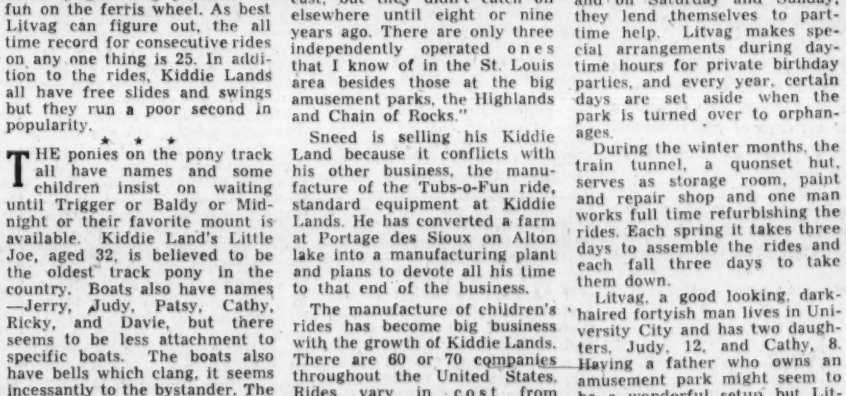

"We don't really have any problems at all," Litvag says. "The parents have the biggest problem — dragging the kids home."

'Salute to France' Called a Success

By Art Buchwald

PARIS, July 16.

"THE SKIN OF OUR TEETH," with Helen Hayes, Mary Martin, George Abbott and Florence Reed, has ended its short run at the Sarah Bernhardt Theater. It was the last of three American productions sent over to Paris as part of America's "Salute to France" program and it was the most successful. The others, "Oklahoma!", which had a weak cast, and "Medea," met with mixed reaction.

HELEN HAYES . . . IN MOST SUCCESSFUL PLAY.

There has been a great deal of discussion in Paris as to whether "Salute to France" was a success. On the whole, we think it was. Our American paintings were not well received, but the French paintings owned by Americans and loaned for an exhibit at the Louvre were the biggest hit of any art show given in Paris in years. The French not only appreciated the paintings, but gave the Americans credit for buying the great Impressionists and post-Impressionists long before they themselves appreciated them. More people saw this exhibit than any other of the "Salute to France" presentations, and many waited hours in line to view it.

The New York City Ballet and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra were also big hits and received a very good press.

It was a credit to the French theater critics that each production was reviewed on its own merits rather than on the fact it was an American export, and the critics disagreed as much about our plays as they do about their own.

● THERE IS NO DOUBT that the decision to get in the cultural cold war was prompted by the success the Russians and Iron Curtain countries have had in Paris in the last few years.

Some public-spirited citizens, including Ambassador C. Douglas Dillon, Robert Dowling and Mrs. Inness Brown, decided something had to be done. They were assisted by ANTA personnel, as well as such great theatrical names as Judith Anderson, Guthrie McClintic, Rouben Mamoulian, Miss Hayes, Miss Martin, Robert Whitehead and many others who, at a tremendous expense and great professional risk, came to Paris to try to win French friends and influence people.

Since it was the first such festival for America, mistakes were made. In many cases, more American tourists saw the productions than Frenchmen, there wasn't enough time to get the shows in shape, and some Americans were critical of the selections made. But on the whole, the purpose of showing our cultural achievements was accomplished and there is a strong hope that the "Salute to France" will be given every year.

● THE MAIN FACTOR in the continued success of the program is to bring over only the best talent we have to offer. The United States has no repertory theater company. Each production must be started from scratch. It seems to us the selections for Paris must be given more thought. The plays of Eugene O'Neill, Robert Sherwood, Maxwell Anderson, Tennessee Williams and Arthur Miller would have a greater appeal to the French audiences.

"Salute to France" is an expensive venture. But there are ways of paying for it. "The Skin of Our Teeth" will be shown on NBC television in the fall as a "Spectacular."

This is an incentive to the performers, who otherwise have to close shop after five or six days of performances. It also makes the work financially attractive to the name artists.

In any event, whatever the "salute" costs, it still has made an effective impact on the French, and, in comparison with the prices of planes, guns and ships these days, the cost is infinitesimal for the amount of good that has been achieved.

'Meet Mister Eisenhower'

President's Wife Works Hard, Too

Mrs. Eisenhower Has Adjusted to Job, but It's a Strain—Lure of Gettysburg Farm

THE FIRST LADY LOOKS FORWARD TO HER LATER YEARS IN THIS RECONDITIONED FARM HOUSE AT GETTYSBURG, PA.

Seventh and last installment from the book, "Meet Mister Eisenhower," published by Harper & Bros. The author is dean of the White House reporters.

By Merriman Smith

THIS business of being a President's wife is no picnic. Mrs. James K. Polk once said, "I would rather be doorkeeper in the house of the Lord than mistress of the White House." Mrs. Woodrow Wilson wept unashamedly in front of politicians as she tried to talk her husband out of running for a second term.

A President can show up puffy-eyed for a morning engagement and the women in the delegation will coo to each other, "Doesn't he look cute, like a sleepy-eyed little boy?"

But let a President's wife appear in front of the Ladies' Aid Society looking anything but beauty-parlor fresh and the women mutter in the back rows, "My, doesn't she look perfectly dreadful — and getting big around the hips, too."

Thus far, Mamie Eisenhower has been equal to her diverse chores as First Lady. She doesn't have the boundless energy of Mrs. Roosevelt nor Mrs. Roosevelt's inclination to delve constantly into public problems. At the same time, she is not nearly as shy and retiring as Mrs. Truman. In some ways, Mrs. Eisenhower seems to have adjusted to White House life with much more ease than her husband.

Maybe this is because she seems to have a better time than he does at White House parties. There's also the realistic fact that her schedule is nowhere near so burdensome and prolonged as Ike's.

Mrs. Eisenhower has two sources of frequent family companionship and comfort: her mother, Mrs. Elivera Doud, and her sister, Mrs. G. Gordon Moore, who lives in Washington.

Mrs. Doud spends several months a year with the President and Mamie at the White House. Mr. Eisenhower has a genuine affection for his mother-in-law whom he calls "Min."

The public impression of Mrs. Eisenhower is largely derived from the trips she makes with her husband, plus her attendance at charity bazaars, benefit tea parties and fashion shows. Actually there is much more to her life than smiling, drinking tea and shaking hands. She is the operating executive of a large establishment—the White House proper, as separated from the business offices.

IN addition to seeing to the operation of the residential sections of the White House and arranging her life with Ike to meet his heavy official schedule, she also must preside over two other Eisenhower households at Gettysburg and Augusta.

Even with an efficient staff of servants, her housekeeping problems are not those of a chatelaine. She must follow the food purchasing closely. She doesn't stand in line at the market; the shopping is done for her. But she must maintain supervision of the menus and the spending.

Outside of official entertainment, the White House food bills come out of the President's pockets.

She probably works as hard as any First Lady of recent years, possibly harder, on plans for the annual winter social season at the White House which sets the pattern for social planning throughout the nation's capital.

One of Mrs. Eisenhower's most laborious chores is shaking hands with the massive delegations of women that call on her. Sometimes in the spring there will be as many as 2000 women through the White House during the course of a day to meet Mamie.

AN attractive little blind girl met Mamie one day in a delegation. Holding Mrs. Eisenhower's hand, the child asked, "Why don't you ever do any work around here?"

The President's wife was stopped cold for a moment, then she said, "Oh, honey, but I do—who told you I didn't?"

"My mommy," said the little girl quite firmly.

Mamie carried off the situation with a gay laugh. Rarely does a social situation shake her poise.

Mrs. Eisenhower is an ideal golf widow. She doesn't complain when Ike goes to the course once or twice a week. When he plays almost daily in Denver, frequently in the late afternoon she motors to the country club to wait on the terrace overlooking the eighteenth green, watching the President and his partners finish the last hole.

The President, in turn, is carefully considerate of her plans and will alter his playing time to fit her schedule.

Mrs. Eisenhower occasionally dips into politics on her own. She tried to help Mrs. Ellen Harris of Denver win a seat in Congress in 1954, but Mrs. Harris was defeated by her Democratic opponent. During the campaign, however, Mamie, who rarely does such things, joined Mrs. Harris, a stunning blonde, in a tour of Denver housewives. A group of women came to a bus chartered by Mrs. Harris to have coffee with Mamie, who admonished them, "I hope you'll all vote for her. We women have to have a voice in things."

Because of a heart murmur which she has learned to live with over a period of years, Mamie at one time would not fly if there was another means of transportation available. With the development of the pressurized cabin and particularly after she entered the White House and had the service of some of the government's finest planes, she became much more agreeable to air travel.

Both Ike and Mamie are sentimentalists about important dates in their married life, particularly their wedding anniversaries. When they celebrated their thirty-eighth anniversary in July, 1954, Ike and Mamie gave a party at the White House and invited a lot of old Army friends, the people with whom the Eisenhowers feel most at ease.

Ike and Mamie were waltzing in the East Room to the music of a Marine Corps orchestra when it suddenly occurred to them that it was the first time they had danced together since 1938. If their life together in the White House accomplished nothing more, it got them out on the dance floor again. And a lot of American wives would settle for that as a prime accomplishment.

WHEN the reconstructed house at Gettysburg was merely a matter of unroofed walls and rough boards for floors, I walked with President Eisenhower one dismal rainy Saturday into the area that is now his combination library, study and office. It is one of the larger rooms of the house.

Cold spring rain spilled down through weather cloths of tarpaper strung across the studding of the walls. The only part of the original house that would remain in the room was a huge fireplace and a small oven built into the back of it. The President, bundled up in heavy rubber galoshes and a camel's hair coat, paced off the length of the room, then the width.

As if to explain the size of his study-to-be, the President stopped in the middle of the floor, threw out his hands and said with an air of resignation, "Unfortunately, when you've had a job like this, you never get out of work the rest of your life—correspondence and that sort of thing.

"People go on writing Presidents for years. Even after I leave office, there will be lots of mail every day and I'll need this office space to handle it."

During the summer of 1954, while the Eisenhowers were spending eight weeks in Colorado, Washington reporters were somewhat amazed to discover the frankness with which Mrs. Doud, Mrs. Eisenhower's mother, had been discussing the possibilities of 1956 not only with friends, but cab drivers and grocery-store clerks.

Mrs. Doud took the plain position that she wanted Ike and Mamie out of the White House for good at the earliest possible moment, and naturally, quite largely for Mamie's sake. She said the Washington pace was tough on Mamie and that Ike had a hard time getting any time to himself.

I did not hear Mrs. Doud say it with my own ears, but I know several people in Denver who swore to me that Mamie's mother did not believe there was a chance of Ike running again.

PERHAPS one of the most discernible straws in the wind flew down Broadway on a pleasant October day in 1954. The President spoke before a closed meeting of the West Point Association at New York's Astor Hotel. Reporters were not present.

According to reliable accounts of his remarks which we picked up later, the thing that interested the United States Military Academy alumni most in the President's remarks was his firm statement that he was looking forward with keen anticipation to the day when he could sit in the audience with his comrades in arms "and listen to some other sucker make a speech."

On Oct. 23, 1954, Mr. Eisenhower spoke to a group of Gettysburg friends gathered to greet him at the base of the Pennsylvania monument on the battlefield.

"I hope you are neighbors," he said. "I hope you are people we get to see a lot of in the days to come. And if all October days in Pennsylvania are this nice, I tell you that one of the things we are looking forward to, more than anything else in our lives, is when that comes that we can go over here and settle down and begin to raise a few cows of our own."

If his sentence construction was a bit sticky at this point, I think it reflected his real compulsion to become a Gettysburg farmer as soon as possible; not a red-necked burgher fighting the soil and the elements for a living, but a man living in comfort among the people, pastimes and objects he enjoys.

Later the same day, talking to a large group of state Republican leaders gathered for a campaign rally on the edge of his farm, the President said: "I realize you people have a number of other engagements for the day. Mine, fortunately, I hope, is going to be a couple of hours looking at the farm which I hope soon to spend one night in; and not long thereafter to live in—at least on weekends."

WHEN I take his actions and his words around the Gettysburg place, plus the way he spoke to the West Point Association, his seeming distaste for the mucky side of presidential politics and add these to the words of Mrs. Doud, the President's growing restiveness about being on constant public display, the way 24-hour attendance on him by the press chafes like a ragged collar, I come up with a conclusion which, to me, seems obvious:

Mr. Eisenhower would rather not be President.

Some of Mamie's close friends in Washington and Denver think she may well have the last say. While she idolizes her husband and is as dedicated as he is to his career, the White House is a hard row for her to hoe. She is not a robust woman and she finds the hours and the work, particularly during the social season, definitely fatiguing.

She might feel that she and Ike have had a full cup of honor from their nation and the world and that they can, with complete good grace, bid a final farewell to official duty.

A learned, experienced student of the national political scene discussed the possibilities of 1956 with me at some length during the preparation of these chapters.

"Sure," he said, "Ike doesn't want to run now and probably won't want to run in 1956. But just wait until they put his feet to the fire. Wait until they feed him lines 'You can't turn your back on America now' and 'Adlai Stevenson says you're afraid to stand on your own record.'

"They'll bring him around and I don't care if his friends try to stop it with 50 Black Angus bulls and a private golf course for the Gettysburg farm. He'll run."

This could well be a more realistic and accurate picture of the situation than my deductions.

Mr. Eisenhower, however, wants not only peace for the world, but peace for himself. He knows that he can retire at the end of his present term with honor and financial independence, forever a hero in the eyes of much of the world and perpetually enshrined in the minds of Americans.

Barring tensions, pressures and dangers which cannot be foreseen or measured at the present, my guess is that he will run again — right straight for Gettysburg.

Teen-Age Urge to Run Away

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

YOUNGSTERS who run away from home sometimes make good in a big way, but far more they wind up in deep trouble and with their problems multiplied many-fold.

Martin writes me a long letter telling about his difficulties with an indifferent father and a harsh stepmother. He feels that he must escape.

"I'm only 15, but large for my age, and I am sure I can make my own way," he confides. "I don't want to do anything dishonorable, but don't you think I have a right to protect myself?"

This question of "rights" is a hard one to argue, Martin, especially at this distance. Let's analyze your situation in a little more detail. I'll ask you some questions which I can't answer because I don't know enough about you. You can answer them for yourself.

What is it exactly that I want to run away from?

Am I reasonably certain that I will really get rid of my problems in that way?

Do I have sufficient reason to believe that I won't run into some new problems even worse than those I am trying to run away from?

Do I have a clear and workable plan as to the direction in which I am going to run?

Do I have sufficient evidence to prove that I will be able to reach the destination that I have in mind?

When I reach that destination, do I have a clear picture of what I'll do for the next five years?

PROBABLY THOSE questions sound to you, Martin, merely like an attempt on my part to confuse you. They are an attempt to make you think; and if this thinking confuses you, it's hardly my fault.

The fact is that a surprisingly large percentage of all teenagers play at some time with the idea of running away from home. A good many of them actually do so. Sometimes when you know the homes from which they are running away, you can't blame them.

But there would be fewer tragedies in the world if every one of these youngsters would find an honest and satisfactory answer for himself to each of those questions before he packs up.

Answers to Questions.

Q. Do you think a 12-year-old is too young to date?

A. Yes, except in some special case. She should go with a group.

Q. Our daughter says she wishes she had been born a boy. Is that common, or should we be concerned?

A. You do not state her age. Up to adolescence girls rarely have that feeling, but most of them acquire it later. Help her in every way possible to see the advantages of being a woman.

Q. I don't even know how to start solving my problems. . . .

A. The best way to start is—do something! Psychologist Percival M. Symonds asked 65 teachers how they solved theirs. Answers: 25 said, "By securing independence and freedom"; 15 "By self-improvement"; 11 "Making a decision"; and so on. He concludes, "With the act of self-assertion, their problems vanished."

Q. IS IT A FACT that unhappy wives tend to be more extravagant than happy ones?

A. Yes, indeed. Sometimes they are trying to get satisfactions that they do not find in marriage; sometimes merely trying to punish their husbands.

Q. No husband for me, thank you, Dr. Popenoe. I intend to be my own boss!

A. Yet Mrs. Clare Booth Luce says marriage is the only career in which a woman can be her own boss. How do you figure that out?

Q. Boys in a bull session asserted that college women don't make good wives. How come?

A. They do better than the average. But sociologist Henry Bowman says they must "overcome the training for competition rather than co-operation that they are given in some schools." He thinks some of them are taught to look on homemaking "as something beneath the dignity of the woman with a degree." Have you seen any of that kind?

Traffic Ticket

By Christopher Billopp

ACCORDING to the driver who gets it, a traffic ticket is given him for exceeding the speed limit shortly after he looked at his speedometer and noted he was well within it. Or, at least he was not going as fast as other cars which were not molested.

It is given for going through a red light when he could have sworn the light was green or, at the most, amber.

It is given for parking where he has often parked before without being disturbed and he looked very carefully and could see no sign that said "No parking."

It is given for parking too long in a two-hour parking area, though there were many other cars that were permitted to park much longer than his.

IT IS GIVEN for violating a regulation which, on the face of it, is a stupid one. Had he followed the rule he would have held up traffic in a rush period and would have done more harm than good.

It is given to him, though he is one of the most careful of drivers who uses excellent judgment and has a good record and surely would not do anything to risk the lives of others.

It is given to him because evidently he has been singled out for special treatment and he can only conclude that the police force has something against him personally.

IT IS GIVEN by a policeman who apparently just wants to show his authority and to bully the public, who does not realize that he is just a servant of the people, and who might at least have been more courteous.

Never is a traffic ticket given to a driver who knew he was doing wrong, who, inspite of that, decided to take a chance, who makes no excuses and is frank to confess he is as guilty as guilty could be.

'I Was a Prisoner of Chinese Reds'

Canadian Flyer's Story of Being Shot Down and Captured by Communists in North Korea

Canadian Air Force Squadron Leader A. R. MacKenzie was shot down while fighting for the United Nations in Korea. For two years he was a prisoner of the Chinese Reds. During the interminable months, MacKenzie lived out the drama of a brave man who endured isolation, deprivation and the cunning of captors trying to break his will power. McKenzie's account, beginning here, is a gripping prisoner-of-war story. But even more, it throws a sportlight on the mind and morals of the Chinese Communists.

By Squadron Leader A. R. MacKenzie

I WALKED into the pilots' room of the 139th Squadron, Fifty-First Wing of the United States Fifth Air Force, on Dec. 4, 1952, and found my name posted on the warning board for a mission the following morning. Our outfit was stationed about 20 miles south of Seoul. I had joined the group two weeks previously for a tour of temporary duty as a fighter pilot on loan from the Canadian Government.

The tour was to last either 50 missions or six months, whichever was completed soonest. I had already flown four missions. That night I wrote to my wife, telling her that I had not as yet tangled with any MIGs, but was hoping for better luck on this mission. As a fighter pilot with the Royal Canadian Air Force in World War II, I had been credited with eight and one-half enemy planes.

Next morning I reported for briefing at 6 a.m. Col. W. Mitchell, Wing commanding officer, came briskly into the briefing room and the buzz of conversation died down as he began to talk.

Though Mitchell did not say so, we knew President Eisenhower was in Seoul and that his presence might possibly draw an enemy air attack. Mitchell told us our job was to set up defensive fighter patrols to discourage enemy aircraft from venturing south of the Yalu river until after the President left Seoul, which, I believe, was later that day.

I was flying No. 2 to Maj. Jack Saunders, our squadron operations officer, and was second to take off, piloting a Sabre F86-F. We quickly climbed to about 42,000 feet, following the west coast of Korea over the Yellow Sea toward the mouth of the Yalu river. It was a clear, cold day. The sun was high overhead and slightly to the south. Visibility was excellent.

WHEN we neared the Yalu's mouth, we started eastward on our patrol, parallel to and about 20 miles south of the river. Mine was the top flight, at 42,000 feet. The others were to operate at levels ranging from 40,000 down to 30,000. There were three squadrons on this mission, with four flights of four aircraft each.

We had patrolled once and were half way along on our second milk run when the pilot flying No. 3 reported: "Cobra one, this is Cobra three, there are some trails at 10 o'clock and slightly above."

Saunders quickly snapped back: "Roger, I see them, keep your eye on them!"

A few minutes later I could see about 20 MIGs flying west over the Yalu in string formation in two's. Their method of operation, I knew, was to peel off in two's, dive through our formation at high speed, curve back to the right and dive back into China again. They figured we would pursue them. Their idea was much like that of a runner trying to steal second who can rush back and be safe on first.

I saw two MIGs peel off, cross the Yalu and make for us in a roaring dive. I cocked my wing to the left as I saw them approaching and they passed underneath me, with their guns blazing. I was in a perfect position for a bounce—an attack from above. I reported over the radio: "Cobra one, this is Cobra two, two MIGs below going to three o'clock, cover me!" This indicated that I was going to lead an attack on these planes.

As I started into a dive for the attack, I suddenly realized I had received no reply from Saunders. I dropped a wing for an instant to see if he was coming with me and to my astonishment found he was turning the oposite way. This meant we would be split up and that I would be going into the attack alone. Normally we fight in pairs.

I REVERSED my turn to join Saunders. He was now off my left wing and from that direction I could see more MIGs coming in. Saunders apparently had decided to go after them. I still did not know whether he had received my communication, but because he was leader of the flight I had to take it for granted that he wanted me to remain as No. 2 and to cover him on his attack.

Saunders had completed his turn and was now flying west. To stay with him I had to turn sharply, and as a result lost speed and was left far behind.

I found myself alone, but still had Saunders in sight at 1 o'clock high. I had full power on and the only way I could catch Saunders was to go into a shallow dive and regain the speed I had lost in the turn. As I started to dive, Saunders called me: "Cobra two, where are you? Am I clear behind?"

"I am at 7 o'clock below," I replied, "and you're clear."

At that moment, a stream of fighter fire ripped past just above my canopy. Before I could take an evasive action, the canopy was torn away. Simultaneously, there were two explosions on my right aileron, followed by three more in rapid succession on the fuselage.

I tried to break to the left to evade more fire, but found that my plane was out of control. In a few seconds I was barreling to earth. I could see the enemy's fire pursuing me like little red-hot tennis balls.

There was no point in staying in my aircraft any longer. I hit the release on my ejection suit and flung out of the plane.

I WAS at about 40,000 feet when I hit the air. I found myself tumbling through space at about 500 ciles an hour, my arms and legs thrashing about. At such speed, the air tore at my body, pulling off my wristwatch, helmet, gloves, oxygen mask and an escape kit which had been tightly tied to the seat of my parachute. I also lost my United Nations identification card.

As quickly as possible I released my seat, to which I was still strapped, and kicked it away. This was my first bailout, and the thought passed through my mind: I wonder if this damn chute will work. Normally, if you bail out at a high altitude and lose your oxygen supply it is advisable to free drop to about 15,000 feet.

But I decided not to wait and pulled my chute release immediately.

It was wonderful to feel the jerk of the parachute straps and to see that beautiful white expanse of silk blossoming out above me. Everything seemed strangely quiet. As I neared the ground I could see two trucks coming around a bend in a road, obviously headed in my direction. As I dropped lower I could see there were soldiers in the trucks. I landed on the side of a mountain, about 30 feet away from an old woman gathering grass for fuel. I'll never forget the surprised look on her face when I lighted at her feet. But after a glance she went right ahead with her work and paid no further attention to me.

The trucks were now near the bottom of the hill. I removed my parachute, and dropped every piece of gear I could to make it easier for me to run for it. I thought that if I could get over the mountain, out of sight of the soldiers, with luck I might hide and wait for nightfall. I started to run. They shouted and waved to me to come back, and began shooting. I could hear the bullets bounce off the rocks. I realized that in my weakened condition I would never be able to reach the top of the mountain. So I stopped, got to my feet, turned around to face my pursuers and waited. They continued to beckon to me as they advanced, but the firing stopped. I began to walk down the mountain to meet them.

Halfway down I was surrounded. They did not strike me, but kept me covered with their weapons. One man, who appeared to be the leader, motioned to me to raise my hands. I did so. Then he and several of his companions stripped me of my .45, which was in my armpit holster, and of my G-suit and Mae West. Then they emptied my pockets of cigarettes, cigarette lighter and other personal articles.

They told me to sit on the floor, gave me back my cigarettes and some of the personal things they had taken away. The trucks moved off. As we traveled along the road I tried to take in as much as I could of the countryside for future reference.

We drove several miles through the mountains. Several times the soldiers pointed to bombed houses and indicated their disapproval. This was done pantomime-fashion. They did not attempt to lay a hand on me. After about 15 minutes, we approached a larger river which I recognized as the Yalu. I could see the power station in the background to the east.

We stopped before a white wooden bridge and the Chinese in charge produced a handkerchief and blindfolded me.

The truck started up again and rumbled along for what I estimated must have been another half hour before it stopped. I was led, still blindfolded, into a small shack. I could see where I was because I had worked the blindfold down a bit and could peer over the top.

MY captors seated me on a stool and placed a bowl of rice in my hands. There were other soldiers in the room, one of whom could speak a little English. He said: "Eat rice." I tried to take off the blindfold, but they pulled my hands away. I plunged my fists into the bowl and had a rice meal. I had not eaten since early morning. Someone said: "What is your name?"

"MacKenzie," I answered.

"How many children have you?"

When I held up four fingers they chuckled. My questioner said cheerily: "That is good, that is good."

"Do not be afraid," my questioner went on, "you in China, China good. We no hurt you. You go home soon."

Over the top of my blindfold I could see a soldier seated behind a table. He appeared to be phoning somebody to come and get me. My English-speaking captor came over and said I would have to remain where I was for about an hour.

"What is father's name?" he asked, "and where he live?"

I parried: "What do you want to know for?"

"We tell father you here," he answered.

I could see no point in withholding this information, so when he handed me a piece of paper and a pencil and I wrote my father's name and address on it, still blindfolded. They then asked more questions about my family.

BY this time I was confused and wondered whether I had not fallen into some friendly underground organization.

Half an hour passed and I was taken out of the shack and put into another truck. After driving for about four hours over very bumpy roads we pulled into a large city which I later found to be Antung, a large industrial town in China on the north bank of the Yalu river. There I was transferred to a jeep containing another driver, an interpreter and a guard.

We started off again and in about 10 minutes went over a bridge which I later discovered crossed the Yalu. About 10 miles south of the river, in North Korea, the jeep stopped and I was guided into a fairly large house. My blindfold was removed and I found myself in a small room which contained a wooden bed, a straw mattress and a padded cotton suit. I was told I was in Korea and to go to sleep. My captors departed, leaving one man on guard outside the room.

I managed to drop off to sleep. When I awoke, it was daylight and the guard was bringing my breakfast, a bowl of rice and some stewed vegetables. But I couldn't eat. There were no windows in the room so I sat around looking at the walls. An interpreter came in with copies of a magazine in English, but apparently printed in China. It was called People's China. The leading article was about germ warfare. When he handed me the magazine, he opened it to an article about a group of European scientists who had "investigated" the germ warfare charges and said:

"What do you think of this?"

I replied: "I expected to see this kind of propaganda," and threw the book down on the bed. He didn't appear angered by my action but shrugged his shoulders and walked out.

AN hour later the guard opened the door and beckoned me into another room. Seated behind a desk was what I assumed was a Chinese officer. Beside him sat an interpreter.

"What are you doing here?" the officer demanded.

"My name is MacKenzie, my rank is squadron-leader and my number is 19704."

This reply was—according to the Geneva convention governing prisoners of war—all the information that could legally be asked of me. My interrogator grinned and said: "Or course we must know more than that. We want to know how you got here."

"I am not going to answer any questions beyond my name, rank and number," I told him, and demanded that the Canadian Government be notified of my capture.

He replied that would all be looked after later "when you make your case clear." The interpreter continued to fire questions at me but I sat mum and wouldn't answer. After a few minutes of this, the officer seemed to get annoyed and dismissed me with a motion of his hand. The guard took me back to the other room.

Next morning I was interrogated again. This time they asked me why I would not tell them what they wanted to know. I said nothing. They hammered at me for half an hour before they decided to give up and send me back to my room. They were obviously angry but never laid hand on me.

But when I returned to my bedroom, I found the bed had been removed and the mattress of woven straw and the blanket were on the floor. On the third day the interrogation was repeated. Something new, however, was added.

I had no identification, since I had lost my U.N. identity card when I bailed out of my plane.

"Since you have no identification," said the interpreter, "there is no way for you to prove you are a flyer. Unless you can prove the contrary, we will consider you to be a spy, and you know what happens to spies."

"IT really doesn't matter whether you consider me a spy or a prisoner of war," I said at last, "because I know you intend to kill me anyway. And I would appreciate it if you would take me out and get it over quickly."

I said this not with any sense of bravado or attempt to draw them out but because I had been led to believe that no prisoners of war taken by the Chinese-Korean side to this point had ever returned. Some fellows had escaped from intermediate points. But so far as I had learned during my stay with the Americans, no prisoner had ever come back from a genuine Chinese prisoner-of-war camp. The feeling was that the Chinese did not keep many prisoners.

The Chinese officer looked me in the face and declared: "There are things much worse than death."

He motioned me to be taken away, saying: "Think about that for a while."

Tomorrow: Cold, hunger, solitary confinement hit MacKenzie's morale.

Fables Of the Famous

By E. E. Edgar

REGRET: One day at rehearsal, theatrical manager Henry Miller could not get the cast to play a scene in a satisfactory manner. Again and again, he had the actors repeat their lines, but each time the result was unsatisfactory.

Finally, he knelt and prayed: "Lord, I have tried and tried to give these people the benefit of my genius. I have struggled and bled for them. But now I can do no more. I leave them in Your hands."

Miller paused. He took out a handkerchief and wiped away a tear. Then he continued: "You'll be sorry, Lord."

Pilot: In his youth, Mark Twain once applied for a job as a river pilot on the Mississippi.

"Do you know where the snags are in this river?" asked the steamboat captain.

"No," replied Twain, "but that won't affect my piloting. I know where they ain't, and that's where I aim the boat."

WHISTLE: Tenor Jan Peerce got his first break some years ago when he was engaged to sing in New York's Radio City Music Hall. When he reported for work the first day, he was in a cheerful mood. As he entered the dressing room, he was whistling a merry tune.

"Stop that whistling!" snapped one of the other singers who shared the room. "Don't you know better than to whistle in a dressing room? Now one of us will be fired."

"Nonsense," laughed Peerce. "Surely you don't believe that outworn superstition?"

Just then the stage manager entered.

"Which one of you is Peerce?" he asked.

"I am," said the tenor.

"I'm sorry," said the manager. "We won't be able to use you after all. The show is running too long."

Thoroughly deflated, Peerce changed into his street clothes and left the theater. Fortunately, he got his job back a few days later. But he had learned his lesson. From that time on, he has never whistled in a dressing room.

Crime: Drama critic Alexander Woollcott was present one night at the opening of a dull murder mystery. Through two acts, he watched the proceedings with increasing boredom.

In the lobby during the intermission, he met the author of the play.

"Do you know yet who committed this crime?" the latter asked eagerly.

"Yes, I do," replied Woollcott, "but you needn't worry. They can't indict you for it."

TOO GOOD: One day, during spring training, a scout asked New York Giants manager John McGraw to give a veteran pitcher a tryout.

"No, thanks," said McGraw, who knew the pitcher was fond of the bottle.

"But he's got great stuff!" insisted the scout.

"I know," replied McGraw, "but he drinks most of it himself."

PERFECTION: Will Rogers and a friend were discussing the works of author-lexicographer Noah Webster.

"He was famed for his command of the language," said the friend. "He gave many lectures on the subject. His English was perfect."

WILL ROGERS . . . IT WASN'T SURPRISING.

"Mine would be too," replied Rogers, "if I wrote my own dictionary."

ADDITIONAL: During Herman Hickman's tenure as football coach at Yale, there were times when he envied other coaches who could scour the corn fields and coal mines for brawny talent. At Yale, this was strictly taboo—every athlete had to possess the necessary intellectual requirements.

Once, while on a summer vacation, Hickman met a fellow coach, not from the Ivy League. One morning the two were taking a sun bath on the veranda. A half hour passed without a word being spoken. Then Hickman said:

"What were you dreaming about?"

"If you must know," said the other, "I was dreaming about a 6-foot 4, 250-pound giant who could run like Grange, buck like Nagurski, pass like Baugh and kick like Groza. What were you dreaming about?"

"I guess we had the same dream," replied Hickman. "Only my guy could think like Einstein, too!"

He's Just a Farmer at Heart

Tennessee Ernie Homestead Bound When Sidetracked Into Radio-TV

By Emily Belser

HOLLYWOOD, July 16. TENNESSEE ERNIE FORD, noted for raising cornfed jokes on TV, would rather be raising cattle and hay up at the old homestead—a fancy 1,000-acre farm in Lake County, Calif.

"I never have got all hopped up about all this singin' I'm doin'," Ernie insisted, "but o'course I'm grateful for my success and a lotta nice things have happened to me."

The strapping, six-foot TV and radio star, started mushin' to Alaska eight years ago, but ran into a financial snow-slide in San Bernadino, Calif., and had to hire himself out as an airwave announcer instead of a hog-caller.

"Ma wife and I never wanted to do anything but farm," Ernie related.

"So back in 1946 Betty and I decided to head for gold country. We heard you could file a homesteading claim there and own your own land in five years.

"We put most of our money into a car, packed up our duds and took off. Then we ran out of money and I had to go to work."

ERNIE began announcing on a part-time basis, but three weeks later he was put on full time and two weeks after that the Fords gave up the idea of being neighbors with the eskimos.

Ernie became a disc jockey with a southern accent.

The Tennessee-born performer thinks he might have been a disc jockey the rest of his life if he hadn't moved to Pasadena. It was here that Ernie got into the habit of moseying onto Cliffie Stone's "Hometown Jamboree" to kid around and join in the Gospel sings. He eventually was hired as a regular and later won a record recording contract.

From here on out things began to happen to Ernie "Horatio Alger" Ford. He got a TV show, night club dates and guest appearances on the nation's top network shows. Now, he does a five-a-week, 30-minute TV show over NBC-TV (on KSD-TV 11 a.m. Monday through Friday) plus a 30-minute daily radio stint over CBS.

HIS records are top sellers all over the world including his "Shotgun Boogie," a favorite of England's Queen Elizabeth.

Ernie's Alaskan snowball really started to roll last year when he was signed to sing the title song in "River of No Return," starring Marilyn Monroe and Robert Mitchum. That year he also appeared on the Red Skelton show, two "I Love Lucy" shows and numerous Ed Sullivan shows. Along with Davy Crockett, Ernie has helped put Tennessee on the TV map like it's never been put there before.

But is he happy?

"Yeah, I like what I'm doin'," Ernie agreed, "but I like to hunt and fish and I just don't have enough time for it."

Ernie calls his audience "peapickers."

"People like to be called somethin'," he said. "You just can't call 'em like you would hogs, so I made up peapickers. That ain't no insult. I was raised on a workin' farm and picked peas myself."

HE was born in Ford Town, Tenn., Feb. 13, 1919, but later his family moved to Bristol, Tenn., where he attended public grade school and high school. In 1937, he got a job on the Bristol radio station as an announcer at $10 a week. "Because I could read," he said. Meanwhile, he took private singing lessons in his home town, and later went on to study at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music where he developed his voice for serious music. After settling down, more or less, as an announcer, he got his real start and his name, "Tennessee Ernie," on Cliffie Stone's Western style program in Pasadena. From then on he rose fast in the entertainment world. He got night club dates, a recording contract, radio and TV shows, and was the star of Kay Kyser's "College of Musical Knowledge" when it was revived.

The Fords have two sons, five-year-old Jeffrey Buckner and three-year-old Brion Leonard. They live in Whittier, Calif.

His closest pals say the man from Tennessee is tired of the sound of his own voice.

"He's just sick of listening to himself," they say, "he just can't stand it any more."

Ernie says he plans to "slack off" within the next year so he can spend more time on his farm.

"I'm gonna raise Herefords," he said, "or maybe Angus. And eventually I'm gonna retire and spend all my time there."

TENNESSEE ERNIE . . . "CALLING PEOPLE PEAPICKERS AIN'T NO INSULT."

Muny Opera Music Slated On Monitor

MONITOR, the new NBC weekend radio service, in its program tonight will include music to be heard in the Rodgers and Hammerstein Music Festival starting at the St. Louis Municipal Opera tomorrow night. In another feature today, Monitor will describe the sailing of another shipload of Tenth Division troops bound for Germany to replace the First Division. Among guests in today's lineup of programs will be Doris Day, Ethel Waters, Ethel Merman, Bette Davis, and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Kelly of Philadelphia, parents of actress Grace Kelly.

Pop singers Charlie Applewhite and Georgia Gibbs and concert baritone Earl Wrightson will be heard on Percy Faith's What's New in Music program on KMOX at 5:15 this evening.

JACK CARSON will be starred in the comedy "Horse Sense" on KWK's Family Theater at 9:30 tonight, with Red O'Connor as the program host. The play is about a showman who features a horse on his air productions to avoid paying a star's salary.

In his Muny Opera previews on KSD at 9 tonight, Frank Eschen will review the Rodgers and Hammerstein Concert program arranged for the coming week at the Municipal Opera.

The Catholic Hour on KSD at 1 this afternoon will present the third in a series of talks by Catholic laymen. Dr. Karl Stern of the Department of Psychiatry of the Ottawa, Canada, General Hospital, will discuss psychiatry and religion.

Mark Van Doren, poet and critic, and Maurice Samuel, author and lecturer, will be heard in another series of dialogues, "Words We Live By," on KSD's Eternal Light at 11:30 this morning.

The Proudly We Hail program on KWK at 12 noon today will be "Assignment for Tomorrow," honoring the engineers and test pilots who build and fly the "planes of tomorrow."

Singer Sam Davis Jr. will be on the Peter Potter Juke Box Jury on KMOX at 6:15 this evening.

We would enjoy a repeat showing of "Count of Monte Cristo" by Alexander Dumas. Remember seeing it on a late movie and we enjoyed it tremendously. Also "The Silver Queen" starring George Brent. Thank you for so much enjoyment.

I have read that the programs My Little Margie, Professional Father, So This Is Hollywood, Meet Millie and Public Defender will not be back on the air in the fall. That is to be regretted because these are all good clean shows. We could better get along without shows that deal with crime and murder, which do not help in the fight against juvenile delinquency.

SUMMER TV FAN.

As Crosby Sees It

Offers New Switch For Quiz Programs

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, July 16.

I'M TIRED of watching people win things on television. I think half the fun is watching people lose. Now if you happen to be a sponsor shopping around for a television show, I have this little package I call "Win or Lose," which I guarantee will attract a lot of people like myself who are tired of watching people win things.

On this show, the emcee, Rupert Rutherford, who combines both the best and the worst qualities of Arthur Godfrey, Bert Parks and Arlene Francis, will lure onto the stage Mrs. Oswald D. Flunk of Flint, Michigan, who, by scrupulous research, we have learned is a world expert on Shakespeare and the Bible. Rutherford then plies her with questions on bareknuckle boxing.

First, we throw her some easy pitches. "Who is the man who invented the uppercut? His first name is "Sam." Well, of course, she gobbles these up, makes the play to first and the next you know—six weeks later, same time, same station—she's got $112,000 and she's playing for the $224,000 question.

NOW, HERE'S the gimmick. after the first $4000, she's got to put up something. Let's say she's trying for the $8000 question. She not only stands to lose the 4000 clams she has already won, but she has got to put up something of her own, maybe the grand piano. And on the 32 thousand dollar question, she lays down maybe the car and after that the house.

And on the $112,000 question she puts her husband on the line and, after that, the children. But—now pay attention—here the questions get tough.

"James Corbett?" quavers Mrs. Flunk.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Flunk. It was Jack Broughton," shouts Rupert. "But that was a nice try. You got up to $112,000—before you lost it all. And everything else."

And then — get this — we switch to Mrs. Flunk's house—live cameras and all.

"THERE GOES the television set," yells Rupert. And a couple of guys come in and carry it off.

"And there goes the washing machine that Mrs. Flunk scrimped and saved for three years to buy. And there goes Mr. Flunk on the arm of that nice-looking blonde. And there the children are being led off into slavery. . . ."

I tell you it can't miss. We'd have every man, woman and child in the country weeping buckets. And the nice thing about it is, first, we sign up Mrs. Flunk for guest appearances. Brother, she'll have 'em all. "Strike It Rich" will be beating down the doors to get her. I can just hear them now.

"HERE IS the poor unfortunate woman who lost everything on 'Win or Lose.' And while we are waiting for the heart lines to begin operating, Mrs. Flunk, tell us your story."

Then, as millions weep, Mrs. Flunk tells how she had Jack Broughton right on the tip of her tongue and that James Corbett was just a typographical error. And if she hadn't wasted all that time reading Shakespeare and the Bible she'd be rich. Naturally, the telephones begin to ring, offering poor Mrs. Flunk money and oil wells and the other necessities of life.

We can play the whole sob circuit with the poor old girl—"Welcome, Travelers," "On Your Account," "This Is Your Life"—and the dear old public will ransom the children, rescue the husband, repurchase the house and put new wallpaper in the nursery.

I tell you, it can't miss.

JEAN SANDERS

MARGARET ROBERTS

THOMAS HAYWARD

EDWIN STEFFE

MUNICIPAL OPERA will open a Rodgers and Hammerstein Stage Festival of six weeks, the second half of its season, tomorrow night with its third presentation of a Rodgers and Hammerstein Concert. The concert will run a week.

Both Richard Rodgers, the composer, and Oscar Hammerstein, II, the lyricist and writer of books for the duo's successes, will be present at the opening. Rodgers is scheduled to conduct the "Oklahoma!" selections on the program.

In addition to the "Oklahoma!" numbers, the program will include songs and dances from "Allegro," "Carousel," "State Fair," "The King and I," "Me and Juliet," and "South Pacific." Soloists will be soprano Margaret Roberts, contralto Jean Sanders, tenor Thomas Hayward, baritone Edwin Steffe. The principal dancers will be Cynthia Scott, Robert Pagent and Raimonda Orselli. The full choruses will take part, with an augmented 61-piece orchestra under the direction of Edwin McArthur.

The program follows:

From "Allegro": overture; "A Fellow Needs a Friend," (Miss Roberts and Steffe); "So Far" (Miss Sanders); "You Are Never Away" (Miss Sanders and the singing chorus).

From "Carousel": "If I Loved You" (Hayward); "When I Marry Mr. Snow" (Miss Roberts); "A Real Nice Clambake" (the singing chorus); "Soliloquy" (Steffe).

From the movie, "State Fair": "That's For Me" (Hayward); "It Might as Well Be Spring" (Miss Sanders); "It's a Grand Night for Singing" (Miss Roberts, Steffe and the singing chorus, with the dancers).

From "The King and I": "Shall We Dance?" (the orchestra); "We Kiss in a Shadow" (Miss Roberts and Hayward); "I Whistle a Happy Tune" (the singing chorus); "I Have Dreamed" (Miss Sanders and Steffe); "Hello, Young Lovers" (Miss Roberts).

From "Me and Juliet": "Keep It Gay" (the singing chorus); "No Other Love" (Miss Roberts, Steffe, the singing chorus).

From "South Pacific": Overture.

From "Oklahoma!": "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning" (Hayward); "The Surrey with the Fringe on Top" (Steffe); "Out of My Dreams" (Miss Sanders and the singing chorus); "Many a New Day," and "Kansas City" (the dancers); "People Will Say We're In Love" (Miss Roberts and Hayward); "Oklahoma!" (the entire company).

Following the concert week, the Forest Park theater will present "Carousel," previously produced in 1950; "Allegro," "The King and I," and "South Pacific," all being given at the theater for the first time.

Miss Roberts is a concert singer who was stock soprano at Muny Opera in 1947. Miss Sanders is a grand opera, concert and oratorio singer. Hayward, a Metropolitan Opera tenor, first sang at Muny Opera in "Bohemian Girl" in 1951. Steffe appeared at Muny Opera for eight consecutive seasons.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

STRATEGIC AIR COMMAND—Some magnificent aerial shots of the giant B-36 and B-47 bombers in VistaVision, and a modest, honest drama about how Lt. Col. Jimmy Stewart, the Cards' star third-baseman, and wife June Allyson grumble about his being yanked back into the Air Force, but learn why it's necessary for the country's safety. FOX.

LAND OF THE PHARAOHS—Intrigue and murder in ancient Egypt as a ruthless pharaoh is obsessed with the idea of building a robber-proof pyramid tomb for himself. Fairly literate and absorbing stuff, with a strong performance by Jack Hawkins as the ruler, and Joan Collins as a new English dish. Some vast and spectacular shots (it's in CinemaScope) of thousands of extras toiling on the pyramid. ST. LOUIS.

THE WAYWARD WIFE—Gina Lollobrigida's acting talent, although not her voluptuous beauty, is wasted in an Italian attempt at sordid, sensational realism, in an account of a bored wife's adultery. Diluted by a weak, trite script, and marred by the dubbing in of English dialogue, unsatisfactory and confusing. SHADY OAK.

INTERRUPTED MELODY—Powerful and moving drama about the comeback of Marjorie Lawrence, Metropolitan Opera soprano, after being paralyzed by polio in 1941. Fine performances by Eleanor Parker as the singer and Glenn Ford as her husband. Some stirring operatic sequences, with Eileen Farrell, whose voice is dubbed in for that of Miss Parker, singing beautifully. In CinemaScope. LOEW'S STATE.

CINERAMA HOLIDAY—The spectacular depth process shows sights and sounds of Paris, Switzerland and America. AMBASSADOR.

Synthetic Music

By Thomas B. Sherman

THE RCA Electronic Synthesizer which reproduces the sound of any musical instrument by manipulation of overtones has been recorded in a limited demonstration of its repertory. (RCA-Victor, One 12-inch LP.) The results are certainly fascinating, but scarcely support the claim that it will hereafter be capable of producing any sound that the human mind can imagine. It is true that in the synthetic performances of Bach, Brahms and Stephen Foster here recorded one can detect a similarity to the timbres of the violin, piano, trumpet and other instruments. But the absence of any human artist in this demonstration was plainly evident. In each instance it sounded like an inferior instrument being played by an idiot child who had somehow managed to master its mechanics.

It is certainly conceivable that electronic devices may expand the acoustic resources of music. But it should be equally certain that the artistic results can never exceed the qualities of the human mind at the source of the music wherever the source may be.

CONCERTO: Another recording by David Oistrakh, the premier Soviet violinist, shows his complete mastery in the Bruch G Minor Violin Concerto and the Prokofieff Violin Concerto in D. He is associated here with the London Symphony Orchestra conducted by Lovro von Matacio. (Angel, One 12-inch LP.) Firmness of line and a generally tight control of means is consistent with an ample play of romantic feeling. Sound reproduction is excellent.

ORCHESTRAL: A new record in the Westminster Laboratory Series aimed particularly at High-Fi addicts offers Chabrier's "Espana," "Sensemaya" and "Cuanahuac" by the Mexican composer Revueltas and Mossalov's "Iron Foundry." The recording orchestra is the Philharmonic Symphony of London conducted by Argeo Qradri. (One 12-inch LP.) Reproduction is brilliant with clearly differentiated timbres even on a machine that cuts off well before the 10,000 vibrations per second mark is reached. "Sensemaya" by Revueltas involves a strong, vivid use of primitive rhythms. Mossalov's "Iron Fountry," a descriptive piece put together with uncommon skill, makes it unnecessary to visit an iron foundry. But if you have visited one it will not be necessary to hear the piece . . . Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, brilliantly executed by the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy, is firmly and logically organized, inventive and emotionally appealing. William Schumann's Symphony No. 6 (on the other side) seems a disjointed series of sound effects. Sound reproduction is first rate. (Columbia, One 12-inch LP.)

CHAMBER WORKS: The Brahms String Quartets in A Minor and B Flat Major are performed by the Vegh Quartet in a manner favorable to their deeplying emotions. This quartet is not distinguished for its mellow sound, but it plays with understanding and authority. (London, One 12-inch LP) . . . Handel's Twelve Concerti Grossi for String Orchestra stay within a fairly limited emotional range but are charmingly diversified for all of that. The performances by the English Baroque Orchestra under Herman Scherchen move with an easy grace consistent with crisp articulation and firm rhythms. The agreeable sound of the strings is evidence of an excellent reproduction. (Westminster, four 12-inch LPs in album.)

VOCAL: The unusual timbre of Maria Kurenko's soprano voice is always an arresting feature of her records and so it is in her performances of Moussorgsky's aptly named "Sunless Cycle." Five Songs by Prokofieff and Six Songs by Gretchaninoff. The reproduction is first rate. (Capitol one 12-inch L.P.) The somber resignation of Moussorgky is unrelieved and, to me, not very interesting. Prokofieff's songs are more accessible; but Gretchaninoff, though quite as Russian as the other two, is more naturally lyrical.

FOLK MUSIC: A group of "French-Canadian Folk Songs" is effectively sung by Pierrete Champous in a voice with the range and quality of a baritone. The Canadians have understandably taken over a number of French folk songs including "Au Clair de la Lune," "Aupres de ma Blonde" and "Alouette" which appear in this list. Which of the others are purely indigenous must be left to the specialists in folk-lore; but they all have a hearty grass roots flavor and humor. Mlle. Champous sings with plenty of authority aided by an extraordinarily clear enunciation. Samuel Levitan, pianist and Jacques Verdon, fiddler, supply the accompaniments. (Esoteric, One 12-inch LP.)

Best Sellers

RACHMANINOFF: Piano Concerto No. 2, played by Leonard Pennario and the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, Vladimir Golschmann conducting. (Capitol, One 12-inch LP.)

SOUNDS AND MUSIC OF THE R.C.A. ELECTRONIC SYNTHESIZER: See review in this column (R.C.A.-VICTOR, One 12-inch LP.)

Massey and Palance Not Up to 'Caesar'

By Walter F. Kerr

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

STRATFORD, Conn., July 16.

NOTHING is more urgently needed in the American theater than a combined training-school and practicing playhouse for actors who are eager to move beyond the prose rhythms of realism into the expansive excitement of first-rate verse. That is to say, nothing is more urgently needed than the very kind of festival theater and academy that Lawrence Langner has envisioned for his brand new summer project at Stratford, Conn.

Unhappily, the actors who most need help—and this over a prolonged period of time—are the ones Mr. Langner and Director Denis Carey have assembled to dawdle through the playhouse's opening bill, "Julius Caesar." They are experienced performers of genuine talent who have given their professional lives to the demands of routine prose and who are now pretty tightly bound by the fact.

Turning to Shakespeare, they can only try one of two things. They can, with a mighty and meaningless effort, reduce the lively lyricism to a casual, colloquial level, making Shakespeare sound as though he had been written yesterday and would be forgotten tomorrow. Or, taking a deep breath, they can face the fact that they are dealing with poetry—that unfamiliar tongue—and sing it in an unaccustomed and thoroughly self-conscious falsetto.

IT IS MORE OR LESS the latter tack that Raymond Massey (Brutus) and Jack Palance (Cassius) have taken under Mr. Carey's management. Mr. Massey's service to the theater has been long and valuable; Mr. Palance's career has been shorter but has led to a considerable popularity in films. Neither is equipped by any sort of training to make these particular lines bristle with intellectual energy or crackle across the footlights with emotional fire.

Mr. Palance has an initial whack at it. With a dagger in his boot and a glare in his eye, he halts Brutus in the marketplace and whispers his venom urgently. This, it seems, is going to be a distraught Cassius, a Cassius almost sick and fainting with the intensity of the bitterness inside him. But the bitterness really is locked up inside Mr. Palance, a mere haunted look on his face; it will not spill out into a flashing verbal cascade, it cannot rise to the fascinating vocal hysteria the part demands. After 20 minutes or so, this Cassius is simply a sullen, bad-tempered opportunist.

Raymond Massey makes Brutus a commencement orator from the outset. He is perfectly willing to come to the edge of the narrow apron and speak to the customers out front; but he speaks to them not as an agitated, uncertain, fiercely troubled man—he speaks to them as a father, a father who has read Shakespeare to his children for evenings on end and has probably never been thanked for it. Even an overwrought epithet ("O! conspiracy!") comes from him as an apostrophe to the autumn moon, and Brutus sinks slowly into a sea of silken gentility.

NOR DO THESE mature and perhaps no longer malleable professionals seem to be getting much in the way of revitalizing guidance from their director, Mr. Carey, abetted by designer Horace Armistead, is working in an outmoded picture-frame manner. Painted Roman arches flank the proscenium opening, a dizzying flight of steps rises at center stage to a row of cut-out and frequently weaving columns — giving the impression that Rome was, after all, built in a day. Extras tumble up and down the stairway in profusion but without expressive style. And the principals, once they hit the ground floor, move in what I think of as "Desert Song" patterns: the Red Shadow crosses five paces to the right while four Riffs cross five paces to the left. There is almost never a sense of tense physical involvement in the mental struggle that is taking place.

It remains for some of the younger members of the company to suggest what such a Shakespeare theater can be—given time and a fresher vision. Christopher Plummer is an actor who can play, and should be playing, Mark Antony. So long as he is chafing at the bit, guardedly pretending friendship with the murderers of Caesar while rapidly and quietly planning his own revenge, he is exciting to watch. He is capable of cutting loose in the big scene with the crowd, too: even now the controlled, echoing irony of his "honorable man" refrain is striking. But he must, before the scene is done, strike up a dramatic relationship, plunge into a give-and-take with the crowd. Since Mr. Carey's crowd is a mere assortment of random costumes and mechanical (though noisy) responses, the real battle can never take place and Mr. Plummer is left alone with his thoughts.

Some Hints On Removing Perspiration

By Dorothy Brainerd

MRS. E. D. writes that until a few months ago her husband sent his shirts to the laundry, and apparently the day she wrote us she was wishing that he still did. Seems that she had been trying everything she could think of to remove perspiration stains from under the arms, but nothing had helped and she was afraid that these new shirts had come to a sad end.

But take heart, Mrs. D., things may not be that bad. To remove old perspiration stains on white garments, place the stained surface over a bowl of steaming water; apply hydrogen peroxide to which a few drops of ammonia have been added, then rinse well.

To remove the odor of perspiration, sponge the stained part with warm water to which a few drops of vinegar have been added; sprinkle powdered pepsin over the stain, work it into the cloth and let stand from one to two hours, keeping the spot damp. Brush off the powder and rinse well, then wash the garment in soap and water and bleach in the sun.

"I AM NEW at homemaking," writes "June Bride," "but I would like to try to make some jelly this summer. Would you tell me how much I can make at one time? Also, what do they mean by a 'full, rolling boil'? I notice this term often in recipes; does it just mean a boil or why is it described in this way?"

Glad to see that you are taking your new task so seriously. And you are smart to ask these questions before you start, instead of learning by the trial and error method. It is a common mistake for women to try to make too much jelly at one time.

Better jelly results when not more than four to six cups of juice are prepared at one time. If you try to make a larger batch you will have to boil it longer, and that means loss of flavor. It also tends to darken the jelly and spoil those lovely, jewel-like tones.

A "full, rolling boil" is no half-hearted thing, no slight boiling around the edges. It is a bubbling, steaming boil that no amount of stirring can stir down.

Best of luck with your jelly making.

FROM STAUNTON, ILL., writes Mrs. M.J.L.: "I have heard of using boiled linseed oil and turpentine to help preserve cloth awnings, but I can't remember what proportions of each to use. It is put on with a paint brush and is supposed to help bring out the color and add oil. Have you ever heard of this?"

Yes, boiled linseed oil and turpentine sometimes are mixed 50-50 per cent for use on awnings. It is true that this mixture does bring out the color and give life to the canvas; however, it also has a tendency to harden the canvas.

For this reason I believe that you might find it more practical to use something already prepared for this specific purpose. There are several such preparations made expressly for use on awnings which may be purchased in paint stores or departments.

IF THOSE MOSQUITOES and other flying insects have been spoiling your out-of-door fun, you may be happy to know that a new repellent is now appearing in St. Louis stores which is claimed to be extra safe because it contains no DDT or toxic formulas, and is registered with both the state and the Federal Government as being non-toxic.

The container is so arranged that a small can of repellent 404 is heated by a candle flame, releasing visible vapors of the repellent into the atmosphere and making those insects mighty unhappy that they tried to crash your party.

"I AM JUST SICK over my dining room table," explains Mrs. T.J.P. "I've never even used it, and now it is stained from the black rubber tipped legs on a wire fruit bowl. It is beechwood and elm, in a spice finish."

Of course you are sick over having such an unfortunate thing happen to a brand new table, Mrs. P. Your difficulty was caused by the fact that these legs probably were synthetic rubber, which contains an acid which causes such spots.

I would suggest that you get some rubbing compound (which may be purchased in paint stores or hardware departments) and see if it won't help. Use a dry cloth and rub with the grain of the wood. Rub rather heavily on the spots, and feather-edge it off. When you have finished this operation, wax the entire table top with paste wax.

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your questions, or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

Margaret O'Brien Back—And Still Sobbing

HOLLYWOOD, July 16.—Margaret O'Brien went before the Hollywood cameras the other day for the first time in five years in a starring role in R.K.O.'s "Glory" and, heaven help us, she'll cry again.

"I won't cry anything like I did in 'Journey for Margaret' when I whimpered and howled sincerely for the first four-and-a-half minutes of the picture," she promised. "That was a seven-handkerchief picture. This will only be a sniffler. That's why I like it. You know I cried my way through almost every picture I made before."

English Women Not Prissy, Says Deborah

HOLLYWOOD, July 16 (UP)—Deborah Kerr finished her long run in the play, "Tea and Sympathy," with the hope she's forever rid of the American notion that British women are "prissy."

The red-haired actress ended the road show here of her Broadway hit drama after 731 performances.

It was a triumphant homecoming for the star, who left Hollywood two years ago even before her sensational bathing suit scene in "From Here to Eternity" was released and turned her into a glamour queen.

Now she's beginning a new life in the movies—changed, she believes, by her portrayal of the daring woman in "Tea and Sympathy" and the sensual army wife in "Eternity."

"I'm not changed one iota," she said firmly. "But the attitude toward me in Hollywood has definitely changed. They used to think I was a bit prissy!

"You have two strikes against you in America if you're from England. They automatically endow you with a tiara.

"And if you're French —! You're a madame or a courtesan."

At 29, She Can't Get Consent to Marry

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

I AM 29 years old and my mother refuses to let me marry. I am dating a very nice man who is two years my senior and he has asked me to marry him. There is absolutely nothing wrong with him. He is well behaved, well established in business and respected and well liked by everyone. My mother refuses to let him come to our home and insults him every chance she gets. He is getting fed up although he has been very patient. This has been going on for over a year. Please help me, Martha. I love him very much. PAT.

You have to lead your own life. Your mother can't do it for you, nor can she make your decisions. I certainly wouldn't encourage you to flout her wishes entirely, because she may have good and sensible reasons why she dislikes this particular man and in that case you would be wise to listen to her. If, however, she objects only because you will leave her, you will have to take your stand. Make sure that she feels secure in your affection and concern, even though you won't be living with her. Make sure you are marrying a man who will share that concern and won't try to force you out of her life. Perhaps if you could find an apartment for her near your home, so that you could drop in to see her every day or so, or if you could find a companion so she wouldn't be lonely, she would consent to your marriage with better grace.

Dear Martha:

● I MARRIED A MAN with several children because I felt sorry for them. I thought I would be appreciated but find I am just the slave. The children won't turn a hand to do anything and he won't say a word or teach them a thing. Now the children are away on vacation and he won't stay at home with me. Martha, do you think I mean anything to this man or is he using me for a baby sitter? When the children can take care of themselves he will be gone for good. I am 47 and he is 46. Should I get out now and forget him? I know he doesn't love me.

WONDERING.

It certainly looks as though he wanted a baby sitter, but that doesn't mean you should give up the marriage and run out on him. You must care something for him or you wouldn't have married him—even though you say you wanted only to help the children. So, do what you can now to create a good home for him as well as for them. Without neglecting them, start paying special attention to your husband and make sure he realizes that he is important to you. Don't assume he'll be gone when the children are grown. Build the kind of marriage and create the kind of home that will make him want to stay, not run away.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 18 and have been going with a boy for two years. He never asks me for a date earlier than a day in advance and often I already have a date. This makes him mad and he starts going with other girls. When we do date he acts as if he's ashamed of me. Instead of going out he wants to stay at home. But when I go to a movie with my girl friends who do I see but this boy with his friends. We did go steady but under the circumstances I thought it was silly and gave him back his ring. Recently he telephoned to ask me to a big event, scheduled for the next day, and I had already made plans to go with someone else. Now he won't have anything to do with me. I love him but do you think he's worth it? He has caused me a lot of heartache but he's so hard to forget. What do you suggest?

BERNIE.

I'm afraid you'll have to forget him. How can you remember him when he's around so seldom? He's either thoughtless and rude or he really doesn't care whether he gets that date or not. Otherwise, he would be calling well in advance. He mopes because you don't wait for him. He refuses to take you to the show, yet goes there with his friends. He acts as though he's ashamed of you. He has turned stubborn because you dared to accept another date. I'm sorry, Bernie, but I can't see much hope in this romance. I think you'd better accept the other dates and try not to feel too unhappy about this one. I don't think you'll be able to change him, so why waste time in useless tears?

Dear Martha:

● MY HUSBAND'S FATHER is 91 years old. Besides my husband there are three boys and one girl in the family. Dad and the daughter lived together after the mother's death until the girl was 36 when she married. Then he went to the home of one of the boys, stayed there awhile, then spent six years at another son's home. When the son's wife became ill, Dad came to us, although we didn't have much room and my husband and I had to give up our room to him. Since then he has been going from one son's home to another. Someone suggested he spend one month at each place, but I though he should stay at least three as he hates to move and has remarked that he wished he were dead so we wouldn't have to bother with him. Right now, a friend is caring for him. I have two elderly uncles, one blind, and I cook things several times each week for them and do their cleaning. I think we have done our share for Dad and since others can care for him I feel my responsibility is to these two uncles. My husband says I just don't want to keep his father here. Am I wrong in refusing to have him here and helping my uncles instead? TROUBLED.

I had to cut out much of your letter but from what you say I know that you have been generous in your thought toward your father-in-law and have made a sacrifice within your own family to keep him from time to time. I think you are right in that others can care for him while your uncles have no one else. However, remember that aged persons need more than a roof over their heads and three meals a day. They need friendship and affection and, above all, a place they can call home, no matter how modest it is. The most cruel thing your in-laws could do to their father is to throw him from one home to another. No wonder he wants to die and be free of the hurt of being a burden. If he is receiving good care at the home where he is now, it would be better to leave him there than to force him to move every few weeks because someone gets tired of having him around. Or, if it would solve the family conscience to keep him at home, maybe all can pitch in to build a garage apartment or an extra room and pay for a companion and let him stay at one place the rest of his days.

Martha Carr is glad to answer your questions. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot answer problems of a medical or legal nature.

Sleek and Sophisticated Look for Autumn

The Casualness That Has Characterized Fashions for Several Years Will Give Way to a Suave Elegance

HEMLINE FROTHING IS FEATURED BY HARVEY BERIN WHO USES BLACK CHANTILLY LACE AND BRAID ON BLACK SILK VELVET FOR A STRIKING EVENING DRESS.

WORSTED TWEED, WOOL JERSEY AND VELVET COMBINE IN THE DESIGN OF THIS PAUL PARNES COSTUME. SHADES ARE GRAY, RED AND WHITE.

By Sylvia Stiles
Post-Dispatch Fashion Writer

NEW YORK, July 16.

WHEN autumn comes, women who follow fashions will want to look sleek and sophisticated. The casualness that has characterized fashions for several years has disappeared, and in its place is a suave elegance distinguished by a streamline silhouette, aristocratic fabrics, and dramatic colors.

The new season calls for superlatives to describe the changes that have taken place in the appearance of women's clothes since the last collections of the New York designers were shown six months ago. It's a fabulous era when mink is bantered about like rabbit, and when sterling silver clicks on the tips of spindle heels. It's an exacting time, too, when the length of a shirt is measured by the time of day, when a hairpin turn governs the success of a sleeve, and when the placing of a waistline is determined by the material of which a belt is made.

Surprisingly, you can turn your back on some of the new trends and still be in style proving that there is a fantail of fullness in your skirt or a cluster of gathers below a yoke at the back of your jacket. Some of the slimmest looking costumes at the front burst into great width at the back. There's a slinky, siren-like element to some of the fashions, also, as skirts remain slender to the knees where a series of little godets flutter into the limelight, or a barem drapery actually reveals the knees as the wearer walks.

Throughout the past week more than 50 of the leading American designers have given their interpretation of fall and winter styles at the twenty-fifth anniversary press week sponsored by the New York Dress Institute, and each one has offered convincing proof that we will have to invest in a complete new wardrobe or do some elaborate alterations of last year's models to achieve the suave effect that is now in vogue.

SKIRT lengths as well as silhouettes always bring questioning when a new season is launched. Talk about shorter skirts for daytime wear has been noteworthy as several fashion authorities are advocating hemlines sixteen or more inches from the floor. However, the majority of the designers say that it's still fashionable to wear the most becoming length for the street. When in comes to late-day, skirts definitely are longer while the instep or floor length is being revived for evening. Pauline Rigee's "intermission" length which covers the calf of the leg is especially flattering and certainly destined to make fashion history.

Although the different designers have their own descriptive terms for the current silhouette, all are agreed that it must be a tapered one. Nettie Rosenstein, noted for many years for her ability to glorify the American figure, calls her silhouette a "suave" one. As she interprets the word the silhouette is form-fitting but never constrains the waistline. It usually is unbelted. The bosom is rounded and the hips are sleek. Other designers prefer to drape the hipline. Karen Stark who designs for Harvey Berin adds a hipline belt to many dresses, fastening it with a flat bow at the front. She likes satin for these belts just as she likes satin bands to adorn bodices.

THE wool dress for town wear will be a featured fashion for fall, judging by the enthusiastic indorsement given it by the majority of designers. The Ben Reig collection has some outstanding examples of it. Some are in the mood of suits, being made of British plaids or French rushed chiffon tweed. One dress has pleats released below the hipband of a moulded bodice. A wool dress for afternoon use is navy blue worsted that is tucked generously and satin sashed. Wool is being used extensively for dinner and evening dresses. One Reig evening sheath of pale toned chiffon wool cashmere is embroidered with pearls and rhinestones. Pauline Trigere shows a group of handsome wool dinner dresses, and one of her most handsome ball gowns is of charcoal gray woolen accented with silvery silk which adorns the bodice and forms an enormous sash ending in a train.

Coat styles are so varied, that most women who are planning new wardrobes may have difficulty in making a choice. Monte-Sano and Pruzan who are recognized as master tailors as well as trend-setters in coat designs show both slim and full models, but call attention to the fact that even the fuller ones have a subtle, taped hemline. The coat that's less than full length is especially significant in this and other collections. Most of the shorter coats have matching skirts so that they serve a dual purpose. The Monte-Sano coat with the low belt at the back looks especially striking. One of these coats made of linton tweed has the low back belt below a pleated section. Gathers held at the back by a low belt also call attention to a popular silhouette. Slimness through the hipline is a characteristic of many coats, larger collars illustrate atrend.

Adele Simpson always may be depended upon to present a collection that is keyed to the needs of the American woman. She knows that every woman likes a complete costume, so each season offers her version of the perfect ensemble.

HER shorter topcoats with related dresses are typical of the late 1955 trend. The seven-eighths-length coat is representative. Also outstanding are her little bolero jackets over slim sheath dresses. She calls this bolero the "Martingale" because it has a belted back. A two-piece suit which adds an overblouse so that the outfit has a costume emphasis is another evidence of how this designer puts together related items for a unified whole.

Suits throughout the collections never overlook the importance of being complete costumes. Many different types are available. In fact there are such different versions of one basic suit that several of the designers present their suits in a complete series. Harry Frechtel's introduction of five versions of a mushroom toned suit is an example of this. The variations include double-breasted and single-breasted jackets, fitted waistlines, boxy themes, and a version of the tunic.

For an unusual wrap, Anthony Blotta's double-decker coat may be considered. This is cut in two parts with the top half stopping just below the hipline and the lower part widened to a full hemline. Karen Stark has a double-decker dress with a handsome lace tunic that is knee length over a full, pleated skirt. Originality is expressed, also, in many of the designs by Tina Leser. Her blanket coats and skirts made out of plaid wool blankets, her skirts that are made of Brussels lace usually associated with very fine tablecloths, her glittering saris, and her Scotch plain cashmere sashes not only have a unique but a very cosmopolitan flair.

A SLIM BUT SHAPELY DAY DRESS OF TAUPE WOOL BY MOLLIE PARNIS HAS AN OPEN COLLAR THAT SHOWS A BLENDING SATIN SCARF.

DESIGNER CHRISTIAN DIOR'S GRAY AND RED PIN STRIPE WORSTED SUIT FEATURES THE LONGER JACKET WITH BUTTON TAB COLLAR.

PROPER HAIR CARE:

Almost every lady has had difficult problems . . . Ragsdale's has these suggestions for normal hair care:

Brushing . . . your hair should be brushed thoroughly at least once daily, preferably twice. Use long, firm strokes with a stiff brush.

Shampooing . . . One GOOD shampoo a week with all of the soap completely rinsed out of the hair is normal. If your hair is oily or inclined to have dandruff, a good shampoo every five days is better.

Dandruff . . . Most cases of dandruff is simple scalp shedding of dry, dead skin. A good shampoo will remove this type of dandruff and more frequent shampoos often cure it.

The two important things to watch in all shampoos . . . first, be certain that only top quality soaps are used, and second, have all soap rinsed out of the hair. Ragsdale guarantees to use the best shampoo soaps obtainable.

Permanent Waves . . . The best permanent wave will grow out in three to six months, depending upon how fast your hair grows. For best results your permanent should be shampooed and styled every week. If it is impossible for you to get a professional shampoo and style weekly and you do your own hair, then we suggest the following:

You will get better service from your permanent if you pin up your hair after each shampoo. Normally you will need one or two light hair shapings between each permanent. This will keep your hair at the proper length.

A Snap Curl Cold Wave is the best for all types of hair because there is no heat to dry your hair. The curls are one to one and one-half inches closer to scalp than many types of permanents and the final result can hardly be told from naturally curly hair. Your hair, like your skin, requires proper care and treatment if you wish it to look its glistening best. If you want your hair to look right, and be easily managed, it should receive proper hair shaping. If your hair is tinted or bleached it takes only a little extra care to keep it looking natural.

It takes 3 to 10 years of practical beauty work to become an expert hair dresser. Our average operator has between 8 and 9 years' experience. For the last 15 years we have given many, many thousands of permanents each year, so it is just natural that we would have more knowledge of permanent waving than someone who gives one or two permanents a week—Got a hair problem? Go to Ragsdale Beauty Shop.

P.S.: For the best hair results get Professional treatment as often as you can, and give yourself the best possible home care. . . . . A professional permanent wave or hair style will improve your appearance and morale more than any other one thing can possibly do . . . When you do get a professional permanent wave (and you will) go to a Ragsdale Beauty Shop.

All the softened flattery and graceful lines of the latest hair fashions. You will love that "extra-something" in this fashionable hair-do. A hair style that can have a "brushed look" for casual hours or the dressed-up look for party-going. Our SNAP CURL Creme Oil Cold Wave is the secret of its success. And remember, all of our permanents are guaranteed.

Put on Coat For Company?

By Emily Post

A MAN writes me as follows: "When I come home from the office at night I like to make myself comfortable and if we are not going out later in the evening, I change into slacks and a sport shirt. Quite often friends or neighbors drop in on us unexpectedly for a visit. When this happens my wife insists that I put on a tie and jacket. This has always been a source of irritation to me but to keep peace I put them on. If a man's house is his castle, as the saying goes, why shouldn't he be allowed to do what he pleases in it? Don't you think this is carrying etiquette a little too far? I would very much appreciate hearing your views on this matter."

If you invited them over and then did not dress, that would be discourteous. But should friends happen in unexpectedly while you are spending an evening at home with your family, I see no reason why you should not stay as you are. If they bring strangers with them, then you would be rather obliged to put on a coat.

DEAR MRS. POST: In filling in the names of the parents on birth announcements, how are they correctly written?

Answer: To intimate friends you merely sign Mary and John, to others you would write Mary and John Brown. To sign Mr. and Mrs. would be bad form. An engraved or printed announcement reading Mr. and Mrs. John Brown have the happiness to announce the birth of their daughter Mary on such and such a day would be entirely proper.

DEAR MRS. POST: I have two diamond rings. One is my engagement ring and the other is a ring which I inherited from my mother. I wear one on each hand. A friend of mine has told me that wearing two diamond rings at the same time is in bad taste. Is this true?

Answer: Nonsense! A ring on each hand is perfectly good taste.

Action Still Talks Louder Than Words

By Angelo Patri

IF YOU wanted a child to acquire a good habit that he might learn a good way of life you would not hope to succeed by teaching him the opposite idea, now would you? Yet somehow we do manage to make that mistake.

A mother teaches her child to be kind and gentle and never, never injure another child, bird or beast. And one day when she takes this child out shopping he sees a toy pistol and begs for it. His mother buys the one or maybe the pair he points out and he swaggers out of the shop a happy child. If his mother could see how that child's face had changed from what it was when he entered the shop she would not be so pleased.

EVERY PARENT wants his child to be recognized by and by as a lady or gentleman of culture, well mannered and of a pleasant personality. He knows that good reading is one of the best possible forces to get to play on the child's intelligence toward that end. One day his child asks for a quarter.

"What for?" "I want to buy a book." "What book?" "A new comic book." The youngster gets the Comic. Dad and mother are too busy to see that this Comic is loaded with evil. What ideas will that book teach? Gentle manners and a pleasing personality?

THERE ARE few parents who would not say that they wanted their child to be honest, to keep his word once given and to search for truth in all his walks through life. Of course. One day father or mother agrees to do something he is asked to do by a friend. He knows that he is not going to do this because it will cost too much money or take too much time but he says, "Of course. Sure, sure," and then he says, to his home circle, "What a crust. Like fun I'm doing that." "But you promised." "What could I do? I'll get out of it all right."

The long and the short of it is that what we do talks much louder than what we say. To really teach children the better way of life we must first believe in it so firmly that we cannot forget to abide by it. If we believed firmly that good books, good manners, honest dealing were best in daily practice we would not teach them in reverse.

Self discipline is mighty difficult for most of us but a bit of it is essential if we would teach children in the way they should grow.

Hydrogenated Fats

Hydrogenated fats, often called for in recipes, are made from one oil or a mixture of oils. The oils are treated so as to produce a plastic fat suitable for many cooking and baking purposes.

Cantonese Pancakes

Ingredients: Three tablespoons peanut oil, one-fourth cup chopped onion, one cup diced celery, two cups bouillon, two tablespoons cornstarch, two tablespoons cold water, one No. 2 can bean sprouts (rinsed and drained), one cup diced cooked shrimp, one to two tablespoons soy sauce, pancakes.

Method: Heat oil in 10-inch skillet; add onion and celery; cook gently until onion is golden brown. Add bouillon; simmer 10 minutes. Mix cornstarch and cold water until smooth; add to bouillon mixture, stirring constantly until thickened and bubbly. Add bean sprouts and shrimp; stir well, cover and cook gently until shrimp is heated through. Stir in soy sauce to taste. Place filling across center of each pancake; roll up and serve at once. Makes four to six servings.

To Make Pancakes: Beat an egg until yolk and white are combined; beat in two and one-fourth cups milk. Add two cups pancake mix; stir together lightly. Fold in two tablespoons melted butter or margarine. Pour one-third cup batter for each pancake onto a hot lightly greased griddle. Bake to a golden brown, turning only once.

Beltless Dresses

Many of the advance fall dresses are shaped to the figure and are worn without belts. Skirts usually have a gentle flare although the slim, sheath type of dress continues popular. When belts are used, they are placed low or cut with a circular effect so that they give the dress a lower waistline effect.

Billions Being Put Into Slum Clearance Now

By NEIL MacNEIL

WASHINGTON (UP)—The nation's slums today are under the most massive attack in history.

Private industry has joined the Government to correct housing ills in cities all over the country. Untold billions of dollars are being poured into slum clearance, neighborhood rehabilitation, housing code enforcement, and new construction.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards has launched a blight elimination program under the slogan: "No slums by 1960."

The National Association of Home Builders, with 33,000 members, hopes to set up housing service centers in 50 cities before Jan. 1 to lead the attack on local housing eyesores. Eventually the N.A.H.B. plans to have such a center in every major American community.

Lending institutions — notably the U.S. Savings & Loan League —are seeking national legislation to permit them to make an active role in the war against slums.

Practical and Attainable.

N.A.R.E.B. President Henry G. Waltemade said the realtors' program to eliminate slums by 1960 is both "practical and attainable." He said this has been demonstrated by such programs in Los Angeles, New Orleans, Pasadena, Kansas City and Charlotte, N.C.

He also cited Chicago, New York, Cincinnati, Corpus Christi, Tex.; Detroit; Durham, N.C.; Philadelphia, Portland, Me., and San Francisco as making "impressive headway" in similar programs.

"These communities are now wiping out unsafe and insanitary housing conditions at at annual rate that will make them free of health, safety and sanitary hazards in housing within five years," Waltemade said.

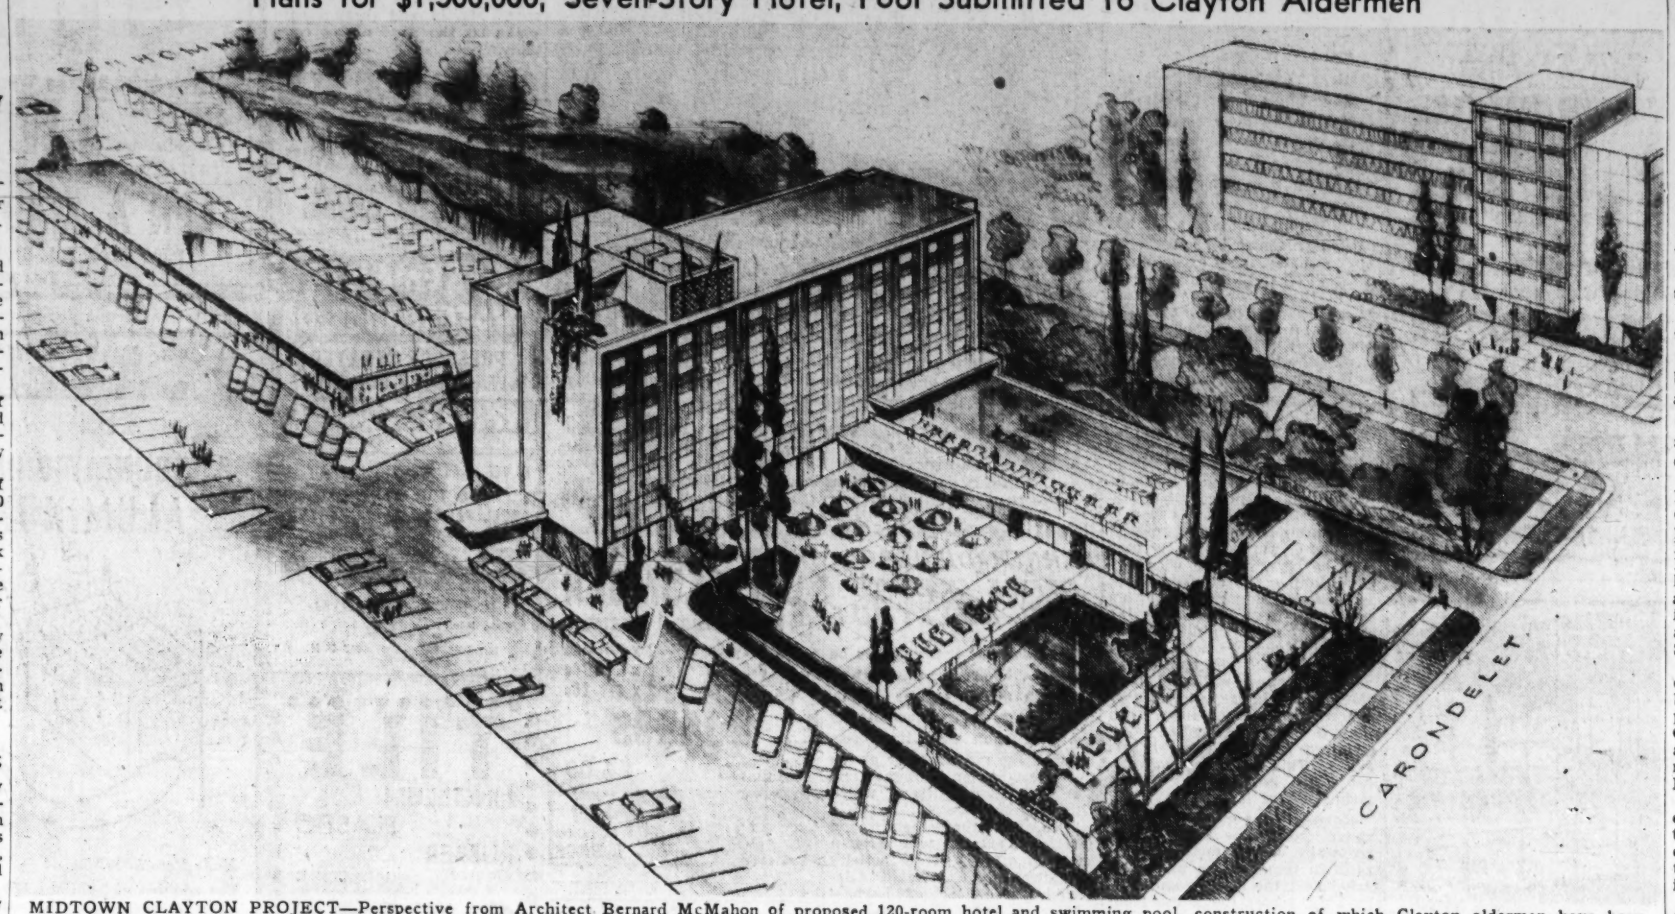

"This doesn't mean, of course, that we expect perfection in urban environment by 1960. It does mean that any city that determines to do it can be without slum-breeding filth, squalor and dangers to health and safety . . . by 1960."

Ordered by Codes.

The NAREB estimates, on the basis of United States census figures, that as much at 12 billion dollars a year may now be going into home improvements and repairs. Many of these repairs are ordered by housing code enforcement offi-

Plans for $1,500,000, Seven-Story Hotel, Pool Submitted to Clayton Aldermen

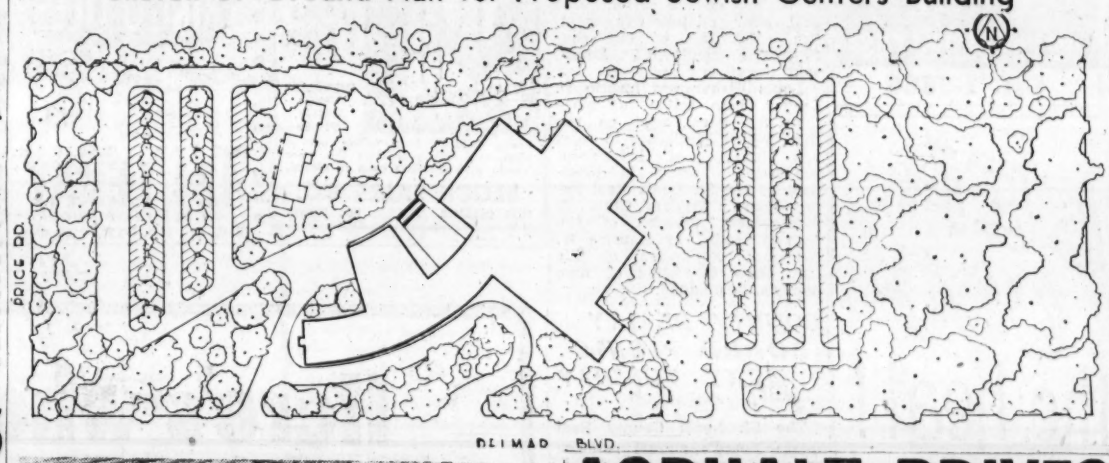

MIDTOWN CLAYTON PROJECT—Perspective from Architect Bernard McMahon of proposed 120-room hotel and swimming pool, construction of which Clayton aldermen have been asked to approve upon a two-acre site between Bonhomme and Carondelet avenues, adjacent to the recently announced new Siteman building, shown in background. Property would cost an estimated $1,500,000; would be air-conditioned, styled in tropical motif with tile-lined outdoor pool, 16 sun-shaded cabanas, patio, drive-in registration desk (where guests might check in from their cars, go directly to their rooms by elevator). Two luxury restaurants, a banquet hall, cocktail lounge, chic shops would be included. Off-street parking would be provided and a broad, new avenue would be built in the block from Bonhomme to Carondelet. Promoters said to be negotiating with a well-known and experienced St. Louis hotels operator relating to an operating lease. The property is to be held in the name of the Bernard Corporation, a quartet of Clayton businessmen.

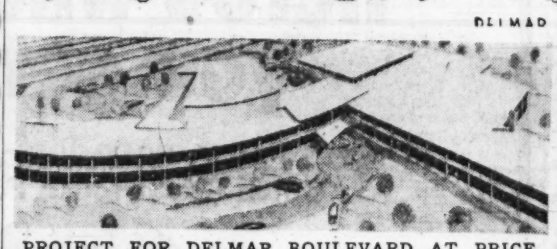

Option Taken On Site for New YM-YWHA

The Jewish Community Centers Association has taken an option on a 14-acre tract on Delmar boulevard at Price road for erection of a new Y.M.H.A.-Y.W.H.A., which will cover 10 per cent of the site, Milton Greenfield Jr., president of the J.C.C.A., reports. Plans provide for a modern center, with five acres for off-street parking, and with the balance of the tract

Sketch of Ground Plan for Proposed Jewish Centers Building

PROJECT FOR DELMAR BOULEVARD AT PRICE ROAD—Option has been taken on a 14-acre tract at Delmar and Price road for construction of a new YMHA-YWHA property. Proposed building, to replace that now occupied on Union boulevard, near Delmar, would take 10 per cent of the new site, five acres would be used for off-street parking and the remainder would be heavily landscaped with trees and shrubbery to provide privacy both for the institutional buildings and for adjacent neighborhoods. The building would be more than 350 feet from Price road. Smaller picture is close-up of the principal building shown on the ground plan.

DESIGN STUDY ORDERED

In a program to provide better facilities for patients and visitors at St. Louis's Jewish Hospital, the Ladies Auxiliary of that institution has commissioned Design, Inc., of St. Louis to study layout and functions of new quarters for the auxiliary. Plans call for an area adjacent to the new public lobby to be constructed as part of the hospital's expansion program.

Sewer District Sends Out New Building Code

Copies of the Metropolitan St. Louis Sewer District's new public sewer construction code were sent last week by the district to public officials, engineers, contractors and subdividers throughout the area affected.

The code, recently adopted by the Metropolitan Sewer District's Board of Trustees, will become operative July 25. Copies are available at the Metropolitan Sewer District office, 201 Mississippi Valley Building, 506 Olive street.

The 20-page document establishes for the first time uniform construction specifications for pipe sewers throughout the Metropolitan Sewer District, said Executive Director L. E. Ordelheide. The district comprises about 222 square miles consisting of all the City of St. Louis and approximately one-third of St. Louis County.

"This standardization of sewer construction procedure will bring order out of chaos in many parts of St. Louis County," Ordelheide said. "The code's adoption is a significant achievement by the Metropolitan Sewer District."

As of July 25, one condition of the Metropolitan Sewer District's approval of public sewer construction projects will be that they meet the code specifications.

Ordelheide said the specifications are based on practices generally accepted as reasonable throughout this area.

The code covers sanitary and storm sewer construction. It is divided into the following four main sections: Excavation, Pipe Sewer Construction, Manholes and Inlets, and Manufacture of Concrete.

NAMED COMMITTEE HEAD

William S. Cassilly has been appointed chairman of the nominating committee of the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis, reports Richard C. Higginbotham, president. Appointed to the Committee with Cassilly are Ben Goldberg, Joseph Leonard, Rudolph Steib, and John M. Bogdanor.

BUILD IT YOURSELF WITH
CRAFT PATTERNS BY A. NEELY HALL

A Garage for Utility

681 TWO-CAR GARAGE WITH EAVES OVERHANG

★ The spacious garage in the photograph is 21 ft. 4 in. wide and 24 ft. long. It is an economical size to build when you consider that it will provide ample space for a work bench, and for garden tools, and for the storage of screens, storm sash and lawn furniture. Craft Pattern 681 gives a material list. This has been worked out for stock sizes of plates, studs and rafters which will reduce cutting waste to a minimum. The pattern shows plan, elevations and sections, and full-size rafter end cuts.

698 GARAGE WITH PORCH

★ You get a lot more for your money when you build a garage yourself, and you can make it wide enough to include a porch, a garden house, or a play pen. Labor cost need not enter into it unless you prefer having the floor slab cast to casting it yourself, and hire a helper for the other work. This one-car garage measures 19 ft. wide and 22 ft. long. Complete plans for building it are on Craft Pattern 698, together with full-size patterns of rafter and cuts and valance cuts, and a list of the materials needed.

697 GARAGE AND WORKSHOP

★ When you build a garage, it will cost little more to add enough footage to one side to accommodate a workshop and garden tools. If you do the work yourself, this will involve only the additional material cost for the end walls and roof, and a wider floor slab if you cast a concrete floor. The garage illustrated is 14 ft. by 20 ft., outside. Craft Pattern 697 lists the material and shows construction details with full-size patterns for rafter cuts and valance.

★ Send 25 cents each for the Craft Patterns 681, 697 and 698; $1.25 each for the Boat Packet (20 patterns), Windmill Packet (12 patterns), Playground Apparatus Packet (17 patterns), and Garden Furniture Packet (22 patterns). Send 25 cents for illustrated catalog of more than 800 patterns available.

Outdoor Living Indoors Newest Idea in Houses

Charles H. Ellaby Sr. is a restless engineer and home builder who's never quite satisfied that he's done his possible best in the development of a subdivision, and invariably comes up with something new every time he moves into the development of a new area. His Crabapple Court, being formally opened today, is no exception.

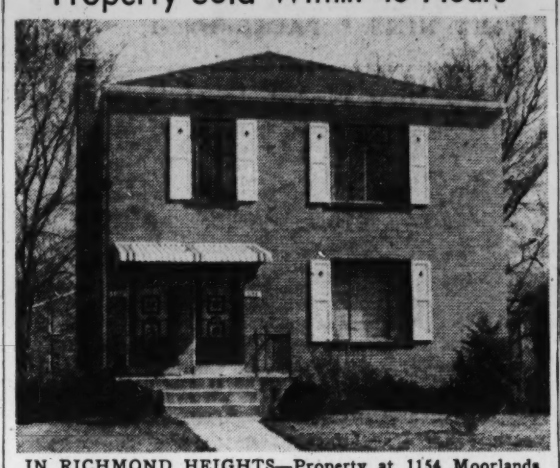

On 14 acres of the historic old Engle Estate, the new subdivision is reached by way of Engle Lane from Dielman road, a little way north of Old Bonhomme road. There are two entrances to the subdivision from the lane.

Ellaby always does his house-planning on the basis of a philosophy of living and thus decrees that the recently popular idea of "indoor-outdoor" living is passe, made so by the advent of year-round and complete air-conditioning. Ellaby's new houses won't have any screened porches or patios. Nobody uses 'em, he says, because with air-conditioning, the outdoor living is brought indoors, where it's spring all the time. That's his current theme, "outdoor living indoors," enhanced not alone by the conditioned air, but by the use of window walls on both sides of the house, and, in conjunction, double doors that open floor to ceiling, instead of being standard height with lintels above. This isn't necessarily a new idea, but the way Ellaby makes use of it may be.

Houses in the new subdivision range from two- to four-bedroom size, with a mother-in-law suite in some of the plans, located near the kitchen and utility core, across the house from the bedroom wing.

A display house has been decorated and furnished for the opening.

LARNER-DIENER OFFICE GOES TO 8TH, CHESTNUT

From now on it is going to be Larner-Diener on the corner, instead of Glick on the corner, for the Larner-Diener Realty Co. has taken over the office area on the ground floor at the northwest corner of Eighth and Chestnut streets from which Glick moved recently.

"We feel that Eighth and Chestnut always will remain the hub of real estate activity in downtown St. Louis," declared an officer of Larner-Diener as remodeling and reconditioning of the offices there was nearing completion last week and the company prepared to move in. Glick didn't go far away, of course, just up the street a piece.

Extensive reconditioning has been done on the corner, with new decor and new equipment, "an expression of our confidence in downtown St. Louis" said the firm's members.

Louis Diener and Martin D. Larner, both active for more than 30 years, head up the firm, which specializes in sales and trading of investment properties. Larner is president of the St. Louis Real Estate Board's Traders' Club. A management division of the firm is headed by Maurice W. Altmann. Expansion of the staff, now consisting of nine persons, is planned.

COUNTY REALTY BOARD PICNIC NEXT TUESDAY

The St. Louis County Real Estate Board's annual summer picnic is to be at Norwood Hills Country Club next Tuesday afternoon and evening, with a dinner at 7 p.m. Jean W. Mason is chairman of the committee in charge of picnic developments, Robert Specking, chairman of public relations for the event.

Golfers are expected to get to the club rather early, although some others may not start their picnicing in until later in the afternoon. There will be horseshoe pitching, cork ball, card games, etc., for the non-golfers.

No stag affair, because there are a good many women in the St. Louis County Board, the picnic will provide for them as well as for the men.

Specking said reservations ought to be made no later than tomorrow; that those who come later, without reservations, will have to spend an extra dollar for their tickets.

JEWELERS OPEN NEW ROOM FOR CRYSTAL SHOW

Mermod, Jaccard, King, jewelers, stationers and silversmiths, have remodeled and redecorated a 500-square-foot area of the downtown store at Ninth and Locust streets for the display of Steuben glass, a trademarked crystal handled exclusively by Jaccard in the St. Louis area. There already is a room in the Clayton store, specially styled, for this crystal display.

In connection with opening the new area formally, this week, a special collection of 12 free art form studies in the glass, have been brought to the downtown store for presentation.

Glass topped pedestals and shelves, oval columns and white woodwork accented by gunmetal mirrors, fluorescent lighting and two-tone gray broadloom carpeting are decorative features of the new room.

HEARING AID DEALER OPENS NEW STORE ON OLIVE STREET

The Maico Hearing Service has moved from a location formerly occupied in the Arcade building to a street level store at 709 Olive street. The service, operated by W. H. Hopmeier, had been in the Arcade building 16 years.

In the new location, remodled and redecorated, Maico will have both hearing and voice testing rooms, equipped with scientific instruments, and fitting rooms. Although work in the new location isn't complete, the service already has moved in and started operations there.

REALTY AGENCY MOVES

The Charles J. Murphy real estate agency has moved from 6376 Clayton road, where it had been for six years, to new, larger and air-conditioned quarters in the Jacy building, 201 South Central avenue, Clayton.

Slum Clearance

Morton Saber, chief of the NAHB Rehabilitation Department, said several major industries may join in the fight to eliminate slums. He said some are urging establishment of housing service centers to lead the attack in local communities.

These centers have already been established in Louisville, Ky., and Richmond, Va. Others are being formed in Washington, D.C., and Baltimore. Each would have a joint operating committee of builders, realtors, lenders, and civic leaders to advise the full-time permanent staff of the center.

U. S. Savings & Loan President J. Howard Edgerton recently said that the lack of "enabling legislation" has so far prevented lenders from contributing their "know-how" to the cause of slum elimination.

Urges Law Changes.

"Incredible as it may seem," he said, "the opportunity to assume part of the job of redevelopment has been withheld from our institutions, despite the fact that our institutions do the biggest home financing job and know more about housing than any other group of lenders."

He urged that lenders be allowed to invest up to 5 per cent of assets in financing land acquisition and development or in construction and sale of houses in cleared slum areas.

Saber said the Federal Government could not carry the job of urban redevelopment all alone. He said this generally requires long advance planning and neglects the immediate need of neighborhood improvement.

Nearly New Apartment's Lobby Redecorated

FORD ON THE PLAZA—Although the building is only a few years old, the lobby of the Ford Apartments, 104-unit property at 1405 Pine street, has been reconditioned and redecorated. The Ralph D'Oench Co., which took over management of the building last January, instituted the changes, topped off the procedure with a roof-garden party 15 stories up (overlooking the city's redevelopment clearing procedures) with Ted Bear of the Scruggs, Vandervoort, Barney Interior Decorating Studio (which did the refurnishing of lobby, roof garden and display apartments) as sponsor. Lobby, now air-conditioned, has a French scenic mural called "Le Seine," with supporting colors of coral, green and charcoal. The furniture, severely simple, is framed in magnesium; decorator lamps are of brass and imported glass, the first of their kind in St. Louis. Ceiling height mirrors give an illusion of space through the casement windows of the mural opposite.

Tile Firm's New Gravois Store

ON GRAVOIS AVENUE—Property at 3456 Gravois avenue, new office and display room for Lange Tile Co., just completed and opened. Building was designed by Architect Charles Zagel, lighting by Union Electric Co. engineers and designers. Both building and company are owned and managed by Art and Ray Lange. They have been at this same address for 10 years.

heavily landscaped with trees and shrubbery to provide privacy for the organization and adjoining neighborhoods.

The growing westward movement of Jewish residents has made it necessary to relocate the center which now is much further east in the city, on Union boulvard, north of Delmar.

Hundreds of children, teenagers and young adults who have moved into the county have no recreational facilities. To serve them, preliminary plans for building have been made after detailed study to find the best location possible. The Community Chest and the Social Planning Council have been kept fully informed of planning procedures.

The site will have a park-like atmosphere to be fully harmonious with the surrounding area.

In addition to providing a needed center for cultural, educational, and recreational activities, the project will also be welcomed by many county groups which will have the opportunity to meet at the new building, Greenfield said.

The location, which has been selected as the only suitable tract of ground east of Lindbergh, will provide for auditorium seating 750, lounges, cafeteria, library, gymnasium, a 75-foot indoor swimming pool, club rooms, handball courts and other facilities.

Many residents of Olivette have written to the Jewish Community Centers Association endorsing the building which, will be located some 350 feet from Price road on the west, with all entrances on Delmar boulevard. The center will also be soundproofed and air-conditioned.

The Y.M.H.A., a branch of the Jewish Community Centers Association, was established in 1897, and at its present site at 725 N. Union boulevard in 1927. Greenfield Jr. stressed that the Y strives to create a democratic atmosphere. He declared: "It provides a center for communal life in which all share alike. The Y is an agency of culture, learning, and recreation, a place to make friends, a building where creative experiences may be enjoyed, among which are dramatics, music, health clubs, programs for all age groups, the Liberal Forum and a USO program."

Sachar Forms $250,000,000 Fund Combine

A national real estate investment combine with purchasing power of more than $250,000,000 —enough to buy five Empire State buildings—has been organized by Louis Sachar, a former resident of St. Louis, now president of Marshall Management Corporation, real estate investment firm of 244 Madison avenue, New York City.

Sachar, whose mother, Mrs. Sarah Sachar, lives at 7261 Delmar boulevard, St. Louis, is economic adviser to Mayor Robert F. Wagner, of New York City, and the corporations he heads now own or have investments in 85 commercial and industrial buildings in Manhattan.

Six large pension and trust funds are associated in the new program charted by Sachar to involve major real estate transactions in many principal cities throughout the country, including St. Louis. Sachar said consideration already was being given by Marshall Management to acceptance of agreements with other pension funds.

The investment pattern developed by Sachar calls for studies and decisions to be made by Marshall Management. Under this program, Marshall Management will invest some of its capital in each transaction, with the necessary additional purchasing power coming from the pension and trust funds.

Tremendous Responsibility.

"This new investment system is sound in every way and benefits all concerned," Sachar said. "The pension and trust fund managers have a tremendous responsibility on investing their ever-growing funds in a safe and productive way. Our experience in the fields of industrial property and finance paves the way for investment by them with us in economically sound real estate properties.

"With the welfare of both the employes and corporations always in mind, the problems of investment faced by the pension fund and trust managers are indeed serious. The records show that corporate pension funds during 1954 invested $450,000,000 in common stocks, but even a glance at the way these funds are building up all over the nation makes it clear that this common stock investment total for them is little more than a drop in their vast and expanding capital structure."

Major Deals Pending.

Studies carried out under Sachar's direction showed that pension and corporate trust funds are increasing by from 2½ to 3 billion dollars a year, and that they are well on the road to becoming a major factor in the national economy.

"This led us into working out a basic co-operative program with two trust funds several months ago," Sachar said. "Agreements have just been closed with four more, and others are now under consideration."

Sachar explained that major real estate transactions in several cities by Marshall Management Corporation, in which one or more of the six co-operating pension and trust funds would participate were nearing completion.

Each of the agreements made by Marshall Management in establishing this broad investment structure contains a stipulation that the names of the pension and trust funds participating in it would be kept confidential.

Sachar, who organized Marshall Management in 1942, was finance manager for Robert Wagner in the 1953 mayoralty campaign in which a precedent was set by it's being carried successfully to conclusion without a deficit. He also is president of Landowner Operating Corporation, Keith Management Corporation and Glenn Management Corporation. His brother, Dr. Abraham L. Sachar, is president of Brandeis University.

Sixty-Two Unit Apartment Building Sold

ON WASHINGTON—Property at 4432 Washington, sold for the Katherine Realty Co. to interests taking title in the name of Tillie Siegel. Transaction was negotiated by the Judge Realty Co., Arthur Goldman and the Demba Realty Co. The property is managed by the Sacher Realty Co. Building has 62 units of three and four-room size, a garage with space for 27 cars.

SUBDIVIDERS ADD NEW NAME FOR STYLING

The subdividers have added a new name to their vocabulary in an attempt to identify the styling of a contemporary home construction that won't fit under the much-used "ranch" term, can't be pictured, either, merely by the word contemporary, since all that's being done now is contemporary, regardless of style —if there is any.

The new word is ranger, as applied to a house. The word ranch, say these promoters of a new term, can properly be applied only to houses with convention gable, hip or truncated hip roofs (mostly low pitched); but the word ranger would be used to cover the buildings sometimes derisively called "Cow Shed Modern," the "Flat-Toppers" and such similar structures, in which, usually, the under side of the insulated roof structure also serves as the ceiling; so that there's no attic as a rule, any more than there's a basement.

The St. Louis Construction Co., seeking to finish out its third section of Westridge Acres before Sept. 10 so National Home Week may be celebrated with the opening of the fourth section of the big subdivision, has introduced a new "ranger style house" into the third section. Formal presentation of this newly named and new styled house has been set for today. The whole of Westridge is 400 acres and more than 200 houses in the first sections of the development have been completed and sold. There are two more sections to go, fourth and fifth.

Kent Realty Co. is promotion agent for the development, the old Ganahl Dairy acreage on Clayton, Kehrs Mill and Manchester roads.

MEDICAL WEST SITE ASSEMBLY OF SIX TITLES

The site in Clayton on the inside of the curve of Francis Place, where the Medical West Building Corporation is to erect its new doctors' and dentists' building, was assembled from six owners for James H. Woods in 1950 by Real Estate Dealer James P. Wilson. Wilson did the job in 90 days and Woods has held the property since and has made it available for construction of the medical building, believing that to be the most logical use for the site.

Negotiations for use of the site were carried on by Wilson for Woods with Richard J. Zoernig, president, and Charles Judge, lawyer, acting for the Medical West Building Corporation. Zoernig is vice president and secretary of the Medical Co-Operative Association, of which E. L. Zoernig is president. Edward A. Pollack & Son Real Estate Co., mistakenly identified as having handled the entire procedure for the proposed building (due to incomplete information given to the Post-Dispatch) acted only on behalf of the Medical Building Corporation in negotiating financing for the construction by the Great West Life Assurance Co. of Winnepeg, Canada, through that company's local representative, the Giraldin Bros. Real Estate Co.

Initially proposed parking area for 200 automobiles on the building's site may be raised to 300, it was said last week. Due to a typographical error the area was called a 100-car area in the original report.

OPENING TODAY OF SUBDIVISION IN FLORISSANT

Formal opening has been set for today of a six-acre subdivision of homes on city-sized lots in the city of Florissant. The property is on Charbonnier road about half a mile northwest of Highway 140.

The building is being done by the Anderson Construction Co., operated by Robert Anderson, and the J. W. Wood Realty Co. is promotion agent.

The subdivision is called Norine Court. One of the houses in the development will front on Charbonnier road and the rest will be along the cul-de-sac street bearing the same name as the subdivision.

Houses with a little less than 1000 square feet of floor area, not counting the garage space under the same roof, are being built of frame on concrete. Stormwater and sanitary sewers are separate lines and the street has been done in concrete. Several homes have been started and a display house has been completed.

REALTORS IN GENEVA

A delegation of more than 50 realtors, headed by Henry G. Waltemade, New York, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, attended the recent annual conference of the International Real Estate Federation in Geneva, Switzerland.

FAMILIES SPREAD OUT

Families are undoubling, and the proportion of married couples who do not maintain their own household is at the lowest point on record, reports the weekly news letter of the National Association of Real Estate Boards on the basis of Census Bureau figures. Only 3.9 per cent were in this category in 1954, representing a sharp decline from the high point of 8.7 per cent in 1947. This fact illustrates one reason why housing demand continues high.

Soil Moisture Still Far Less Than Is Needed

By Eleanor B. McClure.
Post-Dispatch Garden Writer.

We can't remember when we've enjoyed a finer gardening season. Here it is mid-July, and yet the lawns are lush and green, flower borders are abloom, and the humid heat has brought early crops of corn and tomatoes.

Shrubs and evergreens, too, have benefited from the abundant surface moisture, but there is a dark spot on this otherwise pleasing picture. Only a foot or so beneath the surface of the ground there is a subsoil that is still very hard and dry. The 1955 rainfall, although closer to normal than that of recent years, is still deficient by several inches.

No wonder we are seeing such evident signs of distress among our trees, those famine victims that have had to exist on scant food and water rations for the last three years. Many oaks have been drouth victims this summer, and the elms, weakened by capricious weather, have been easy prey for insects and disease.

Drainage Patterns Upset.

August Beilmann, manager of the Missouri Botanical Garden's arboretum at Gray Summit, reminds us that lawn trees are especially susceptible to drouth damage.

"So many of our shade trees are growing about homes where heavy grading has been done," he explains. "Grading usually removes all top soil, or dumps it into a low spot and leaves a raw soil that has never supported any sort of plant life—much less a tree.

"Established surface drainage patterns are upset; houses, streets driveways form a roof over much of the soil, and there is little chance for rain to percolate to a depth necessary for trees. Once dry, such a soil, or what is left for soil, absorbs water very slowly. Only irrigation, mulching and fertilizing will allow the establishment of trees, or permit their continued growth."

We are faced with another problem connected with these weather difficulties. There has been a build-up of insects that prey on trees, Beilmann reports. Bark beetles, which spread the fatal Dutch elm disease, have been banqueting on their favorite food: weakened elm trees. Various leaf-chewing insects also seem to be on the increase, he says. In some areas the striped oak worm has almost defoliated the oak trees, and severe infestations of June bugs have riddled the leaves of many others.

No Sure Protection.

"Insects generally have rather complicated life histories," Beilmann explains. "For a species to reach epidemic proportions it must have adequate food and temporarily it must be without enemies. During the dry 1930s there was a serious outbreak of tent caterpillars and tussock moths (and others as well). Perhaps the hard dry soil of last summer favored the June bug larvae. At least it restricted the movement of moles that prey on such grubs."

Although we have potent insecticides to control the leaf-eating insects, there is no tested and sure way to protect our elms from diseases. It is probably too late to aid any trees that are now showing excessively thin foliage, accompanied by wilting and yellowing of leaves on many branches.

Trees as yet unaffected can be aided by a program of proper feeding, watering and mulching. Mere surface watering is not sufficient, since practically all of the roots capable of absorbing food and moisture are at least 12 to 18 inches below ground, and most are much deeper. Special root irrigators are helpful, but should be adjusted so that water seeps out very slowly. A high pressure stream tends to wash the soil (and thus bring in pockets of air).

While surface applications of fertilizers and mulches are helpful, large trees are benefited most when the "plant foods" are also put deep into the soil, where they may be tapped by feeder roots. Arborist Beilmann suggests using a crowbar or a post-hole digger, making the holes about 24 inches deep and spacing them two to three feet apart in circles beneath the branch tips. A second circle may be made three feet closer to the trunk, and a third circle three feet inside of this.

Don't Overfeed.

Although the amount of fertilizer depends on the size, age and vigor of the tree, one formula calls for three pounds for each inch of diameter. One pound of the dry tree fertilizer is poured into each hole and is topped with compost, leaf mold, peat moss or some other form of organic matter.

Small trees (which have feeding roots closer to the surface of the ground) will usually respond to a top dressing of chemical and organic fertilizers. Over-feeding can be dangerous, though. Just recently I received leaves from two small pin oaks that had been killed by an excess of chemical fertilizer. One cupful of balanced chemical fertilizer would be sufficient for a root area of about 10 square feet.

At this season we usually give the final feeding of the year to roses, shrubs and evergreens. After this mid-summer meal, the plants have plenty of time to complete their growth and harden off, in preparation for winter.

Water-Iron Solution.

We are careful, of course, to use an "acid fertilizer" on azaleas, pieris, hollies and other plants that prefer a relatively acid soil. If any showe an iron deficiency (indicated by a yellowish cast to new leaves at the tips while the veins remain green), they may be watered with a solution made of one ounce of iron sulphate dissolved in two gallons of water.

A magnesium deficiency shows at this season on the older, lower leaves, which may turn yellowish or grayish-green or may have fawn-colored blotches. This condition may also be seen in the yellowish leaves with dark green veins on tomatoes. The remedy, believe it or not, is a spray made of one pound of epsom salts in six gallons of water.

Roses and perennials also benefit from a good mid-summer feeding. We usually apply chemical fertilizer and then water it in. The plants are also most appreciative of applications of cow manure or chicken manure —or of "weak tea" solutions made by suspending a sack of fresh manure in a container of water.

A good side dressing of fertilizer will pay big dividends in the vegetable garden, too, especially for long-season crops like tomatoes, eggplants, peppers and pole lima beans. An abundance of food and water helps protect tomatoes from leaf curl, various blights and other diseases that attack the plants in late summer.

MORE WILL BUY

More people expect to buy homes this year than had planned to do so in any year since 1948, the Federal Reserve Board reported recently, according to a story in Realtor's Headlines, weekly news letter of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

OLD MINGO SWAMP

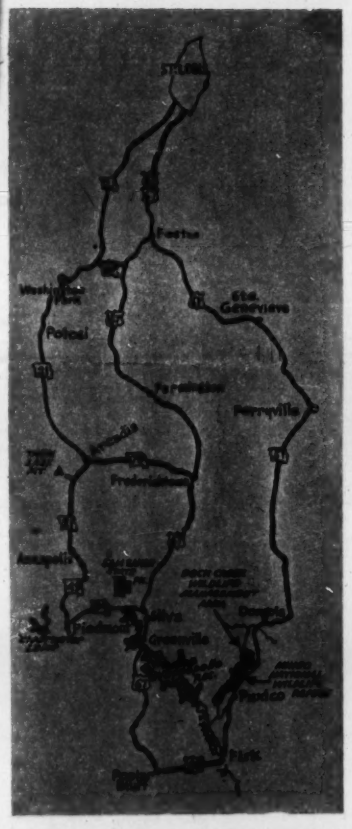

Southeast Missouri Area Now Is a Wildlife Refuge

This is a typical stretch of open water in Mingo National Wildlife Refuge. Few cypress trees, like those in center, remain of the rich stand that once grew in the area. At present, 5000 acres are flooded to protect growing feed crops, trees. Some 11,000 acres will be flooded during wildfowl migrations.

Selma Dietz of Puxico fishes in algae- and scum-clouded Mingo ditch. Day before she caught two three-pound bass. Fishermen enter Mingo by five access roads, park in prescribed areas, walk to fishing spots. Some 40,000 fishermen have entered Mingo this year. On some days a ton and a half of fish have been caught. No night fishing is allowed.

The Mingo refuge and adjoining Duck Creek area are located at lower right of map. Visitors to Mingo may get directions at Puxico to access roads. Duck Creek area may be entered at its headquarters on Route 51.

SOUTHEAST MISSOURI'S OLD MINGO SWAMP, a hunting and fishing paradise before man tried unsuccessfully to dry it up for farming purposes, has been restored as a wildlife sanctuary. The 21,659-acre, 7-mile-long tract, lying generally north and east of Puxico, is owned by the Federal Government and is officially Mingo National Wildlife Refuge. For four years the Fish and Wildlife Service has been working toward the primary goal of the project—re-establishment of the area's once-famous natural resting and feeding grounds for ducks and geese traveling the Mississippi River flyway.

Early results have been gratifying. Last fall an estimated 85,000 ducks and 1400 geese paused at Mingo at one time. Henceforth, with pinioned geese used as calling decoys, the goose population is expected to multiply each year, eventually to reach tens of thousands. It is believed Mingo will some day be host to close to a million waterfowl on each migration.

Bank fishing is permitted at Mingo. Increases have been noted in the area's quail, squirrel, raccoon, opossum, wild turkey and rabbit populations. Deer have become surprise inhabitants. But no hunting of any kind will be permitted in the Mingo refuge.

Hunters, however, will get their rewards in the Duck Creek Wildlife Management Area, which adjoins Mingo on its northeast corner. On these 6000 acres, owned by the Missouri Conservation Commission, duck hunting will be allowed for the first time this year, fishing permitted beginning next March 15. The state and national agencies collaborated in setting up a flooding system which they share. A seven-and-a-half-mile canal brings water from Castor River, northeast of the Duck Creek area. Gates divert water into either area or both.

Fifty years ago Mingo Swamp provided thousands of barrels of ducks each year for eastern markets. In 1914 the Mingo Drainage District was organized to drain the swamp for farming. About $1,000,000 was spent for drainage canals (some of which are important links in the present flooding system) before the project was written off as a failure. By 1954 the Federal Government had purchased the area for about $300,000.

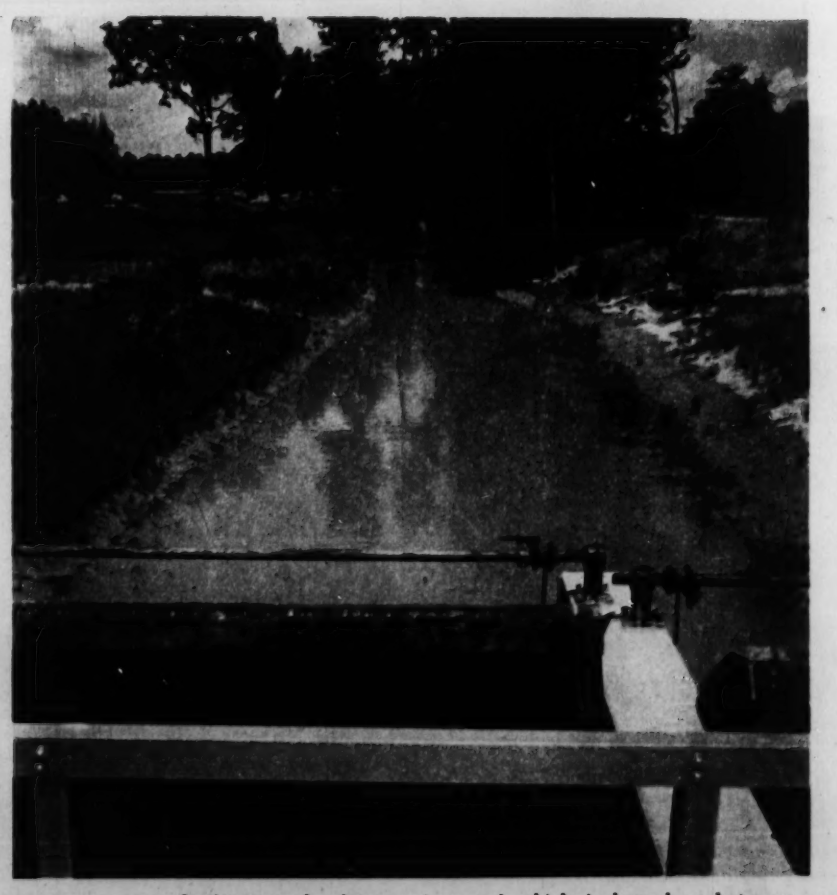

The Mingo-Duck Creek area, about 160 miles south of St. Louis on Route 51, is indicated on the map at left. The most direct route, by Highways 61 and 51, includes historic Ste. Genevieve. Easily accessible on returning routes are Sam Baker State Park, Taum Sauk Mountain, Arcadia Valley. There are overnight accommodations at Poplar Bluff and around Lake Wappapello.

Aerial view of portion of Lake Wappapello, with dam and spillway visible at center. Town of Wappapello is to right, out of picture. Wappapello dam, completed in 1941, was built to control flood waters of St. Francis River. It was first Army-built dam in Missouri. Dragon-shaped lake extends diagonally across Wayne County almost to Sam Baker State Park.

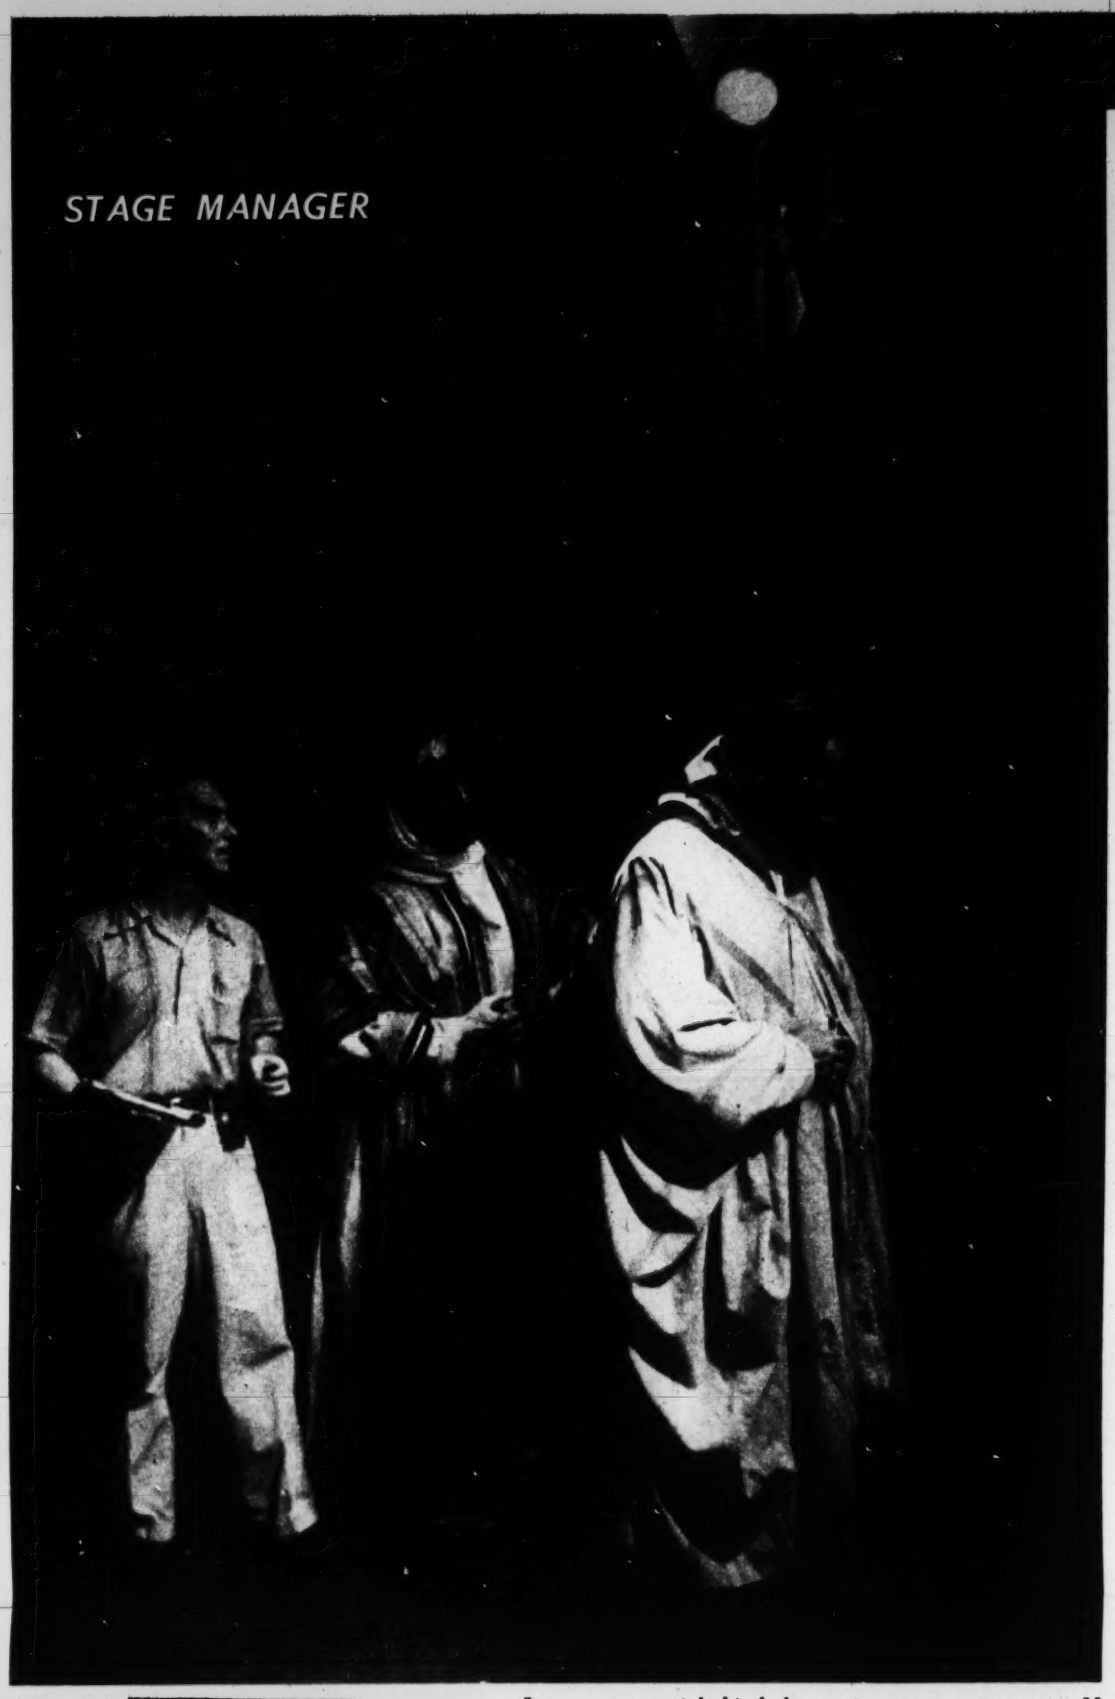

Looking north along main canal which is boundary between Mingo refuge and Duck Creek public shooting area. In foreground is one of three control gates that divert water into both projects. Canal was part of old Mingo Drainage District.

Municipal Opera's Worriers

A tense moment behind the center stage entrance at Municipal Opera during opening-night performance of "The Desert Song." Stage Manager Robert Keller, left, holding script, gets set at approach of instant to send two of the principals on stage. Tenor Donald Clarke, right, playing Sid El Kar, stands with head slightly bowed as he listens for his cue.

The theater's dance directors, Anthony Nelle and Dan Eckley, check the costume and jewelry of Lidija Franklin, who dances the role of Azuri. Nelle, left, choreographer and ensemble director, and Eckley, modern dance and ensemble director, watched the opening-night performance from out front to catch places where work of dancers might be sharpened up. Eckley left next day for California to resume movie and television work, has been replaced by Robert Pagent.

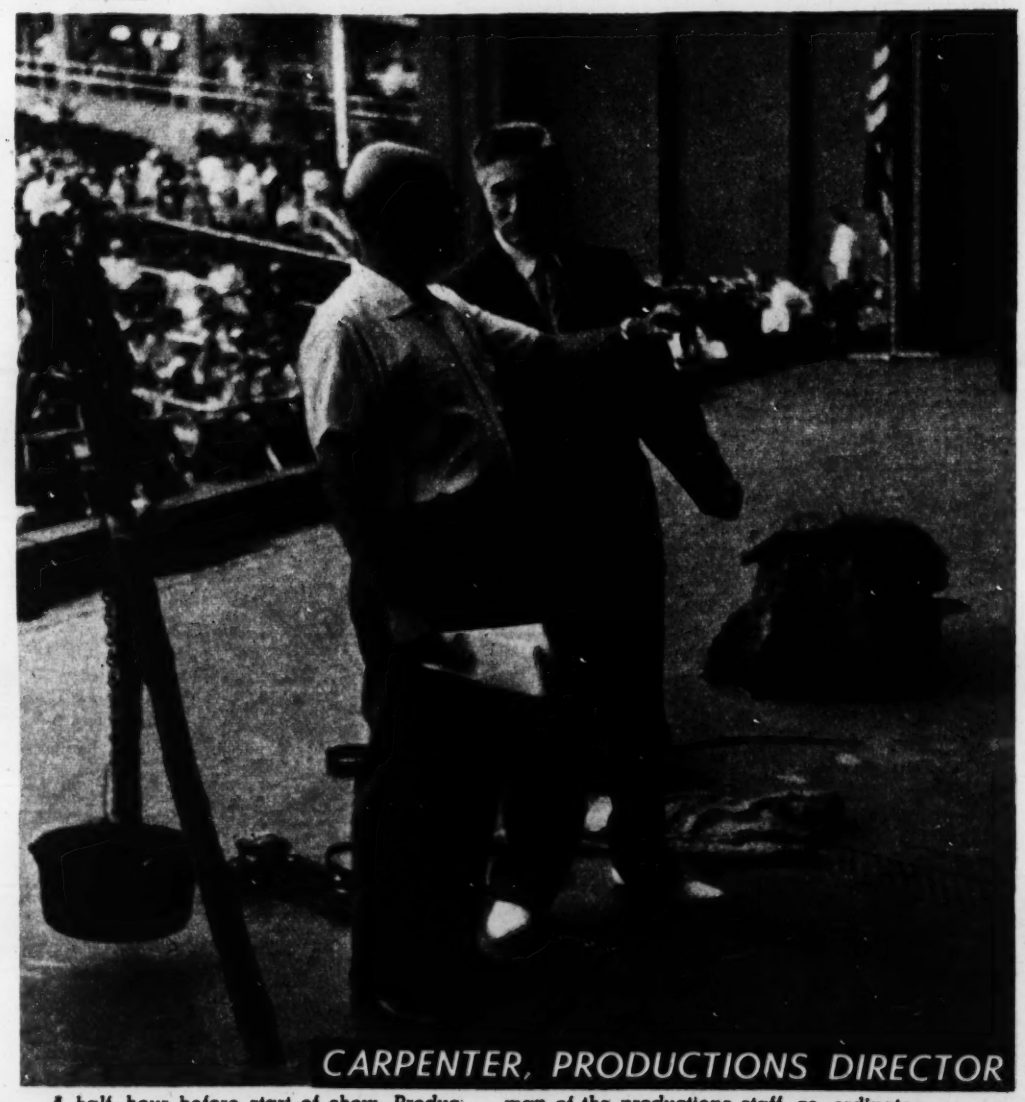

Claude Schenck, wardrobe master, and Virginia Keathley, wardrobe mistress, assist a chorus member changing costumes. Schenck needs flashlight in darkened backstage.

BURIED IN THE MIDDLE of a Municipal Opera program are the names of 26 persons, each with a title. To the Forest Park theater's patrons, they don't represent glamour. Few in an audience of thousands would recognize them if they met them on the premises, for these people—with the exception of the musical director—work outside the range of the spotlights. They are members of the theater's executive and productions staffs.

Each is a specialist and chief worrier in one or several of the techniques necessary to putting on a show. They are in charge of business management, ticket selling, promotion, acting, singing, scene designing and building, stage lighting, costuming, keeping the cast alert for cues. Collectively, their job is to put together 11 different musical shows in the 88-night season. At the nightly performances, each takes his post backstage to insure a smooth-running show.

Every evening at dusk, with the overture about an hour away, the staff members begin getting ready for the performance. With a full day's work already behind them, they forget about being tired and pitch in. If there are any attacks of the jitters, they're pretty well camouflaged. At Monday night openings, however, a prevalent air of breath-holding is apparent. All details of the actual performance are checked and rechecked so that slip-ups can be ironed out for succeeding performances. These photographs of staff members at work behind the scenes were taken during the opening performance of "The Desert Song," which concludes a week's run tonight.

Public Relations Director William Zalken, left, visits the backstage office of John J. Ward, productions business manager, to take up an opera matter. Ward handles payroll for cast, stagehands, musicians, and others, is purchasing agent for the theater plant, and travel agent for visiting stars.

They Are Backstage Supervisors of the Staging, Acting, Dancing, Singing, Seating in Current Week's Show While Planning the Next

GENERAL STAGE MANAGER

Edwin Gordon, general stage manager, intently follows script in dimly lighted prompter's station just off stage right. In season's first five productions he had to prompt only two lines —both in "The Vagabond King." Microphone at left is connected with stage and dressing room sound systems. Stage managers supervising entrances and lights at opposite side of stage can be contacted by telephone.

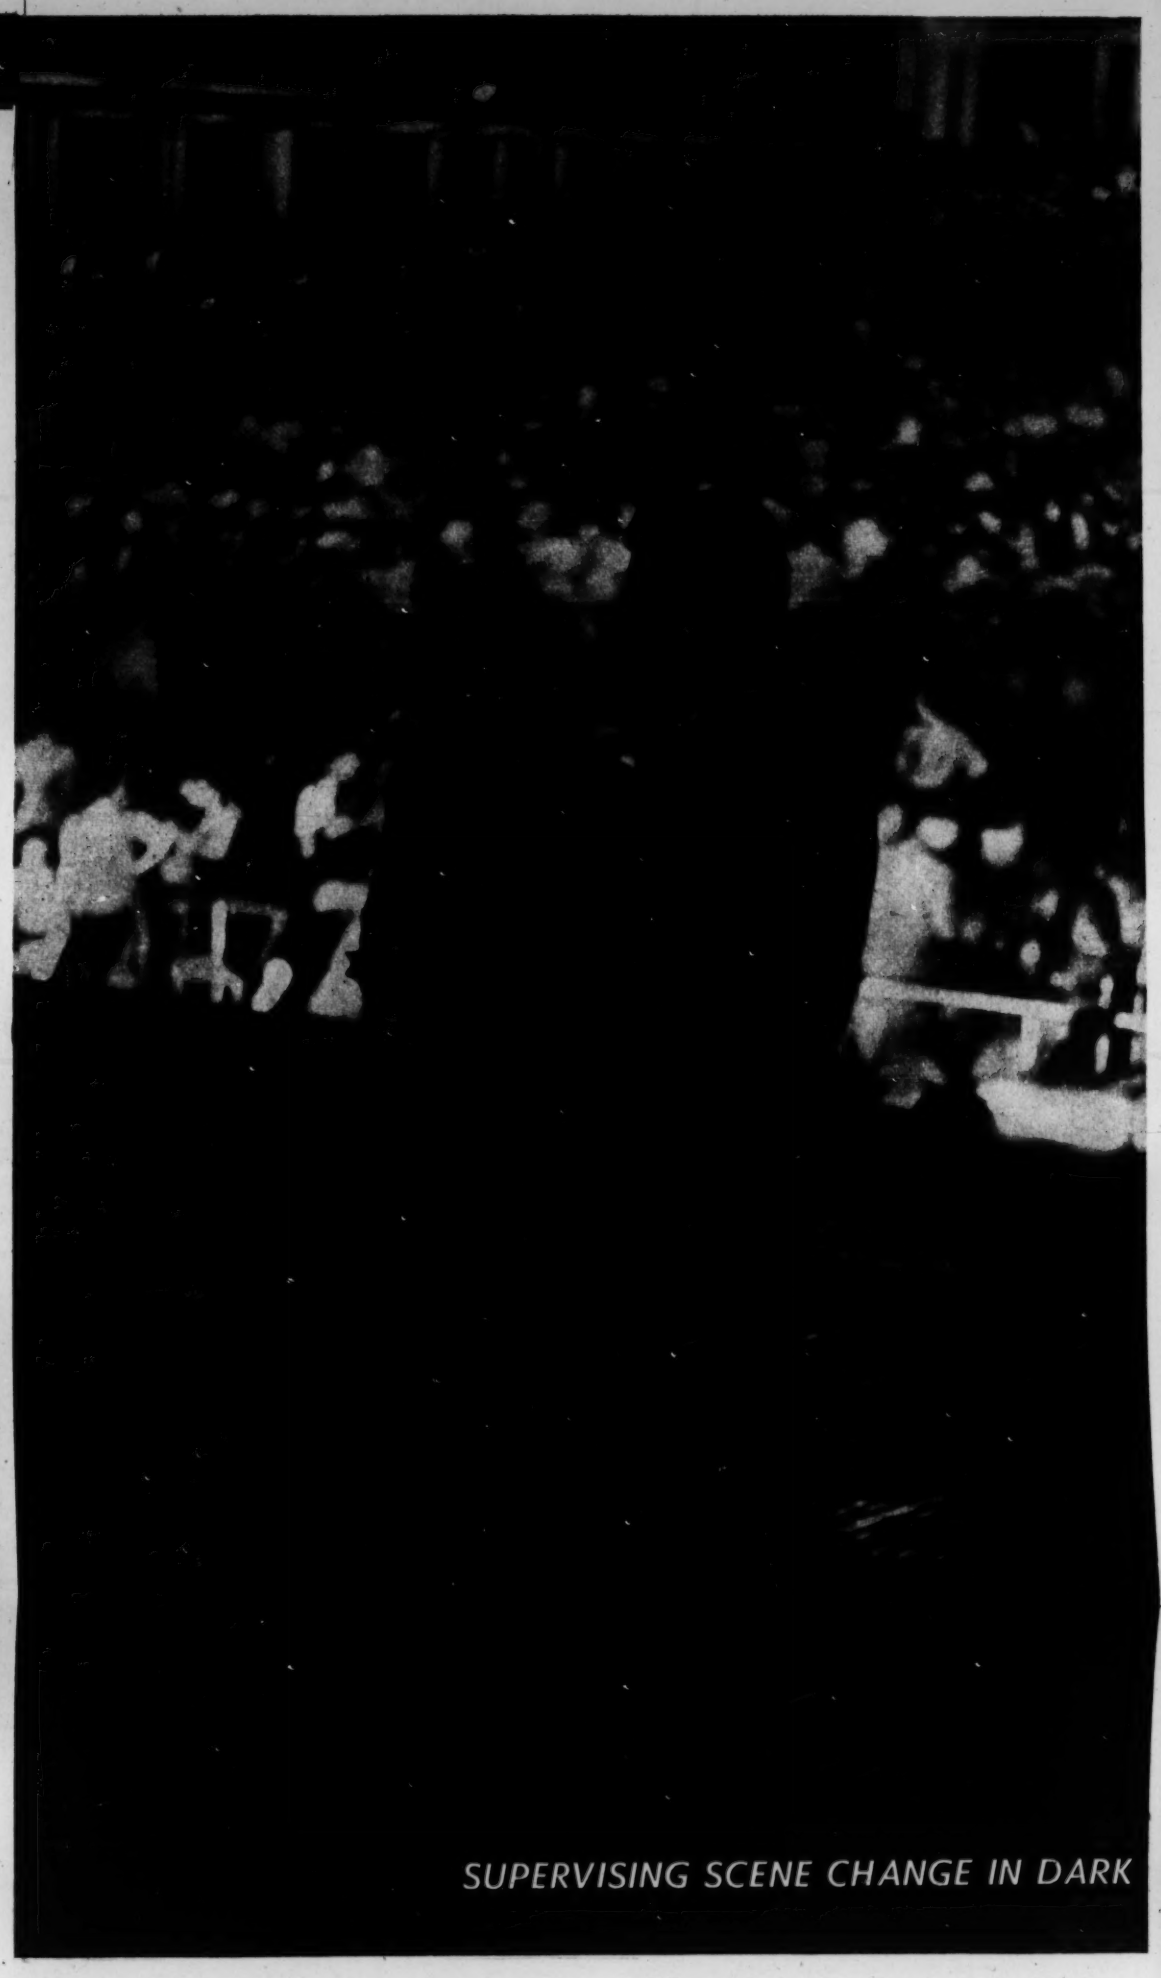

LIGHTING

In lighting control booth off stage left Assistant Stage Manager John Peters, right, gives instructions between scene changes as Master Electrician Leroy Stone pulls switches. While show is going on, Peters watches from window in background. Control board has 50 switches. Stone has been electrician at the theater since 1926. Peters and one of other two assistant stage managers, James O'Neill, were formerly in the Municipal Opera singing chorus.

GOOD LUCK CALL

SUPERVISING SCENE CHANGE IN DARK

Photos by JACK GOULD of the PICTURES Staff

Silhouetted in stage center during the 12-minute intermission with stage lights off are Kennedy, left, and Paul C. McGuire, the theater's art director. They are watching stagehands arrange sets and properties for first scene of second act. The theater also has an assistant to the art director. Rounding out the productions staff are an orchestra manager, music librarian, property master and master scenic painter.

STAGE DIRECTOR

Chatting backstage an hour or so before starting time are Stage Director Alan Green and one of the principals, Mildred Hughes. She is Clementina in the show. Green was among members of the productions staff who inconspicuously watched the show from out front. On nights other than Monday he is apt to be at the behind scenes rehearsal stage, coaching and rehearsing principals for next week's show.

MUSICAL CUE

As Keller, right, follows script, Associate Musical Director Rene Wiegert has arms raised to give downbeat to singing chorus members who do first few bars of a song backstage. Wiegert had just used pitch pipe to assure singers' starting on right note. Best known productions staff member to opera audiences is Musical Director Edwin McArthur. He is on the podium in the orchestra pit every night, puts on a show of his own as he conducts all musical numbers. Audiences have come to know his face from fleeting glimpses they get of it when he takes bows.

EXHORTATION

As dancing chorus members start for their dressing room to put on costumes, Nelle calls for their best efforts. The dancers are Joann Jacobs, Janet McNeary, Joyce Ann Maret and Rose Marie Florey.

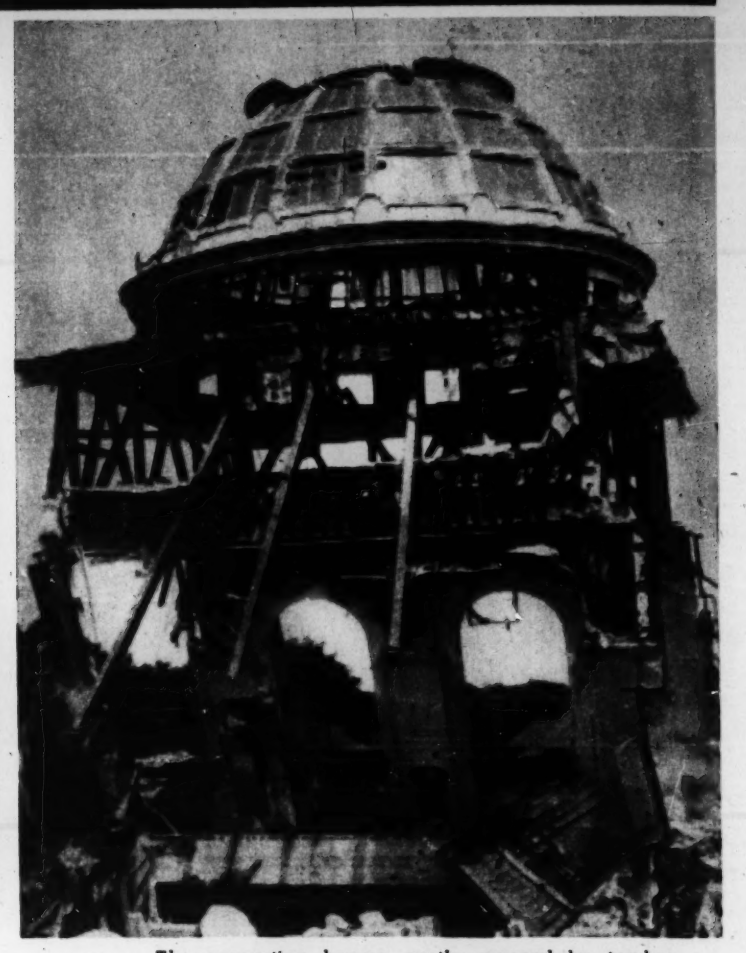

DOME'S CRASHING FINISH

Landmark in Kansas City's Midtown Makes Way for a Department Store

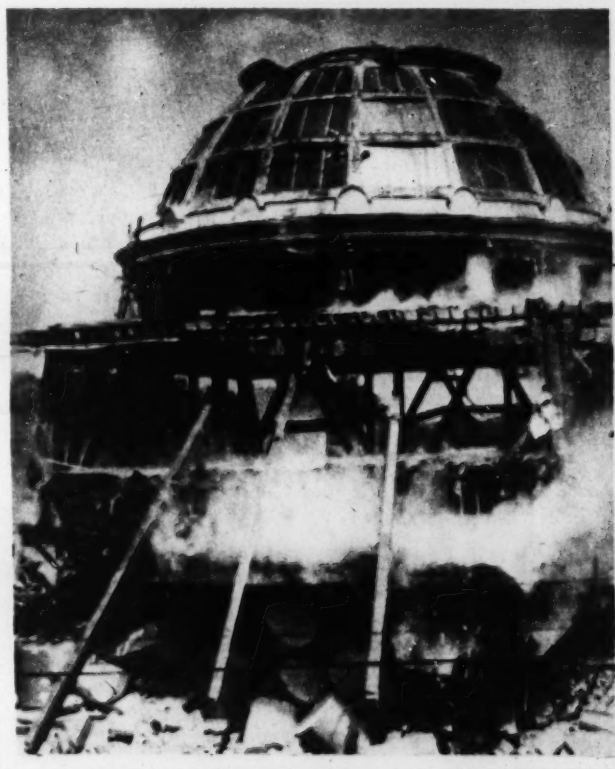

With most of its supporting beams removed, the 45-ton dome of the Second Church of Christ, Scientist, in Kansas City, Missouri, waits to be toppled to the ground. Only the facade of the church and the dome are left at this stage of wrecking the 53-year-old Kansas City landmark to make way for a chain department store building. Two workmen are perched at base of dome, near upper end of crane. Facade was removed also before dome was brought down.

A cloud of dust begins to rise as the falling structure starts to disintegrate. It took five hours to fell the dome after removal of temporary braces that augmented the steel supporting beams. Winches finally were able to buckle the supports only after a workman nearly severed a beam 35 feet above ground.

Autumn Look Makes First Appearances

Fashion designers, undaunted by the immediate presence of summer, have already made up and are showing styles for fall and winter wear. This ensemble, shown in New York, has a slim black wool herringbone skirt topped by a jacket with a black-and-white Norwegian pattern.

A flaring tunic worn over pencil-slim skirt, in photo at right, is shown by a Berlin designer. Outfit is of dark gray wool flannel. Coat has a single line of buttons down front, with big ornamental button on each pocket.

Done in soft beige wool, this short-sleeved dress from Paris buttons from neckline to hem. It has conversation-piece pockets, a leather belt colored to match material.

This two-piece suit is named the Red Corsar by its Berlin designer. The red coat has a nipped waist, slash pockets, widely flaring bottom. The tight skirt is black. Suit is modeled here with a black hat of Persian lamb.

The four got into a brawl with Hammermeister and another policeman after an auto accident. Within 48 hours of the fight Frost had been sentenced to two years, James Chaney to a year and Fred Chaney to six months. Reeves was freed when Frost said Reeves had tried to help the policemen.

AIR STEWARDESSES PRACTICE SEA SURVIVAL

Stewardesses for the Delta-C. & S. Airline who are scheduled for overseas flights go through a strenuous preliminary sea survival training at Atlanta, Georgia. Other "passengers" hang to the side of the raft or lie on its bottom. The girls train in a pool near the Atlanta airport.

HIS OWN FIRE ENGINE

Ladue Man Gratifies Old Ambition and Lets Youngsters In on the Fun

With 14 neighborhood children as passengers the fire engine leaves the Carpenter home at 9 Lindworth lane. Carpenter is behind the wheel of the old right-hand-drive pumper. Two adults rode on the back step of the truck for the sake of order and safety. Carpenter allows no riding on hood and fenders. He is a member of the National Fire Engine Club and of the Horseless Carriage Club of America. He also collects models of fire engines and books on the subject. Some day he hopes to own two other pumpers from the 1920s—an Ahrens Fox and an American La France.

After the other passengers have gone home, Mark Creely sticks around to watch Carpenter wipe dust off engine parts under the hood. Carpenter keeps his fire truck in excellent running order. During the week, if it isn't too hot, he leaves the pumper parked on a lot at the tire service business where he works in downtown St. Louis.

While waiting for the ride to start, Charles Hoppin (checked shirt) walks on ladder fastened to side of the pumper. Watching, from left, are John Hoppin, Chan Lowell, Jane Cox and Debbie Dodge. Debbie has one hand on cap of the gas tank.

RESIDENTS OF LADUE are becoming accustomed to the sight and sounds of a 35-year-old fire engine making a "run" with a clinging swarm of children. The obsolete pumper, painted red of course, is "on call" every weekend in front of the James M. Carpenter home. For both Carpenter and for children from the roundabout neighborhood it represents a dream come true. One of Carpenter's long-time ambitions has been to own a fire truck. Now that he has one, he lets children share his fun by climbing around on it and, best of all, riding it when he takes the pumper out for a spin.

Carpenter acquired the fire engine—a 1920 Seagrave, with a double side chain drive—last May, after reading in a firefighting profession magazine that it was for sale at Arkansas City, Kansas. When new the pumper cost $14,000; Carpenter says he has $700 invested in it. The assistant chief of the fire department at Charleston, Missouri, came up to look at the engine, but Carpenter told him it wasn't for sale. He also refuses to rent it.

Also obtained by Carpenter was the logbook for his fire engine, listing all of its accomplishments during its years of service. The log tells, for instance, that on May 22 and 23, 1951, the fire engine pumped water for 22 straight hours during an Arkansas City fire.

With the truck stopped, the "crew" swings into action to extinguish an imaginary brush fire on Litzsinger road. Jane Cox pulls out hose at right. The truck has 100 feet of hose, a 650-gallon-a-minute pumper in good working order. Its 116-horsepower engine can hit a top speed of 45 miles per hour.

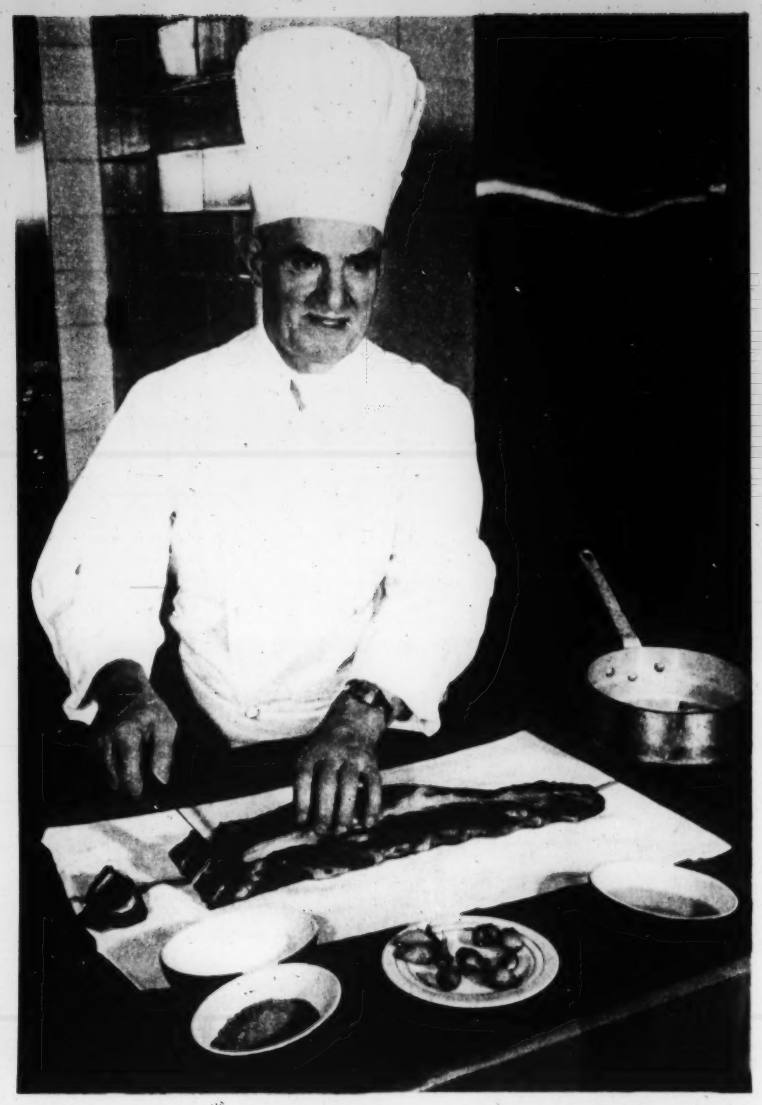

Mark Creely plays like he's driving the truck. He had commented, after returning to the Carpenter home, "This was the best ride I ever had." Visible between ladder rungs at center are the truck's gear shift (left) and brake lever. After purchasing the pumper at Arkansas City, Carpenter drove it from there to St. Louis.

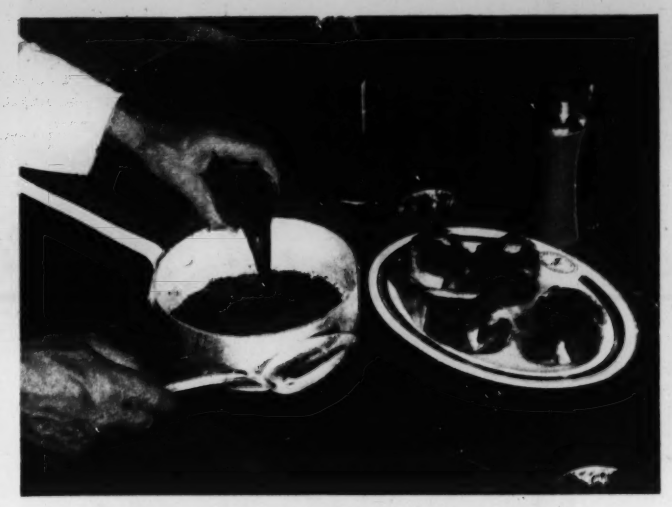

Faces of some of the passengers are a study in absorbed enjoyment as the fire truck rolls along about 25 miles an hour. Children, from left, are John Hoppin, Meredith Dodge, Mike Hamilton, Barbara Bohren and Jane Cox. Carpenter usually drives out Litzsinger road to Lindbergh and back, a round trip of about four miles. Last Sunday morning Carpenter drove the fire truck to Ladue Chapel on Clayton road, gave rides to Sunday school children.

FAVORITE DISH

Filet Mignon, as Served at a Bank

1. Chef Plessis cuts a beef tenderloin into thick filets. They are coated with olive oil, salt and pepper. Sauce is started by sauteing shallots and fresh crushed pepper in butter.

2. Wine is added to the sauce and it is cooked again until liquid has reduced one-half. Steaks are marinated at room temperature.

3. Potatoes are trimmed to size of small yams and parboiled. Demi-glace is added to sauce and it is simmered for 20 minutes.

By MERNA LAZIER

IN ADDITION TO ITS OTHER ASSETS, the First National Bank in St. Louis maintains an inventory of tenderloin and other readily convertible items of cuisine for its new executive dining rooms. From these, Chef Raoul Plessis can prepare a dinner of gourmet quality for bank executives and their customers. One of his specialties is filet mignon with sauce Bordelaise, chateau potatoes and green beans au gratin.

Plessis trims a large tenderloin and then cuts it into individual steaks. These are marinated in olive oil, salt and pepper until ready to be broiled. Meanwhile, sauce is prepared by sauteing chopped shallots and crushed pepper in butter for a few minutes. Wine is added and mixture is slowly cooked until it is half its original volume, then a cup of demi-glace (a rich meat stock) is added, and cooking is continued for 20 minutes. Sauce is then skimmed, salted and strained.

Potatoes, pared down to small oval pieces, are cooked until tender but still firm. They are browned in butter on top of range or in the oven. Yellow cheese is added to a medium thick cream sauce, and this is combined with cooked green beans. They are sprinkled with parmesan cheese and lightly browned in oven. Small inch cubes of marrow are poached in boiling salted water and are placed on cooked steak underneath a sauteed mushroom. A crisp piece of toast under the steak will absorb the juices. Steaks are broiled to individual preference approximately six minutes per side, and are served immediately with the prepared vegetables. A salad may be served with the dinner or later as desired. Sauce may be served over the steak or passed at the table.

INGREDIENTS: Filet steaks cut six ounces each, olive oil, salt and pepper for marinating, one whole mushroom for each cut of meat. Sauce for four steaks—two teaspoons butter, one ounce chopped shallots, one teaspoon fresh crushed pepper, four ounces claret wine and one cup demi-glace or any commercial meat stock. Vegetables—allow two to three prepared potatoes for each serving, butter for browning, one large can whole string beans. For the cheese sauce—one tablespoon each of butter and flour, three-fourths cup milk, seasonings to taste, one-half cup grated yellow cheese, and parmesan cheese for sprinkling over top.

MACHINES GET BIGGER

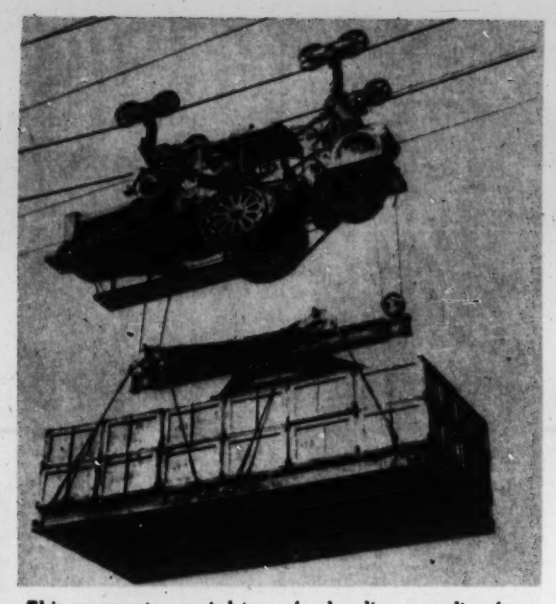

Since man first learned to make use of such simple machines as the inclined plane, pulley and lever, the magnitude of his mechanisms has constantly increased. The proportions reached by some of today's mobile contraptions are reminiscent of fiction. The 120,000-pound vehicle shown above was built in Longview, Texas, for carrying heavy loads and clearing trees and brush in swamp or sand. Each of six wheels, with 10-foot-tall rubber tires, has an electric motor, gets power from the machine's two diesel engines.

This farm machine will break land, harrow, grade, fumigate the soil, plow furrows, seed, cover the seed with soil and pump weed-killing chemicals all in one operation, according to its inventor, Herman Cohen of Kennebunk, Maine. Cohen claims the machine does in one day the work of nine men using conventional machines.

This overwater aerial tram for landing supplies from ship to shore without using piers was developed by Army research engineers. It is being tested at Fort Eustis, Virginia. Steel cables are tracks for the freight carrier. Powered by 135-horsepower gasoline engine, it can carry up to 20 tons of cargo each trip at speed of 30 miles an hour.

Designed for pulling heavy, bulky loads at high speeds over long distances, a 25-ton tractor is tested at Versailles, France. Trailer is hitched on to complete unit. Tractor has a 12-cylinder, 450-horsepower engine geared to eight wheels through special differentials. It can transport 100 tons.

PIG SCRAMBLE IN THE OZARKS

4-H Members Acquire Purebred Animals, but They Have to Catch Them First

As official checks ear tag of pig to record its number, new owner of black, white-belted gilt firmly holds hind legs of the prize he has caught. Boy walking away, who also won a pig after hard chase, looks back as another official, left, takes pig to deliver it to youngster's home.

Photos by ARTHUR WITMAN of the PICTURES Staff

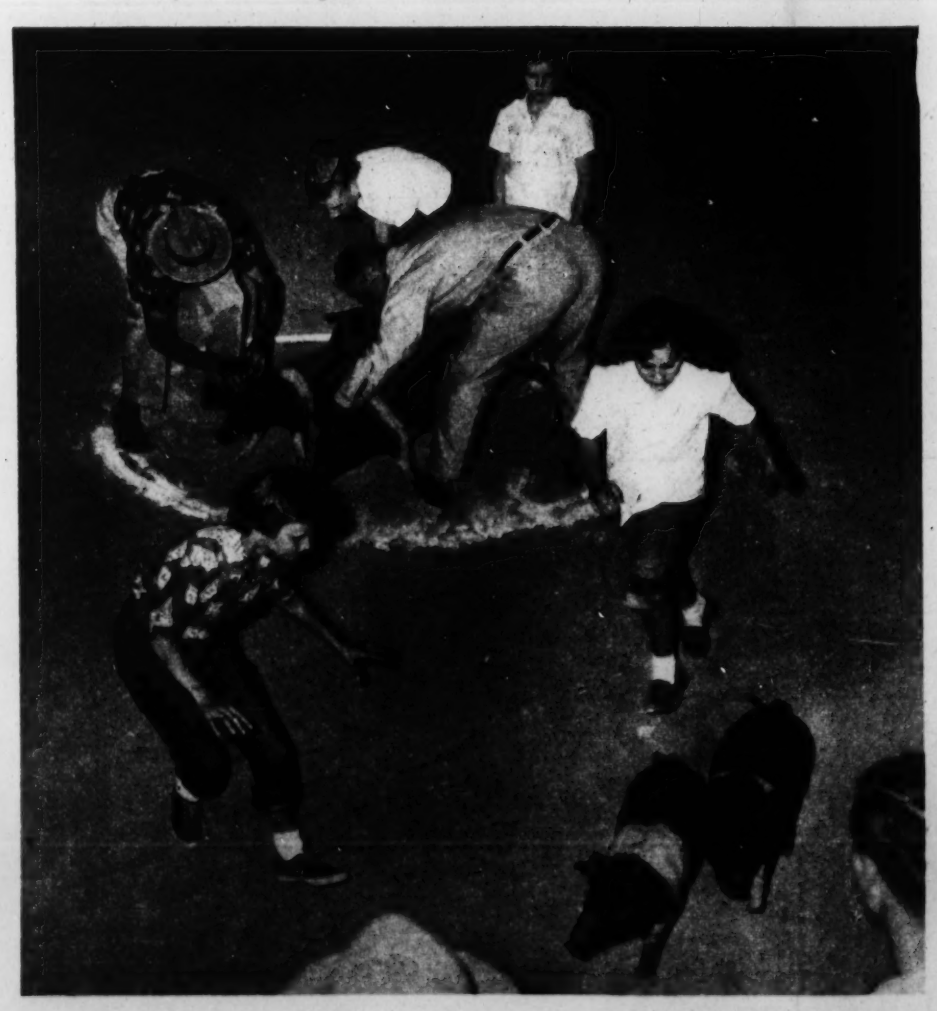

USING A PROVED RECIPE for stimulating 4-H Club members' interest in raising purebred hogs, Texas County recently held its annual pig scramble. Registered Hampshire pigs for the squealing, squirming event were donated by 4-H'ers who had previously won pigs in scrambles sponsored by the Agricultural Extension Service of the Missouri county in the Ozarks.

Twenty boys and girls—divided into three groups for three heats—scrambled for a total of 15 young sows. The gilts were loosed into a fenced part of the Houston, Missouri, athletic field. More youngsters than pigs in the inclosure were lined up, and at a signal each tried to catch a pig. Each caught pig had to be taken to and held in a lime-marked ring, then the catcher became its owner.

Winners of gilts are required to provide adequate quarters and care for their prize, and to give one pig from its litter for next year's pig scramble.

THE MAJOR AND THE 'TIGER'

Youngster Tim Hovey Makes Film Debut in "Private War of Major Benson"

1. Major Barney Benson (Charlton Heston, right), a much-decorated World War II veteran, is a zealous, but unpopular, training officer at Camp Elliott. He arouses the Pentagon's disfavor when a news magazine quotes his view that soldier trainees are being coddled. The major gets his choice of resigning or becoming commandant at a military school about to lose its R.O.T.C. rating. He takes the latter.

2. Benson is dismayed to find that Sheridan Military Academy is run by nuns—whom he calls "the ladies"—and that his cadet charges are of elementary school age. The major and the janitor are the only men at the school. Benson becomes a tough drillmaster and consequently unloved by the boys. One of his problems is 6-year-old "Tiger" Flaherty (Tim Hovey), who is always getting out of step and losing his pants.

3. When Benson calls "Tiger" on the carpet before Mother Redempta (Nana Bryant), head of the school, and Dr. Kay Lambert (Julie Adams), the resident physician, the major becomes flustered and falls over a wastebasket. He had been trying to make the two women understand that he had not threatened to hit "Tiger." Benson has fallen for Kay, who, recalling his statement in the magazine, has reminded him the boys need a "father," not a disciplinarian.

4. The boys sign a petition for the removal of Benson, but the request is ignored. Benson flies to Washington to take up his problems with his general, who turns out to be Mother Redempta's brother. Ordered back to his job, Benson finds "Tiger" at the station, trying to leave school because he doesn't like the major. Man totes boy back to school, sneaks him in so he won't be reported, and henceforth has a friend in "Tiger."

5. Benson becomes football coach, though he knows nothing about the game. After he recommends the "sock 'em" type of game to the boys, they give him a sample tackle and a wrenched knee. Dr. Kay and the janitor (William Demarest) have to carry the coach from the field. But Barney's toughness with the football team pays off. Sheridan is undefeated, wins a trophy. The players reject it, saying they had no fun winning it for Major Benson.

6. Barney decides this is it—he must leave at any cost. But Dr. Kay, who by now is fond of him and sees through his tough outer shell, exposes him to measles in the clinic. R.O.T.C. inspection date is near. "Tiger" and two other student leaders now on Benson's side whip the corps into shape. Out of the hospital in time to attend the review before the general and his staff, Benson finds the boys marching perfectly, chanting his name in cadence. Benson is promoted to a job at Fort Benning, and Dr. Kay decides to go along as his bride.

DRAGON BOAT RACE, HONG KONG

As the main event of a Chinese Dragon Boat festival, boats race through smoke pall from exploding firecrackers in Hong Kong harbor. Coxswain of winning boat (center) beats out stroke rhythm on drum for his crew. The long shells, with dragon heads on prows, carry nonworking passengers in addition to crewmen, who at this stage are churning water with their off-beat paddling. Chinese Dragon Boat festivals are held just before summer solstice, when the sun reaches its position in summer farthest from the equator.

Prince Valiant — IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Our Story: THE HUNT WAS A SUCCESS, BUT PRINCE VALIANT RETURNED ON A STRETCHER. NO BONES WERE BROKEN BY THE CHARGE OF THE GREAT BULL AUROCH, BUT HE WILL BE LAME FOR WEEKS.

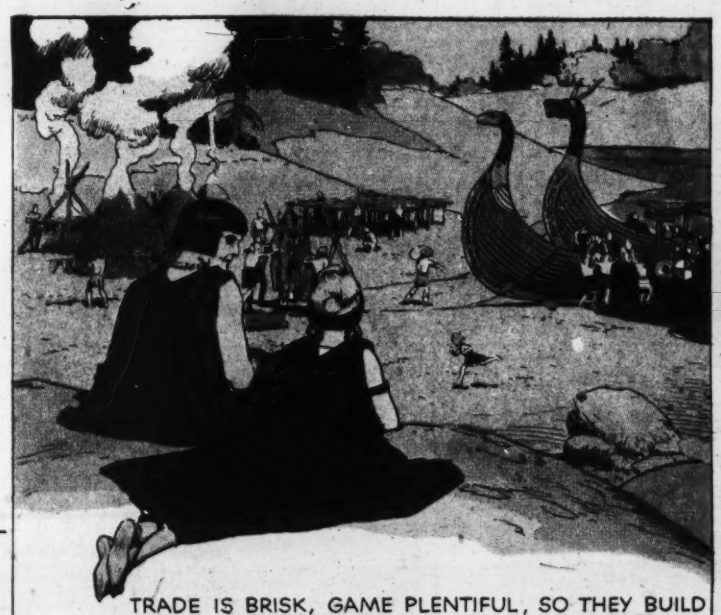

THE TWO CAPTIVES SHOW GREAT EXCITEMENT AT THE SIGHT OF ALL THE METAL OBJECTS. NEITHER GOLD NOR JEWELS INTERESTS THEM, ONLY IRON.

THEIR DRESS AND WEAPONS INDICATE THAT THEY ARE HUNTERS. BY SIGNS VAL TELLS THEM HE WILL EXCHANGE ARROWHEADS, KNIVES OR AXES FOR MEAT, AND SETS THEM FREE.

NEXT EVENING SEVERAL OF THESE PRIMITIVE SWAMP-DWELLERS COME TO THE SHIPS LADEN WITH GAME, AND SHOUT FOR JOY AT THEIR REWARDS.

TRADE IS BRISK, GAME PLENTIFUL, SO THEY BUILD SMOKEHOUSES AND DRYING RACKS TO PRESERVE ENOUGH FOR THE HOMEWARD JOURNEY.

VAL IS IMPATIENT TO COMPLETE THEIR JOURNEY NORTHWARD BEFORE WINTER STORMS MAKE THE WAY PERILOUS. BUT NOW THEY ARE FAR UP THE DNIEPER RIVER; THE CURRENT INCREASES AND THEY ENCOUNTER RIFFLES AND RAPIDS.

AT LAST THEY ARRIVE AT THE GREAT PORTAGE AND THE HARDEST PART OF THEIR JOURNEY LIES BEFORE THEM.

All Firestone Tires have the Exclusive Safety-Tensioned Gum-Dipped* Cord Body . . .

The Firestone Gum-Dipping process, patented in 1920, has long been famous for extra protection against blowouts. Now, with valuable speedway experience and millions of miles of testing on the highway, Firestone combines Gum-Dipping with Safety-Tensioning to take the stretch out of tire cords, a major cause of tire failure in high-speed driving. The result is greater blowout protection and longer tire life.

by ESTHER KATKOW BROTMAN

STACKED-UP volumes of bound Katkow Kibitzers serve as a rostrum for the author, flanked by seated parents. Other Katkows (l. to r.) are Minnie, Sallie, Albert, Herman, Ann, Lee.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Our family newspaper, the Katkow Kibitzer, started out like many a youthful project which goes full steam for a while — until interest flags — and then quietly dies. Not so with the Kibitzer. After 18 years of publication, our little mimeographed hearthside weekly is still going strong!

On February 11, 1937, when the first issue went to press, my youngest sister, Minnie, then 21, and two younger brothers, Albert, 20, and Herman, 18, were still living in Baltimore with our parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Katkow. I and my four other sisters — Dorothy, Lee, Sallie and Ann — had moved to Washington, New York and Kansas City; and only Lee wasn't married with children of her own.

We Katkows had been more closely knit than most families — perhaps by virtue of economic necessity during the Depression, when Father, a tailor, could get only part-time work. So we individually began to feel as deeply saddened as our parents that the family circle was slowly drifting apart. Then the younger children came up with their idea for the Kibitzer.

Minnie assumed the position of editor, with Herman as assistant editor and Albert general rewrite man and "Poet Laureate" — he composed special verses for birthdays, anniversaries and other memorable occasions. They wrote the rest of us asking for contributions: personal anecdotes, accounts of family incidents, bright sayings of children, news of births and birthdays and original poems and photographs. The thrill of seeing one's own name and brain child in print uncovered a bonanza of unsuspected talent among us. And what started out as merely a news letter soon blossomed into a literary publication.

When Minnie became Mrs. Joseph Kaplan and moved into a home of her own, the Kibitzer evolved into a Kaplan project. It still is, with Joe running the mimeograph machine and their two children, Ellis, 12, and Hinda, 9, folding the two-to-six stenciled sheets, addressing envelopes and pasting on stamps. The Kaplans devote the whole of Thursday evening every week to getting out the Kibitzer.

The publication's current circulation is only 15 copies a week, but each issue is eagerly awaited by a total of 43 Katkow children and grandchildren, spread from Orlando, Fla., to Lexington, Mass., and from Monmouth, N. J., to Liberal, Kan. Subscriptions used to be free, but now each subscriber contributes $3 a year toward the cost of postage, stationery and greeting cards — which the editor sends out in behalf of "All the Katkow Kibitzers" on anniversaries, holidays, etc.

Even a War Correspondent

During the war, when my brothers were in service, the Kibitzer even boasted a foreign correspondent, for Albert frequently sent in dispatches with French and Italian datelines. Herman didn't get out of the country, but he kept us posted on his activities at various U. S. air bases and installations.

Some years ago, it was decided to bind past issues of the Kibitzer in covers containing three years each. Today, as a result, there is a stack of fat volumes through which older family members can bemusedly browse, and in which their offspring can look up accounts of their births and early adventures.

Our family has been, by the grace of God, extremely fortunate in experiencing a minimum of sadness over the years. On the few occasions of tragedy, a one-page Kibitzer has been sent out, containing the news; and usual items were postponed, out of respect, until the next issue.

The last time we Katkows were all together was in 1951 when, for the first time in 20 years, we gathered in Baltimore to celebrate our parents' 50th wedding anniversary. Wishing that we could see more of one another and realizing that that is practically impossible, we feel fortunate in sharing our little paper — an ever-fresh bond in common, which keeps us continually in one another's thoughts and hearts through the passing years. ■

"BOY" TO BOY

● At left, Detroit Tiger manager Bucky Harris places a paternal arm around the shoulder of Al Kaline, slugging young right-fielder who is the major league's new "boy wonder." Harris, of course, knows a "boy wonder" when he sees one — he was the original, the title being handed to him when he managed the Washington Senators and Detroit Tigers in the '20s and '30s at a tender age. Now back in the Motor City, Bucky has a young team sparked by Kaline. For more on this newest boy wonder, see page 12.

Everybody's going on a picnic!

...and Cut-Rite goes along to keep everything fresh

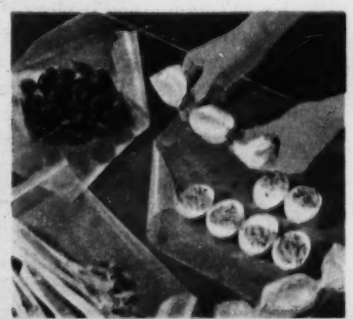

Save work! Pack up all the sandwich fixings in Cut-Rite—cheese, cold cuts, buttered buns . . . and let folks "make their own" right at the picnic. Cut-Rite's waxed-through to keep everything deliciously fresh.

A good trick to keep sandwiches from getting soggy is to wrap tomatoes and lettuce separately, put them in just before you eat. Do your slicing and sandwich making on extra-heavy Cut-Rite to save washing up.

Cooking out? Shape hamburger patties ahead of time and put in ice cube trays—separate them with waxed-through Cut-Rite. Freeze the hamburgers . . . you can even take them along to the picnic right in the trays.

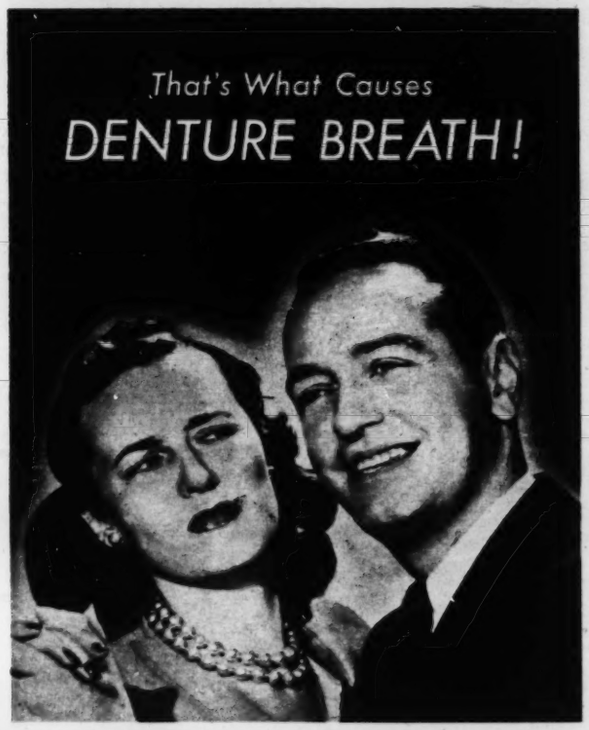

Keep them crisp, keep them moist! Wrap celery, radishes, deviled eggs, in Cut-Rite. Cut-Rite doesn't split or break even when you twist it. And its famous cutting edge tears easily, neatly.

Outboards, built for summer fun, get jolting safety tests

WINTER HAVEN, FLA.

Every summer, more and more Americans find their fun sailing or cruising. This year, some 20 million are at it — with more to come.

Two reasons why are the sassy models shown in these photos and on today's cover. They were built by Bob Switzer, of Crystal Lake, Ill., who has been building and racing boats since he was 15. Now 23, he turns out one Switzercraft every three hours at the Switzer family factory.

Photos taken on Lake Eloise here show the craft undergoing one of their toughest "road tests" — cutting across the wake of another boat at 35 mph. Safety-designed on aerodynamic principles, the boats leaped out of the water but didn't capsize.

But Bob warns boat owners: DON'T ever try this. It's for testing only. "The sensation," he says, "is like sitting on a chair that isn't there." ■

Cheer's Blue-Magic whitener is not just a bluing . . . it's more than a bluing . . . it's a new, better whitener for all your wash.

One look tells you . . . blue Cheer brings a new whiteness to your wash. And this simple yet dramatic "window test" proves it.

Just take some Cheer-washed clothes to your window. In that revealing light (or even on a gray day), you'll see a startling new whiteness in all your wash. And on hardest-to-whiten things like nylon, you'll see a real difference in whiteness never possible before Cheer.

What's more, blue Cheer washes dirtiest work and play clothes crisply clean, adds new brightness to colored washables, too. And you really know Cheer's in a class by itself when you see the difference in whiteness Cheer gives you.

Are We Losing Japan?

A Congressman asks a startling question — and gives some grim answers

RED-LED RIOTS, like this one in Tokyo, indicate strength of Communists in Japan.

by REP. THOMAS J. DODD

CONNECTICUT CONGRESSMAN;
MEMBER, HOUSE COMMITTEE ON COMMUNIST AGGRESSION

The U.S. is in real trouble in Japan. The onetime enemy we had counted upon as the chief bulwark of freedom in the Far East is drifting farther and farther from the free-world camp, closer and closer to the Communists and the neutralists. This was apparent in the recent Japanese election, when an assortment of left-wing, Communist-directed parties picked up enough seats to defeat our hope of Japanese rearmament. Now we are confronted with a rising tide of anti-Americanism, plus Russian-Japanese conferences that may drive a deeper wedge between the two nations.

Shocking things have been going on in Japan since World War II ended — things that have been kept from the American people by military government and censorship. As a result, our position on the critical Asian front is in jeopardy.

On the basis of personal conversations with informed Government officials abroad, testimony before Congressional committees and statements of Japanese, here are the facts as I see them:

- Japan could be completely paralyzed within 24 hours by a Kremlin-called general strike.
- Of 5,000,000 organized workers, 3,500,000 are under the control of Communist-dominated unions. They are all in key industries and are directed by Moscow-trained experts.
- Communist influence in education ranges from nearly 100 per cent control of elementary-school teachers to 10 per cent of the university graduates.
- Japanese Diet (parliament) members who have been wooed and won on visits to Red China would take a neutral or anti-American stand in a crisis.
- Japanese prisoners of war held for years by the Reds were given super-Communist training and are one of the best-trained Party cadres in the world.

All these Communist gains were scored while our Army of Occupation controlled Japan. How? Responsible members of government say the infiltration began when we permitted Russians aboard the U.S.S. Missouri for the signing of the Japanese surrender. That was the signal for Kremlin-directed agents to move in. They have made their biggest strides in the fields of labor, education and propaganda.

Under the noses of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his staff, the Reds wormed into the labor unions on the pretext of broadening the base. This "broadening" process has now reached the point where 70 per cent of organized labor is Communist-dominated. Only the farmers have resisted, and even with them the Reds have made headway. Their left wing "Japan Farmers' Union"—partly through confusion with the conservative "Old Japan Farmers' Union"—now has almost half a million members and rivals the older union in numbers.

The most tightly controlled Red union is the Japanese Teachers Union. Its devoted members, with practically complete control of the schools, drum into children the lessons of the party line: Japan wants peace—but the U.S. is an enemy of peace and the Chinese Nationalists have "sold out" to the enemies of peace.

The teachers further use their positions to electioneer, instructing children to urge their parents to vote for left-wing, pro-Communist candidates. This tactic helped the Reds gain strength in the recent Diet elections.

In the propaganda field, more than 20 of Japan's most popular and widely read publications are sponsored, published, owned or controlled by Communists. Thus, the two primary sources of education — schools and the press — are under Kremlin control.

Can we halt Japan's leftward drift, or even reverse it? What is the best the U.S. can hope for in Japan?

We can control the Red threat only by meeting it where it began—on the local level. Our propaganda program in Japan—and throughout the Far East—should be improved and increased. Truth is our strongest weapon. We should present it so that the teeming millions of Asia can understand it.

There is a vague hope that the recent upheavals in Moscow may reflect themselves in a struggle for control of the Japanese Reds. But that is wishful thinking. We need a positive, vigorous program that will help bring about economic recovery in Japan with resulting financial and political stability. Something must be done right now to take up the slack in heavy industry created by the recent election loss of the rearmament program.

A Japanese Marshall Plan?

If the Marshall Plan could meet and defeat Communism in Western Europe, a similar plan can do it in Japan. We must start thinking and working now toward the day when Japan will be able to take her place in the South East Asia Treaty Organization.

Another weapon in our battle for Japan is the tariff. Recently, Congress gave President Eisenhower the power to lower tariffs over the next three years. Perhaps, in the great need to rehabilitate Japanese economy and trade, he will find that special measures must be taken to defeat Communist expansion there.

And the turbulent political situation in Indo-China also affects Japan, for that country long has been Japan's breadbasket. Now that half of Indo-China has gone to the Communists and the other half is menaced, the problem of Japanese Communism is tightly tied to the problem of Communism in Indo-China. The fall of Southern Vietnam to the Reds might nullify all the progress made in Japan since the war.

I believe that we have the ability, the courage and the know-how to save Japan from being neutralized or, worse yet, turned against us. But time is running out. While we mark time, Communist propaganda goes unchecked and the Red octopus spreads its tentacles ever farther into the economic and social life of Japan. ■

JONESBORO, TENN.

Tapering down from Guy Lester, 21, to Ivan Huston, 3 months, the long blue line of overalled boys at left represents the chief crop raised on Emory Harrison's farm here: sons. Harrison's 13 boys are believed to make up the biggest all-male family in the U.S. (Science has no explanation for the predominance of one sex in a family; the odds against 13 successive boys or girls are about 100,000 to 1.)

And boys by the baker's dozen mean problems in proportion. One sample: Mrs. Harrison, who does all the baking, uses 50 pounds of flour a week. Yet, surprisingly, the family spends only $12 to $15 a week for food. Their 70 acres of mountain farmland 100 miles northeast of Knoxville keep them provided with vegetables, wheat, potatoes, corn, meat. The only cash crop is tobacco, which brings in $500 to $1,000 a year. Harrison stretches this income by making butcher knives and footstools. He also is a local county constable.

Life is not easy for the Harrison boys. Besides fetching wood and water, each must raise and care for his own animal. When their father developed a heart condition, a few years ago, several of the older boys gave up their schooling to operate the farm. In spite of hard work, all are healthy; Harrison boasts that he has spent less than $50 on medical bills in 22 years of married life.

To make things easier on the boys, Harrison tries to teach as many skills as possible; several of them, for instance, are excellent cooks. They also are exposed to Harrison's homespun philosophy. "A good run," he may tell the boys, "is better than a bad stand." A lesson all must learn is to help one another, and the older boys keep a watchful eye on the younger ones. Despite her staggering cooking, washing and cleaning chores, Mrs. Harrison finds time to help her neighbors. Recently this paid off for the Harrisons; when their home burned, the congregations of 12 churches chipped in to buy and build them a new and more modern home.

Harrison would like to see more of his sons, particularly the younger ones, get more formal education. One boy was an excellent self-taught pianist, but the family couldn't afford training. His piano was destroyed in the fire, hasn't been replaced. And the father would like to take some of the drudgery out of the place by installing a pump from the farm spring. But he sees nothing remarkable about his family. "Why, my grandfather had 27 children," Harrison says. "He had it a lot tougher than this."

DETROIT'S DARLING

Tiger fans love Al Kaline, a young outfielder who suddenly grew muscles

by LYALL SMITH
SPORTS EDITOR, "THE DETROIT FREE PRESS"

DETROIT.

It has never happened before, say ticket sellers at Briggs Stadium here. Finicky fans, they swear, want seats far out in right field for Tiger games. "This season," says one, "we're getting more requests for them than we are for seats back of home plate."

The reason is a lean, 20-year-old rightfielder named Al Kaline. To Tiger fans, the impact of this young athlete from Maryland on the world of baseball seems to be stirring up almost as much excitement as the recent Guaranteed Annual Wage negotiations did in local auto-making.

Tiger fans have reason to be excited. This year it took American League pitchers 26 games to cool down Kaline's bat to where he was only hitting an even .400. And even after they managed to hold him below that figure, his sensational fielding and throwing kept enemy batters mumbling to themselves.

"The kid murders you with his speed and arm," growls the Yankees' Casey Stengel. "Used to be I could tell if a line drive would be a hit, but now I'm jumping out of the dugout every time a ball goes to right. He's made some catches I still don't believe. He'll hit you too. I sorta hate to think what'll happen when he grows up."

Kaline has a lot of growing up to do yet. Just two years ago he graduated from high school in Baltimore, receiving a $30,000 bonus for signing with the Tigers. Under baseball law, all bonus players must be kept for two years, but Detroit has never shed a tear about having to keep Kaline. He finished out the 1953 season as a bench-warmer, but came back in '54 to capture the right-field job. He hit .274, startled experts with his fielding grace (astonishing since he had never played a day in the minor leagues).

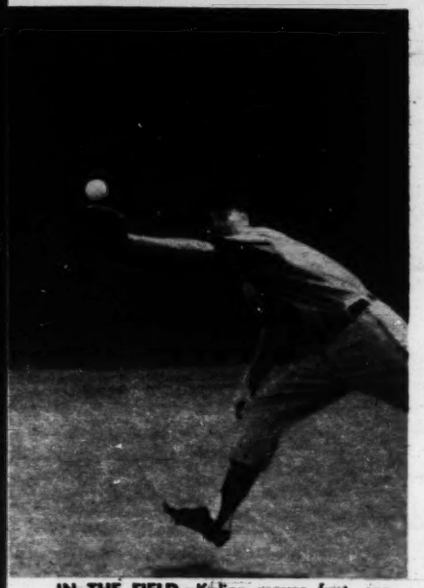

At the end of the 1954 season, the 6' 1" Kaline scaled 153. He came back this year — well fed by a loving bride — at 175. And that made the difference in his hitting. He equaled his homer production for the entire '54 season (4) in the first 10 days, doubled it 20 days later. On April 17 he smacked three in one game and two in one inning — only the fourth player in A.L. history to turn that trick.

Detroit, long a baseball-crazy city but much calmer in recent years because of tepid teams, went wild over young, shy Al. When the Detroit Free Press tossed out a three-paragraph request for a suitable nickname for the kid, the response was a mailman's nightmare. Hundreds and hundreds of letters poured in. An example of the fans' fervor came from one amateur poet:

"... He flavors every game he plays, no nickname is so fine
As Salt, for everybody knows that Salt means Al-Kaline."

All this adulation has done nothing to the size of Kaline's cap. He's still modest, talkative as a piece of granite. But from a word here and there, his early life takes shape. He started playing ball at Westport Grammar School in Baltimore, plucked off his first headline when he won a contest by throwing a baseball 173½ feet.

Then came a long string of headlines. In high school he racked up averages of .333, .418, .469 and .488 to become the first player since Charley Keller to make four Maryland All-State teams.

Bums' Rush

Al was only 5'7" and weighed 115 pounds as a freshman. His .333 average, however, got him an invitation to a Brooklyn Dodger tryout camp. "They took one look at me," says Kaline, "and sent me away. Said I was too small."

But his Baltimore friends had no doubts about Al. They once made bets — not on whether Al would play in the majors but on which team would grab him first.

The Tigers cast a speculative eye on Al when he hit a homer in a game of high-school all-stars in New York. Watching was Charley Gehringer, a long-time Tiger second-base star and now a front-office executive. He came back raving about the kid from Baltimore, assigned scout Al Katalinas to watch him further. Katalinas flashed back glowing, sometimes near-hysterical, reports: Example: "The boy stood out [in the game] like a cat's eyes in a dark room."

Other times, however, Katalinas was more cautious — but still optimistic: "Not much power yet, but he is still young and growing. He has small wrists, a small neck, but his speed always will make up for any lack of power ... even if he doesn't develop into a long-ball hitter, which he could when he adds a few more pounds."

Katalinas all but moved into the Kaline home, regularly visiting Al's father (who works in a Baltimore broom factory). On Kaline's graduation day, scouts from every big-league club were on hand, but in Katalinas' hand was a check for $30,000 and Kaline became a Tiger.

"I needed that money," says Kaline. "My folks knew that I had always dreamed about being a big-league ball player and though they never had much money, they wouldn't let me get a job while I was going to high school. They knew I wanted to play ball all I could. When I signed, I really didn't want to be a bonus player—you usually sit on a bench for two years—but I figured my folks deserved the money. And they got it."

Tip from the Top

The lure of the majors, strong though it was in the 18-year-old Kaline, wasn't too strong to make him forget his friends. He refused to sign his Detroit contract for 10 days so he could play for his sandlot team in a tournament.

He reported to the Tigers on June 24, 1953. Fred Hutchinson, then the Tiger manager, sent him to bat 28 times that season; Al picked up seven hits, including his first big-league homer (off Cleveland's Dave Hoskins).

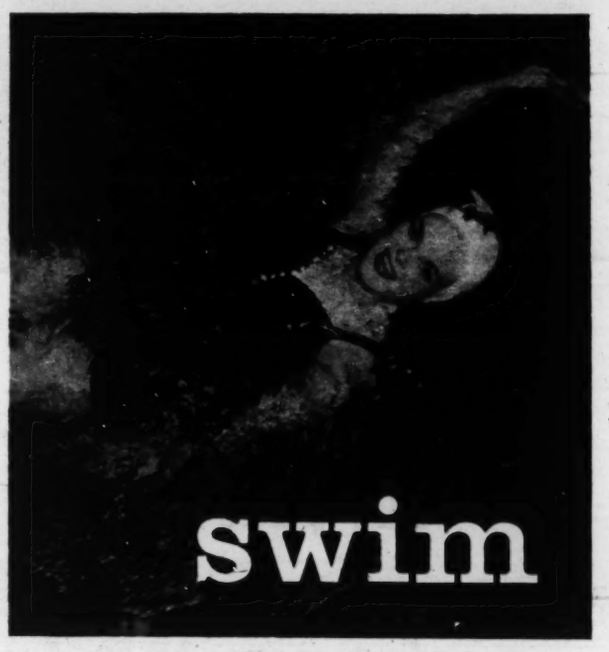

Hutchinson was high on the boy. Late in the season he asked his good friend, slugger Ted Williams of the Red Sox, to give Al some advice. Williams took one look at the willowy Kaline and suggested:

"Do what I do during the winter. Get a heavy bat, twice as heavy as the standard 34-ounce ones. Swing that maybe a half hour a day all winter. And carry a baseball around with you and try to squeeze the stuffings out of it."

That winter Kaline got a job as a clerk in a Baltimore sporting-goods store, swung the bat and squeezed the ball with gusto every chance he got. He claims now that it helped develop his hands, wrists and swing. He did the same thing last winter, when he also took himself a bride — pretty Louise Hamilton, his high-school sweetheart. Her cooking — in all or in part — pushed skinny Al to a hard-hitting 175.

Growing with Al is baseball fever in Detroit. Attendance in 1953, the year he joined the Tigers, was a poor 884,000. It jumped to 1,079,000 last year. This year the young, speedy club — spearheaded by Kaline and slugging shortstop Harvey Kuenn — is making threatening swipes at the pennant, and attendance may hit 1,200,000.

And most of them, to the despair of the ticket sellers, will want seats that give a good close look at the amazing Mr. Kaline. ■

Remember!—Tampax was invented by a doctor! He realized that if "time-of-the-month" was handled by internal absorption, women could indulge in normal activities without any of the chafing, irritation and other discomforts associated with external pads. So far as swimming is concerned, Tampax is not only invisible when properly inserted ... it doesn't absorb any water! Users even wear Tampax in their bathtubs with complete security and comfort.

However, if you spend the Summer in a hammock, Tampax would still be a blessing. It prevents odor from forming by preventing exposure to the air. It's easy to dispose of, even with the unruly plumbing that sometimes exists at vacation resorts. (Both the Tampax and the applicator flush away.) And it's by far the daintiest kind of protection ... why, your hands needn't even touch the Tampax during insertion or removal.

Make this the Summer you'll enjoy from first to last. Get your supply of Tampax at any drug or notion counter. Choice of 3 absorbencies: Regular, Super, Junior. Month's supply goes into purse; economy size gives more than an average Summer's supply. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

EMPTY PODIUM fails to halt Symphony of the Air in rehearsal (above) or concert.

The orchestra that refused to DIE

by DAN PAONESSA

On the evening of October 27, 1954, an orchestra of 92 musicians began tuning up in routine fashion before a jam-packed audience in New York City's famed Carnegie Hall. But this was not a routine concert. In fact, it was a unique performance: the conductor's podium was empty; the orchestra would perform without a leader.

To begin the concert, the first violinist merely nodded his head. At this almost imperceptible signal the orchestra broke into the opening bars of the Roman Carnival Overture with breath-taking precision. And thus the concert continued — in stunning brilliance. At its close the audience rose in mass tribute. Next day Olin Downes, the venerated music critic of the New York Times, typified the unanimous praise of reviewers when he called the performance "a miracle of instrumentation."

As heartwarming as any of the reviews, however, was the experience of one of the musicians as he left Carnegie Hall. "How did we sound?" he asked the doorman.

"You were magnificent!" the doorman beamed. "Why, I felt that Toscanini was still there."

The Maestro's Creation

For this orchestra that performed without a conductor was the former NBC Symphony, which, under the relentless, perfectionist direction of Arturo Toscanini, had been unequaled anywhere in the world in its virtuosity. Since its beginning 17 years before, a generation of young Americans had grown up listening to its Sunday-afternoon broadcasts. Short-wave programs and tours through North and South America had spread its fame until it had become almost a personal possession to millions of listeners. It was one of America's greatest cultural institutions.

Then in April, 1954 Toscanini decided to retire. He was 87, and wanted to spend more time in his beloved Italy. The National Broadcasting Company decided to disband the orchestra. Without the maestro it was felt that the magic of its performance would be gone.

Soon the musicians drifted apart. One man, a violinist, retired. Another got a job selling shoes. A percussionist went to work at a filling station. Some, of course, got other orchestra jobs. But years of hard work and devotion to a single ideal seemed to have been wiped out. It was as if this superb orchestra had never existed.

Some weeks later one of the bass players, Michael Krasnopolsky, took out Toscanini's last Christmas present to his men—his recordings of Beethoven's nine symphonies.

"As I listened that lonely night," Krasnopolsky recalls, "the quality of the music was so great and fine that I suddenly knew that our orchestra simply could not be permitted to die."

So, one night, a group of the older members gathered in Krasnopolsky's basement to talk things over. After hours of fruitless discussion they decided that if all the musicians got together they could perhaps find some way of keeping this orchestra alive. A formal meeting was called for two weeks later, June 17, for all 92 men. And that night they voted their orchestra back into existence. Don Gillis, former producer of the NBC Symphony and a noted composer, was voted in as chairman of what was vaguely called the "steering committee."

"Half the time I didn't know where I was steering," the young composer says.

The steering committee, consisting of six members, several of them jobless, began meeting daily to scheme up ways of raising money. They wrote letters to major industries, seeking sponsors. They made appointments with radio and television executives, and officials of recording companies.

Meanwhile, they debated possible names for the orchestra; they couldn't be just "the former NBC Symphony." Then someone—no one remembers who—pointed out that the orchestra was a child of radio, that its broadcasts had been heard over the air by some 10 million Americans. What better name could there be, then, than "Symphony of the Air"?

Now they had a name, but they were a long way from having an orchestra.

"If we hadn't been so serious, it would have been fantastic," Gillis says, grinning. "We didn't know from one day to the next if we could even raise enough dimes for phone calls."

Faith Pays Off

What happened next was almost miraculous. Word had apparently spread as to what the orchestra members were attempting, and letters and contributions began to trickle in. Newspapers played up the story of the orchestra that refused to die. As the weeks went by the trickle became a flood.

Soon dimes and dollars were pouring in from all over the country, and from places as far off as Venezuela, Greece, Egypt, Formosa, Germany, England. On September 1, a little more than four months after the NBC Symphony was declared dead, the newborn Symphony of the Air took its first firm step: it leased an office in Carnegie Hall for $1,500 a year.

In gratitude to their well-wishers all over the world, the men gathered one midnight at Carnegie Hall and made three recordings: the Roman Carnival Overture, Tschaikowsky's Nutcracker Suite and the last work which the maestro had conducted — the overture to Wagner's Die Meistersinger. This record album—"a gift to the giver"—was made for those whose contributions had kept the orchestra alive. A collector's item, it is still being given for donations of $10 or more to Room 1101, Carnegie Hall, New York City.

It was time now for the cold plunge—a concert debut. Arrangements were made for obtaining Carnegie Hall for October 27. Rehearsals were scheduled. But one problem remained: Who would conduct? Suddenly, Michael Krasnopolsky had an inspiration. "Why have a conductor at all?" he asked. "In what better way could we prove that we aren't just another orchestra than by playing before an empty podium?"

The question horrified the members. For nearly 100 musicians to plunge into a major musical work without a leader would be as hazardous as taking a ship to sea without a captain. The split-second mistake of only one man, the failure to hold a certain tempo, could throw the performance into chaos.

But for 17 years Toscanini had hammered

these men into a single, integrated instrument of rare beauty. "Toscanini had given us a way of thinking that was unique," says Concert-master Daniel Guilet. "He didn't interpret the music, but taught us to play a piece 'the way the composer intended it to be played.' "

The men set to work and rehearsed day and night, sometimes until three or four in the morning. Together, the whole group decided on the pieces to be played. Together they laid out the scores and discussed every problem of tempo, balance, dynamics.

In the beginning much of the burden fell upon first-violinist Guilet who, as concert-master, had to guide each section through the technically troublesome spots. But as rehearsals went on, every man made an effort to anticipate all possible difficulties.

"With the baton of a conductor to lead him, a musician is concerned merely with knowing his own part," says Guilet. "Now that we were without a leader, all of us had to know every part. We had to listen carefully to the phrasing and tempo of the whole orchestra, in order not to get lost."

The group borrowed money to pay for advertisements. They had tickets printed and sent out.

On the evening of October 27 many people went to Carnegie Hall out of sympathy —and many out of curiosity. They felt that a conductorless concert would be at best a brave stunt. They applauded politely as the musicians filed in and sat before the empty podium.

An Orchestra Is Reborn

Now a stillness settled over the packed Hall as the musicians, their faces drawn and tense, fixed their eyes on the concert-master. Guilet, his violin poised, gave a slight nod — and the tribute to the beloved maestro began.

As the men played, they began to relax and the guiding genius of Toscanini once again seemed at hand. What the skeptical audience heard was the rebirth of a great orchestra, an overpowering concert of defiance by 92 men who had refused to quit. Critics called the performance "one of the most exciting events in New York's musical history."

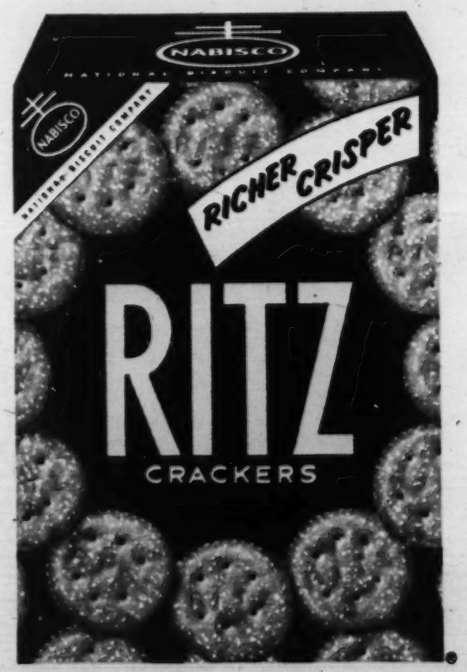

While the future of the Symphony of the Air is still unknown, the men face it with confidence and determination. Donations, ranging from dimes to a $5,000 gift from David Sarnoff (chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America, NBC's parent organization), have provided more than $50,000, and they have contracted for $500,000 worth of employment. Moreover, the world's finest artists have joined in the battle by working with the orchestra.

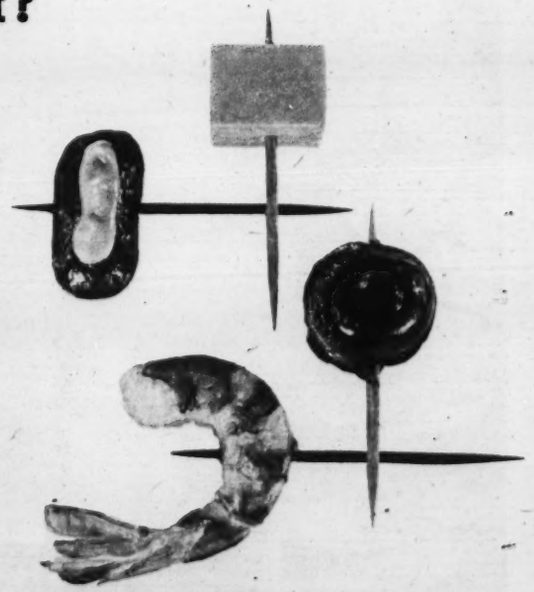

But the musicians are proudest of the fact that this year the Symphony of the Air was selected by the International Exchange Program of the American National Theater and Academy to represent America in a two-month tour of Asia — the first time a major orchestra has toured the Orient. The tour was a resounding success. And the participants feel it was the final recognition that Toscanini's orchestra will live on. ■

What is middle age?

A Chicago scientist asks—and provides surprising answers to—a question about the least understood period in our lives

PROF. SLOTKIN divides adult life into the five main "ages" listed on the board above.

CHICAGO.

Is there a "middle age"?

When do we reach it? At 35? 40? 45?

Is it the same age for everybody?

What is the "middle-aged feeling" like?

How do most people react to it?

New light may be thrown on the least understood period in life through a special study by James Slotkin, Associate Professor of Social Science at the University of Chicago here.

"Middle-aged" (42) himself, he recently began asking people the questions above — and found that, with the exception of popular descriptions and scientific papers on "middle age problems," there is little known about the period itself.

Borrowing methods he had used as an anthropologist to study the Menominee Indians of Wisconsin, Slotkin tackled the basic idea of defining middle age. His conclusion: except in terms of life span, there probably is no such thing.

Since Shakespeare's time, most people have divided man's social life cycle (in most societies) into seven "ages": birth, infancy, childhood, adolescence, marriage, parenthood and old age. Middle age, as such, is missing.

Turning for a clue to the Menominee Indians, Slotkin noted that they have no such thing as a "middle age problem." This traces to one fact: among the Menominees, the lifetime goal is growing old and having grandchildren.

Our Own 'Carrot'

"Every society," Slotkin points out, "has some sort of carrot to dangle before you as a lifetime goal. This is 'normal.' Psychopaths don't have a lifetime goal. Among the Menominees, you don't get the carrot until you are an old person. In our society, you can get the carrot when you are still middle-aged in point of years. Finally, it struck me that that is the key to helping us define what we mean by 'middle-aged.' Actually, what we have to do is examine ourselves in terms of striving for our goals, rather than in chronological age."

Slotkin found a yardstick in studies made in the 1930s by Viennese psychologists, who divided adult striving into five stages. As revised by him to fit competitive American society, they are:

1) The exploratory stage—between the ages of about 15 and 27, when we've finished school and are trying to decide on our lifetime goal.

2) Selective maturity — between about 28 and 42, when we decide on our goal and put all our efforts into trying to achieve it.

3) The testing stage — beginning at about 43, when we start to reflect on our lives to determine whether we have achieved our goal, and to wonder if things have turned out as we had planned.

4) The indulgent stage — beginning at about 48, when we try to concentrate on getting the maximum satisfaction and gratification out of the "prime" of life.

5) Completion — from about 65, when we look back on life, begin to live in the past and usually stop seeking a further goal.

Interviewing many "middle-aged" people in the 42-and-up brackets, Slotkin tried to fit their lives into the proper categories. He found some discrepancies. Many Americans (baseball players and movie stars, for instance) hit their peak years at an age when most people are still trying to find their goals in life. By "middle age," they are already past their prime. Others (doctors, lawyers, professors) may be just getting started when the baseball players are facing retirement and often keep going when athletes and entertainers are forgotten. Still others (artists, the self-employed) have no timetables but themselves.

Because Stage 3 has commonly been associated with middle age through books like Walter Pitkin's Life Begins at 40, Slotkin examined it minutely. "For most people," he maintains, middle age is a role. You can look at it chronologically, but what middle age means in our society is not your chronological age, but rather the time you begin thinking in terms of ending your occupational career. You have worked like a dog in the second, or selective, stage. Now you begin to think, 'Am I getting what I was looking for? Is this what I wanted?' "

To one degree or another, the individual starts evaluating his life. Broadly speaking, he will find himself falling into four categories: successful, partly successful, failure, or undecided.

"I want to stress that it's not only the objective factors that count but the subjective as well," says Slotkin. "A person who is considered successful by every standard of our society may decide that the whole thing isn't worthwhile, that the game isn't worth the candle. Or, on the other hand, he may decide that he is sitting on top of the world."

Success and Failure

According to Slotkin, only about 5 per cent of us feel that we are outright successes or failures. The rest are unable to decide.

Among the 5 per cent, only a small number are right, judged objectively. Some years ago, a top baseball player committed suicide. He was batting over .300 but, in his own mind, he was a "failure."

How do most people react? Failures, claims Slotkin, are of two main types: those who acknowledge failures and those who take a grandiose attitude towards their failure to reach the goal. "Few people," he says, "have the guts to acknowledge failure. They try to escape and 'adjust' one way or the other. It is a lot more comfortable to look for another 'life goal' — in effect, to revert back to the exploratory and selective stages of earlier life." In competitive American society, this isn't easy.

The grandiose failure, typified by a mediocre painter Slotkin interviewed, becomes embittered, has a grudge against the world — and keeps it for the rest of his life. He never develops either the courage or the ability to really examine himself. He grows older spitefully.

The successful and the partly successful make up the rest of the 5 per cent. "The successful," says Slotkin, "fall into two types: the satisfied and the dissatisfied. The satisfied success is the individual who believes that he has achieved his original goals, and that these goals are gratifying. He has gotten what he wants. It fits him to a 'T' and he enjoys it." He has no "middle age problem."

The dissatisfied success can be as puzzled as the failures. "He is the poor devil who reaches the top and finds that all is ashes in his mouth," says the Professor. "He's made a mistake in his original life goals. His dominant desires still remain ungratified." He, like the failure, can wind up with serious neuroses, go back to find another goal, or (more usually) go ahead to Stage 4 and concentrate on finding an answer in pleasure. He has found it relatively easy to pursue his life course. It is too late to change.

Ninety-five in a hundred of the estimated 25,000,000 Americans who find themselves at the chronological "middle age" of the 40s fall into Slotkin's inconclusive type. "Most Americans like these," he says, "think that they will finally get that new car, that new home, security, the chicken in every pot, success in their job or profession. They keep plugging away after the carrot.

"The inconclusive person doesn't try to evaluate what he has. If he did, he'd have to evaluate what he doesn't have. He almost always feels that he 'still has a chance' — that he'll get through his original life goals even though they somehow continue to elude him."

How an Actress Adjusted

If he becomes embittered, despairs of ever getting what he wants, desperately looks for a new start, or gives up trying, he is no longer middle-aged but actually in another "age" group.

Slotkin, who has already written a study of human adjustment (Personality Development — Harper & Bros.) thinks that someday he can complete research that will help make middle age adjustment easier for all.

Meanwhile, the best adjustment may be that of a middle-aged actress. "I wanted to be a big star," she told him, "but now I won't be. So I just want to be a darn good character actress."

"That's the only healthy adjustment," says Slotkin. "If you can't be a star, settle for a planet!" ■

HOLLYWOOD.

Anita Ekberg, whose provocative photos appear on these pages, is currently being given the Hollywood build-up by her imaginative press agent as "The New Garbo." In truth, leggy Anita and reclusive Greta have one factor in common: the geographical accident of Swedish birth. The similarity stops there.

At the moment, all of Anita's talents lie in her buxom curves, which measure 39, 22 and 37, respectively. These, more than anything else, are responsible for her mounting popularity with photographers, her present movie contract with John Wayne's independent film company, Batjac Productions, and her recent loanout to Paramount for the fitting role of a model in the forthcoming Artists and Models.

Like most glamor dolls, however, 26-year-old Anita insists she prefers drama to cheesecake.

"Because I am big beautiful girl," she modestly explains in her Swedish accent, "people think I am only pinup material. So tired I am of posing in bathing suits, I think I scream.

"Comes every day my press agent, Milton Weiss, with new idea. 'On Monday,' he says, 'you are Queen of Beaux Arts Ball. On Tuesday you are Miss Mermaid of 1955.' On Wednesday I am Girl Most Likely.

" 'Milton,' I say, 'I am sick of being Girl Most Likely. I want to act.' "

John Wayne, who signed Anita at $100 a week last year, recently gave her a non-glamorous bit part in Blood Alley, a story of refugees escaping from Red China to Hong Kong. In this film Anita, clad in a burlap bag, plays a bedraggled, papoose-carrying refugee.

"This part," she claims, "will prove that I am no playgirl, but a serious actress who can act."

Press agent Weiss recently told newsmen: "This girl's development has been sensational. Four years ago she came to Atlantic City as Miss Sweden. Came from Malmo, a farmer's daughter. Could hardly speak English. Today the biggest guys in the country are throwing themselves at her feet. But she's not interested in marriage. She's interested in her career. She is an actress of beauty, power, sensitivity, and rare perception. She is The New Garbo."

At this, even the confident Anita gagged slightly. "That Milton," she told me. "Every time I go to the powder room he makes it sound like Lindbergh's first flight across the Atlantic." ■

GRACE: Anita is svelte in her rehearsal costume of sweater and slacks.

ALLURE: Donald O'Connor discovers it in lunch-hour chat.

CHARM: She radiates it as Queen of the Beaux Arts Ball.

TALENT: Learning acting, she gets her first screen slap.

Efficient, dedicated, hard-working—

that's the Air Force Secretary. But let someone cross him and he becomes

THE TERRIBLE-TEMPERED MR. TALBOTT

WASHINGTON, D. C.

More than a year after it happened, Air Force officers still speak with awe about the time their civilian boss, Harold E. Talbott, almost broke up a House Appropriations Committee hearing. Unimpressed by the fact the Committee controls Air Force purse strings, Talbott became annoyed at the questioning and demanded: "What's special about this committee?"

This was merely a passing storm in the career of Air Force Secretary Talbott, Washington's most explosive official. When Talbott loses his temper — and it happens often enough that he is known around the Pentagon as "The Terrible-Tempered Mr. Talbott" — his eyes narrow to blazing slits, his voice takes off with a roar like a jet engine and he sprinkles profanity like confetti.

A few minutes of this, however, and he subsides into another person — a tall, trim, handsome gentleman who loves horses, flowers, bridge and cafe society. And, incidentally, a man who has won solid respect for his handling of the million-man Air Force, where he is responsible for every decision, every order and every action.

He Totes a Big Load

As Secretary, Talbott must chart or pass on all Air Force policy and see that it is carried out. (He gives his subordinates wide latitude, however.) He spends much of his time acting as a "front man" for the Air Force before the public and on Capitol Hill. And he represents the Air Force point of view in backstage dealings with President Eisenhower and Defense Sec. Charles E. Wilson (for both of whom he has a deep loyalty and respect).

With a tall order like that, perhaps a safety valve to let off pent-up steam is a necessity. At any rate, Air Force men take a certain perverse pride in recalling the details of Talbott's tantrums.

He is inclined to make snap decisions, throw himself headlong into projects. Often he grows impatient with his advisers, particularly his lawyers, when they try to restrain him. "You guys are too - - - - cautious," he tells them. "You're always telling me why I can't do something instead of how to do it." Sometimes, events will prove their go-slow approach the right one, and then he will sheepishly thank them for slowing him down.

Repentance likewise sets in after one of his outbursts. However, Talbott is no more likely to reform than his teen-aged son, John. Once, after a flareup between father and son that almost shook the rafters of the Talbott home (it started when John wouldn't drink his milk and his father threatened to send him to boarding school), John's mother chided the boy about his temper. "But, Mother," John protested, "I like to lose my temper."

So, his subordinates suspect, does the Secretary. Once, during a Talbott dressing-down, a general rebelled and lit right back into him. Talbott was genuinely shocked. "What are you so mad about?" he asked in a hurt voice. "Can't I lose my temper without your getting stiff-legged about it?"

About a year ago, he tried to put a governor on his language by fining himself $5 a cuss word and dividing the proceeds among his secretaries. But the project cost so much he abandoned it after a few days.

The Talbott staff is devoted to him in spite of these sporadic explosions. He takes a real interest in them, bringing the girls useful souvenirs from his overseas trips. It was characteristic of him to add to a busy schedule and act as best man for his mother's Negro chauffeur, Harvey Howe, in Dayton, Ohio, last year.

Talbott stands up for each man in the Air Force the same way—causing one airman to remark that "the Secretary's not over us, he's with us." For instance, most Americans recall the case of Lt. Milo Radulovich, whose commission was to be revoked last year because close relatives allegedly had Red ties. It was Talbott who, defying security officers, reinstated Radulovich.

ANNUAL VISIT to Greenland's Thule air base finds Secretary Talbott guffawing at Bob Hope jokes during New Year's Eve show for troops. With him is Mrs. Talbott.

by JACK ANDERSON and FRED BLUMENTHAL
PARADE WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENTS

When Talbott visited the Limestone, Me., air base, he was shocked to find the commander of a $250 million installation living in a small, flat-roofed house with no garage and no storage space. The Secretary roared, "How in the devil can we expect to keep good men if we don't give them a decent place to live?" On his return to Washington, Talbott saw to it that the C.O. got a garage with storage space.

Similarly, when his generals recommended only a 3 per cent pay raise for themselves, he snapped, "That's the trouble with you men. You're being too modest." He doubled their recommendation and it was approved. Recently, he sent a husband-and-wife team around the world to give him a first-hand report on living conditions and to collect gripes of servicemen and their wives. He himself has flown more than 300,000 miles visiting the world-wide posts under his command. In Alaska, he wouldn't leave until he had checked each remote radar station.

He has a soft spot particularly for the 4,500 men (the only women there are five nurses) at the cold, bleak Thule air base, on the edge of the Greenland ice cap 900 miles from the North Pole. He and Mrs. Talbott make a point of spending each New Year's Eve there.

Secretary, Meet Queen

Last year, they spent hours at Thule taking names and addresses of wives, mothers and sweethearts. On their return they phoned each one. At first Talbott would open the conversation: "Hello, Mrs. Jones. This is Harold Talbott speaking. I'm the Secretary of the Air Force, and I've just seen your husband up in Greenland." Too often, this was greeted with a wisecrack like, "You're the Secretary of the Air Force? Well, I'm the Queen of England."

Talbott then revised his opener: "Hello, Mrs. Jones. I'm a civilian working for the Air Force. I've just seen your husband at Thule and have a message for you." Many of the wives still don't know what job that nice civilian held.

Harold Talbott comes by his love for aviation naturally. He grew up in Dayton, home town of the Wright brothers, and often would take his bicycle to their shop for repair. He was the passenger on Orville Wright's last flight as a pilot. He wasn't noted for especially high grades in school. A handsome boy, he started early as a ladies' man — coached, no doubt, by his seven sisters. His mother kept a diary chronicling the stages of his growing up, and on his 17th birthday she wrote: "There is little hope for Harold's future. All he thinks of is girls, girls, girls!"

Incidentally, Washington says he retains his eye for the ladies. It's agreed that his office has the best-looking secretaries in the Pentagon. And he is solicitous about the welfare of Air Force wives.

After attending Yale, Talbott worked two years to pay off a college debt, then entered the aviation business. In 1916, his father helped Orville Wright organize his business into the Dayton-Wright Co. and began manufacturing planes. Harold became president with Orville Wright as vice-president and chief engineer. When General Motors took over the firm, Talbott remained as its head. Later, he moved to New York to become a director of Chrysler Corp., and also served as board chairman of North American Aviation Co. He was one of the original organizers of the parent companies of both United Airlines and TWA.

In both world wars he was involved in aviation. During World War I he served as a major in the Air Service of the Signal Corps. For the first year of World War II, he directed aircraft production for the War Production Board — a job he left because, in his own words, of "a row with Donald Nelson," the boss.

One of the Republican's big money raisers in the 1952 campaign, Talbott was one of the backstage committee who recommended officials for the new administration. He came up with two names for Air Force Secretary, but Attorney General Herbert Brownell and Gen. Lucius Clay disregarded his recommendations and insisted Talbott, himself, was the man for the job. He said he wanted to be sure he was the President's and Secretary Wilson's first choice. Reassured, he accepted and moved his family from New York to Washington. The family now consists of his slim, energetic wife, Peggy, and their twin sons, Harold and John. Two daughters are married and the Talbotts have three granddaughters.

In Washington, the Secretary's day begins at 7 a.m. There's often a "business breakfast" at his home at 7:30, and he arrives at his desk at 8:10. Luncheon is nearly always served in the dining room adjoining his office. Evenings are often given over to social life, which Talbott relishes.

An ace polo player in his youth, Talbott still follows the horse world avidly. Recently he skipped a "command" reception at the White House to keep a prior commitment to address the Thoroughbred Racing Association. He's also a good shot, but only a fair golfer.

A staunch Republican (he was GOP national finance chairman in 1948-50), Talbott reserves the right to like Democrats and dislike Republicans as he pleases. One of his office walls has a picture of President Eisenhower, in the approved tradition. But in place of the usual accompanying portrait of Secretary Wilson, the wall sports one of his old friend Robert Lovett, Defense Secretary under President Truman.

He Tells Off Congressmen

Talbott has no use for the Washington custom of kowtowing to congressmen (although he has deep respect for their decisions). For example, he once told a certain state's congressional delegation he "would never build a base in your God-forsaken country."

Yet Talbott gets along well on Capitol Hill. Most congressmen like his refreshing frankness and honesty. Beneath his gruff exterior, they have found, is a sincere — even soft — heart. Although he describes himself as a "black Republican," he told a Little Rock, Ark., Chamber of Commerce group of his admiration and respect for their Democratic Sen. John McClellan, adding that it was their duty to return him to Washington.

To Talbott, his greatest achievements have been 1) putting the Air Force on a more businesslike basis and 2) establishing the new Air Force Academy. The Air Force, however, admires him for his deep appreciation of the individual airman and officer — and for his successful fight to raise pay and improve housing and living conditions.

Why has "The Terrible-Tempered Mr. Talbott" such a terrible temper? So long as he keeps his present job, at least, the answer lies in his own words: "When I leave the Air Force, I want it to be bigger and better than when I came in. I want it to be the most efficient force in the world." With that goal in mind, no amount of verbal fireworks would seem to be too great. ■

It's that DIAL feeling – you never worry about odor!

More than a feeling, it's a fact: with Dial you never worry about odor. You see, normal perspiration has no odor until skin bacteria attack it. Ordinary soaps can't remove bacteria effectively. But Dial does! It's the one leading soap with AT-7 (Hexachlorophene). There's nothing else as good. And it clings to your skin, so it protects you all day—and for several days if need be. That's why Dial stops odor before it starts.

Aren't you glad you use Dial Soap?

Tips on TIPPING

Something we all should know is whom to tip, when and how much. Here are some letters on the subject.

Q. Please give the current rate of tipping in first-class New York hotels and night clubs.—H. K., Peoria, Ill.

A. If the doorman of a fashionable hotel or restaurant gets you a cab, tip him 10 to 50 cents, depending on the difficulty he encounters. The standard tip for a bellhop is 25 cents for each trip he makes with luggage. If much service is expected of the same bellhop, it is easier to give him 25 to 50 cents when he first appears than to give him 10 cents each time he makes the trip. A waiter receives 15 to 20 per cent of the bill. You are not obligated to leave more than a dime on a checkroom counter to retrieve a hat, even in New York.

Q. We are going to vacation at a lodge at a rate of $10 per day per person, including meals. What is the correct amount to give the waitress assigned to us and the bus-boys? Should we leave a tip for the chambermaid? — E. Z., Wichita, Kan.

A. Ten dollars per couple per week for the waitress. Bus-boys need not be tipped. Your chambermaid should receive two dollars a week.

Q. A woman friend and I went to a resort hotel and occupied a room for two. Should we have left separate tips? Do you tip if the service is poor? How much should we have tipped the head-waitress?—Mrs. R.J., Williston Pk., N.Y.

A. You tip as a couple would. I do not believe in tipping even the expected amount when service is bad. A head-waitress in a hotel is not usually tipped — unless she has been particularly considerate.

Q. For what services do you tip a filling-station attendant?—S.W., Locust Valley, N. Y.

A. A tip of 25 cents should be given for services such as checking the oil, water, battery, tires and for washing the windows. A regular customer should give attendants a quarter from time to time. Filling-station owners should not expect a tip for any of these services.

Fall furniture forecast

ITALIAN PROVINCIAL mahogany chest is oversized to allow storage space. Finish is canyon gray.

What's new in furniture? Answer: Easy-to-live-with designs to meet the needs of modern American homes. Emphasis on conservative, comfortable styling is apparent in the examples shown here from collections soon to be seen in stores.

A yardstick tells part of the story. Much of the new furniture is scaled for comfort and convenience. Upholstered pieces, for example, are tailored in several lengths to fit varying room dimensions. Some sofas are finished to serve as free-standing room dividers. Chests and tables heed the cry for more storage space by stretching to include another bank of drawers.

To free floor space for furniture, more accessories, such as magazine racks and cabinets, hang on the wall. Into many a light-looking desk is tucked a standard-sized file drawer for household records.

Finely detailed hardware points up the rich, hand-rubbed finishes on wood. And luxurious fabrics and unusual color combinations help beautify chairs and couches.

THE AMERICAN GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY invites you to discover

A New Way for You and Your Children to Learn About

Our Wonderful World

Your children will be greatly enriched in mind and spirit by this new educational hobby the entire family can share

ITALY — Home of the famous, much-visited Leaning Tower of Pisa, where the astronomer Galileo is said to have tested the speed of falling objects.

EGYPT — Arabs in prayer turning toward Mecca before the Great Sphinx, which guards entrance to Nile Valley.

SIAM (Thailand) — Image of "Emerald Buddha," festooned with golden ornaments and jewels, stands in chapel of Bangkok's White Marble Temple.

HERE is an exciting way for young and old alike to become intimately acquainted with the many lands and peoples of OUR WONDERFUL WORLD. This revolutionary new program in home education, sponsored by THE AMERICAN GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY, is like a "guided tour" around the world, conducted by outstanding authorities on each region's history — geography — trade — customs — landmarks — native crafts — flags, stamps, currency — and many other subjects.

The FREE GIFT described below (value, $1.00) will introduce you to this wonderful new program without cost or obligation.

How Your Family "Visits" a Different Land Each Month

Each month you receive a set of full-color photographic prints and a highly informative, illustrated guidebook-album with spaces for mounting the color prints. By means of these prints and albums, prepared under the guidance of American Geographical Society experts, you and your family "visit" a different country every month. You explore the country's famous landmarks and natural wonders. You go sight-seeing in the strange cities. In quaint little villages you stop to observe native costumes, customs, and crafts. An expert on the history of the region spins stories of the great battles, the national heroes, the ancient legends. You pore over maps showing the principal cities, rivers, mountains. You actually learn MORE than many casual tourists do!

Helps Children in School — and in Later Life, too

In this delightful, "painless" way, your youngsters will absorb and retain far more essential knowledge about their world than they probably ever would from dry-as-dust textbooks. Each picture will receive individual, careful attention as it is lovingly mounted in the album. And this, in turn, will kindle the youngster's curiosity and make him eager to read the fascinating, simply-written text. Thus, without any coaxing or enforced "homework," your child can accumulate a distinctly above-average store of information about the world we live in. This knowledge will give him a tremendous advantage over others — not only in many different school subjects, but also in later life, as he grows up in a world where other countries are only a few hours away by air.

Best of all, here is an educational hobby that will draw the whole family together — for there's something in it for everybody. Grade school children will enjoy the pictures and captions; yet high school students will find much of the text a valuable supplement to their studies in history, geography, social science, etc. And Mom and Dad will find it an enjoyable way of planning real trips—or re-living memorable journeys already taken.

Mail Coupon — Without Money — for FREE Set

To acquaint yourself with this new project, send for the free set of full-color prints and guidebook-album described below. There is absolutely no cost involved, and no obligation to continue receiving monthly sets — this is merely a free "demonstration" set. If, however, you are delighted with your free set and do wish to continue on your "trip around the world," you pay only $1 for each month's "tour" thereafter. And you may cancel at any time.

But do mail the coupon right away. The demand for free sets may exceed original expectations; and requests will be filled on a first-come first-served basis.
